

Third edition

Advanced English Practice

B. D. Graver

Advanced English Practice Third edition

Advanced English Practice provides a wide choice of language practice material for students preparing for the Cambridge Proficiency examination, or working at an equivalent level in universities or language schools. Its aim is to focus on areas of English with which students are already familiar, but which may need additional practice and reinforcement.

The material is divided into four sections to develop proficiency in different aspects of the language. Two-thirds of the book is devoted to detailed grammar notes and exercises.

For this new edition the layout has been redesigned in a larger format, the text has been revised throughout, and examples and exercises have been brought up to date. In addition, some new types of exercise have been included in order to familiarize students with contemporary kinds of examination questions.

Advanced English Practice is useful for both reference and practice, and has great value to the teacher as a resource book. A key is provided at the end, making it suitable either for use in class or for self-study.

Also published by Oxford University Press

A Practical English Grammar
A. J. Thomson and A. V. Martinet

A Practical English Grammar:
Exercises 1 and 2

A. J. Thomson and A. V. Martinet

A Practical English Grammar:
Structure Drills 1 and 2
A. J. Thomson and A. V. Martinet

B. D. Graver

Advanced English Practice

Third edition

Oxford University Press

ISBN 0-19-432181-9

9 780194 321815

Oxford University Press, Walton Street, Oxford OX2 6DP

OXFORD NEW YORK
ATHENS AUCKLAND BANGKOK BOMBAY
CALCUTTA CAPE TOWN DAR ES SALAAM DELHI
FLORENCE HONG KONG ISTANBUL KARACHI
KUALA LUMPUR MADRAS MADRID MELBOURNE
MEXICO CITY NAIROBI PARIS SINGAPORE
TAIPEI TOKYO TORONTO and associated companies in BERLIN IBADAN

Oxford and Oxford English are trade marks of Oxford University Press.

ISBN 0 19 432181 9

© Oxford University Press 1963, 1971, 1986

First edition published 1963

Second edition 1971 (reprinted twelve times)

Third edition 1986

Tenth impression 1995

The author and publisher are grateful to Times
Newspapers Limited, the University of Cambridge Local Examinations Syndicate, the Consumers' Association, Chatto & Windus, Murray Pollinger and Hutchinson for permission to reproduce short extracts which appear in the exercises in Section One.

No unauthorized photocopying

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, without the prior written permission of Oxford University Press.

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form of binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

Photoset in Ehrhardt by Rowland Phototypesetting Ltd
Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk

Printed in Hong Kong

Contents

Introduction

12

Section one

The fundamentals of grammar

General review of tenses and verb forms

15

Modal auxiliary verbs

17

Introduction

17

Ability or potential: can, could, be able to 21

4 Ability or potential in past time: could, could have

5 be able to

6 Conditional could, would be able to

6 could, could have

7 would be able, would have been able

24

8 General characteristics: can, could

24

Possibility: can, could, may, might 25

9 Present or future possibility: may, might, could

26

10 Past possibility: may have, might have, could have (Situations)

27

Permission: can, could, may, might 28

11 can, could, may, might in reported speech

28

Other uses of may and might

29

12 Concessive may

29

13 might in requests and suggestions

29

14 Expectation or probability: should, ought to 30

15 Inference and logical conclusion: must, can't (Situations)

31

16 Belief and conjecture: will, would

32

17 Characteristic behaviour: will, would

32

18 Inherent capacity: will, would (Situations)

34

Prediction: shall, will	34
19 shall after I, we (reported > direct speech)	37
20 Review: various uses of will	38
Advice and recommendation: shall, should, ought to, had better	38
21 should, ought to, had better (Situations)	39
Other uses of should	40
22 should in noun clauses after suggest, recommend , etc.	40
23 should in adverbial clauses of purpose	41
24 should in noun clauses after subject + to be + adjective	42
Obligation and necessity: must, mustn't, have (got) to	42
25 must, mustn't, have (got) to	45
26 must, mustn't, have (got) to in reported speech	46
Absence of obligation or necessity: needn't, not need to, not have to	46
27 needn't, not need to, not have to	48
28 needn't, not need to, not have to in reported speech	49
Introduction to the verb forms of English	50
The 'simple' verb forms	51
Present simple	51
29 Present simple: states	52
30 Present simple in explanations	52
31 Present simple for daily habits	53
32 Present simple with 'frequency' adverbs (Situations)	53
33-34 Composition topics	54
35-36 Present simple in demonstrations	55
37 Present simple in headlines	56
Past simple	56
38 Stative verbs: present simple and past simple	57
39 Past simple ('narrative') for past events	57
40 Past events (Situations)	58
41-42 Composition topics	58
Future actions or events	59
43 Present simple with adverbs having future time reference	59
44 Present simple in adverbial clauses of time referring to future	60
A note on the 'future'	61

The 'progressive' verb forms

Present progressive	62
45-46 Present progressive	62
Past progressive	63
47 Past simple and past progressive	64
48 Present and past, simple and progressive	65
49 Present simple and progressive, simple and progressive infinitive, present participle	65
Future actions or events	66
50 Progressive forms with adverbs referring to future time (plans and arrangements)	67
51 Future progressive	68
51 Simple and progressive infinitive after shall, will, may , etc.	69
Perfect progressive	69
52 Present and past perfect progressive	70
Verbs not normally used in progressive forms	71
53 Present simple (Situations)	72
54 States and events: present simple or progressive	72
The 'perfect' verb forms	73
Perfect forms in past, present and future time	75
55-56 Present perfect and past perfect, simple or progressive (Situations)	76
57 Present perfect and past perfect	77
58 Present progressive and present perfect	78
59 Present perfect (Situations)	78
for and since	78
60 Present perfect with since	79
61-62 for and since	80
Simple and progressive perfect forms	80
63 Present perfect simple or progressive	81
Present perfect in adverbial clauses of time referring to future	82
64 Present perfect in future time clauses	83
65 Reported speech	83
Past simple and past perfect: time distinctions	84
66-67 Past simple and past perfect	85
68 Past perfect: substituting finite for non-finite clauses	86
69 Past perfect in reported speech	87

Conditional sentences

Introduction

Type 0: cause and effect

70 Cause and effect (Situations)

Type 1: open conditions

71 Basic forms (Situations)

*Type 1: variations*72 should and will in conditional clauses73 Type 1: alternative forms

74 Review of Type 1 conditions

Type 2: tentative, hypothetical, and unreal conditions (present or future time reference)

75 Tentative suggestions and hypothetical conditions

76 Hypothetical conditions (Situations)

77 Unreal conditions (present time)

*wish, 'd rather, It's time + noun clause with past tense*78 Past tense after *wish*79 Past tense after wish, 'd rather, It's timeType 2: variations

80 Review of Type 2 conditions

Type 3: unreal conditions (past time reference)

81–83 Unreal conditions (past time)

84 Unreal conditions (past and present time)

85 Review of Type 3 conditions

86 Inversion in place of *IfConjunctions introducing conditional clauses

87–88 Conditionals: general review

89 Composition topic

Conditionals in reported speech

90 Reporting Type 1 conditions

91 Reporting Type 2 conditions

The passive voice

Introduction

92 Passive sentences without 'agents'

93 Passive sentences with and without 'agents'

94 Prepositions in passive sentences

Phrasal and prepositional verbs in the passive

95 Phrasal and prepositional verbs (Situations)

96 Active > Passive transforms

97 Passive forms of phrasal and prepositional verbs

Passive transforms of subject + verb + indirect object + direct object

98 Active > Passive transforms

99 Situations

Passive transforms of subject + verb + 'that' clause

100 Passive transforms using the infinitive

101 *have or get + noun + past participleAdvanced exercises in conversion

102 Active > Passive transforms

103 Passive > Active transforms

Relative clausesDefining relative clauses

104–105 Definitions

that, who, which in defining clauses

Omitting the relative pronoun in defining clauses

106–110 Defining clauses

Non-defining relative clauses

111–114 Non-defining clauses

115 whose in defining and non-defining clausesPrepositional relative clauses

116 Defining clauses with prepositions

117 Defining clauses with end-preposition

118 Non-defining clauses with prepositions

119 Co-ordinate relative clauses

120 Cleft sentences

121 where, when, why, as in relative clauses122–123 what in noun clausesCollective nouns as antecedents

109

109

110

110

111

111

111

112

113

114

115

115

115

116

116

117

117

118

119

122

123

125

126

128

128

129

130

131

132

134

135

Verb patterns with -ing forms, infinitives and 'that' clauses
Introduction	135
Classification	135
124-126 Gerunds after prepositions, prepositional verbs, and phrasal verbs	137
to + gerund or infinitive	139
127 to + gerund	140
128 to + gerund or infinitive	141
129 Group 1: verbs followed by the gerund	141
Verb + gerund	142
Nouns and pronouns before gerunds	143
130-131 Verb + (noun or pronoun) + gerund	144
Verbs followed by the infinitive	145
132-133 Group 2a: verbs followed by the infinitive without preceding noun	146
Subject + verb + infinitive	147
134 Composition exercise	147
135-137 Group 2b: verbs followed by a noun + infinitive	148
Subject + verb + noun + infinitive	149
138 Group 2c: verbs followed by the infinitive, with or without preceding noun	150
Subject + verb + (noun) + infinitive	151
139-142 Group 3: verbs followed by the gerund or the infinitive	152
Gerund or infinitive	154
143 Group 4: verbs followed by a noun + present participle or infinitive without to	156
Subject + verb + noun + participle or infinitive	158
144 make and let	158
145 make in the passive (Situations)	159
146 Group 5: verbs followed by a 'that' clause	159
Subject + verb + 'that' clause	160
147 Subject + verb + noun + to be	160

Participles and gerunds

Introduction	161
148-151 Non-finite clauses using participles	161
152 Participles and gerunds in non-finite clauses	163
153-154 General review: gerunds, infinitives, and participles	167
The position of adverbs	169
155-158 Inversion of subject and verb after initial negative adverbs	169
159-160 Adverb position and meaning	172
Reported speech	173
Introduction	173
161 Tense changes in reported speech	175
162 Questions in reported speech	175
163 Composition	175
164 Consumer report	176
165-171 Various reporting verbs other than say and tell	176
172 Dialogue: reported > direct speech	178
173-174 Reporting conversations from a particular point of view	179
175-176 Converting reports into direct speech	180

Section two

Sentence structure and synthesis

Adjectival clauses	183
177-178 Participles in non-finite adjectival clauses	183
179 Infinitives in non-finite adjectival clauses	185
180 Finite and non-finite adjectival clauses	185
181 Co-ordinate relative clauses	186
Adverbial clauses	187
Conjunctions used to introduce adverbial clauses	187
182-185 Adverbial clauses (finite and non-finite)	188
therefore, nevertheless, however	190
186-187 Adverbial clauses of reason or concession	191
188-193 Adverbial clauses (finite or non-finite)	192

Introduction

This revised edition of Advanced English Practice aims, like earlier editions, to provide a variety of language material for foreign students at advanced level, either preparing for the Cambridge Proficiency Certificate, or working at equivalent levels in universities and colleges.

While it is assumed that students will already have completed a course of basic instruction up to Cambridge First Certificate level, the book provides ample material for revision. It takes a fresh look at features of the language that students will be familiar with, while at the same time examining and practising them in greater depth through the medium of unsimplified examples mostly drawn from or based on authentic sources.

The main aim of the revision has been to provide a completely new design and layout, so that teachers and students can identify and find what they need quickly and easily. At the same time, examples and exercises throughout have been updated in line with topics of current interest. Some new types of exercise have also been added, both for the sake of variety and also to familiarize students with examination-type questions.

The book is designed for use either in conjunction with other course material, or on its own for intensive work specifically on grammar, vocabulary and composition. It can also be used by the student working independently. It is for the teacher or student to select the exercises that meet his current needs. In sections one and three it is unnecessary to work systematically through any given set of exercises unless you choose to. Section two, however, is best used systematically throughout.

Section one

This section is liberally provided with notes, and is designed to serve as a reference book as well as a source of practice material. The grammar notes are mainly intended to help the student who is working alone, and they provide a detailed discussion and description of the language under review. The notes aim to go beyond simply stating facts—it is hoped that they will also encourage insight. It is advisable that the teacher also should look at them before introducing the exercises, since these follow closely the approach adopted in the notes.

Whenever dealing with a structure characteristic of spoken English, the teacher should devise an oral presentation of his own that is relevant in situational and functional terms. Some exercises are presented in a question-and-answer form, and tend themselves to pair or group work. These carry the heading Situations, and it is left open to the teacher to exploit them in a way that best matches the needs and possibilities of his teaching situation.

It is also for the teacher to decide whether, or to what extent, his students need the explicit understanding implied in the notes. Explanation and discussion of the language have their place with some groups of advanced students: they can be an aid to motivation for those who like to use their capacity for theoretical understanding, and it reassures some students if they can grasp a linguistic feature intellectually. The notes try to deal with some difficult theoretical problems, minor as well as major ones, and attempt to answer some of the awkward questions that advanced students are apt to ask. Of course, an understanding of the mechanics of language is no substitute for active use and control of the language itself.

Students at advanced level should, in any case, be encouraged to develop a healthy scepticism of 'rules' until they have had an opportunity to measure them against the facts of English as they find it. They should be encouraged to keep a record of examples they find in the course of their readings, or they can be asked to identify specific features in a text currently being studied. Provided the teacher gives the necessary framework for investigation, students can be asked to examine modern written English of various registers and styles, with a view to finding out, say, when and where the passive is used and whether or not the 'agent' is expressed; or how relative clauses are used, when pronouns are expressed and when omitted, etc. Given the necessary help, students can discover and build up their own grammar of English, in however limited a way.

Section two

The relevant notes for this section are in the Appendix Notes on Clauses. Much of the material has been anticipated in the previous section, but the emphasis in section two is on the functional relationship between the parts of sentences, rather than on individual items within sentences. The material should be used systematically, and work on this part of the book is probably best postponed until much of section one has been completed.

Section three

The aim of this section is to develop and increase the student's awareness, as well as his stock, of vocabulary. Ideally, some of the exercises should provide practice in recognition. Many will be found more effective if they are first given as homework and then discussed in class. Some may be used to form the basis of regular sessions in class in the use of a monolingual English dictionary. Others will be found suitable for oral practice.

Students should be encouraged to read English newspapers and to listen to the radio or to watch television as an adjunct to the work they do in school, and wherever possible regular class sessions should be set aside each week for these activities. This is particularly valuable for students studying outside Britain, since they lack the advantage of an English environment as an aid to their studies. It will also be found especially useful by the foreign teacher of English, who can in this way broaden the scope of lessons and introduce students to more colloquial forms of the language. There is now a wealth of material on tape for listening practice, and the amount of video material available is steadily increasing.

Section four

It is, perhaps, through composition work that teachers can best view the overall level a student has attained in writing skills at any given stage in his language learning. While it has been left to the teacher to instruct students in essay-writing techniques, some exercises leading up to the full-scale essay are included at the beginning of this section. Many students find composition work unfamiliar or difficult, and the earlier exercises should help, partly in that they are limited in scope, and partly in that they demand a simple descriptive technique.

The exercises in arguments 'for' and 'against' should provide a link between the simple descriptive paragraphs and the full-scale essay. Class discussion can do much, under the guidance of the teacher, to stimulate a wider view of the topics under review. The first set of composition subjects consists of those making fewer demands on the students in regard to both subject and length. The subjects in the second set should provide the basis of composition work for students in the later part of a Proficiency course.

Select list of books

Students will find the following books useful for reference and further study. One book that all advanced students would do well to possess is a monolingual English dictionary designed for foreign students.

- HORNBY, A. S.
Oxford Advanced Learner's Dictionary of Current English
(Oxford)
- COWIE, A. P., MACKIN, R. and MCCAIG, I. R.
Oxford Dictionary of Current Idiomatic English, Vols. 1 & 2
(Oxford)
- SWAN, M.
Practical English Usage
(Oxford)
- THOMSON, A. J. and MARTINET, A. V.
A Practical English Grammar
(Oxford)
- LEECH, G. and SVARTVIK, J.
A Communicative Grammar of English
(Longman)
- QUIRK, R., GREENBAUM, S., LEECH G., and SVARTVIK, J.
A Grammar of Contemporary English
(Longman)

Section one

The fundamentals of grammar

General review of tenses and verb forms¹

- 1 Write out the sentences, using the most logical tense or form of the verbs in brackets. The words in italics should be put in their correct position in relation to the verb.
 - 1 Hello! I (try) to telephone you all week. Where you (be)?
 - 2 'I don't think we (meet) before?' 'Well, I (see) you once at a party, but we not (be) introduced then.'
 - 3 It (look) as if this light (burn) all night. I must (forget) (switch) it off before I (go) to bed last night.
 - 4 Come in now. I'm sorry (keep) you (wait) so long.
 - 5 I (buy) the book, but when I (hear) the opinion of the critics, I (change) my mind.
 - 6 At last you're here! I (wait) here for more than half an hour. I might (know) you (be) late!
 - 7 My father (work) in Canada for the last year, so by the time he (return) the month after next I not (see) him for fourteen months.
 - 8 When you (see) him again you (be struck) by the way his health (improve) since he (go) to Switzerland.
 - 9 If you (tell) me you already (buy) the book, I not (give) it to you as a birthday present, but now it (be) too late.
 - 10 I (ring) the bell once more, but as he not (answer) yet, I think he must (go) out. I not (bother) (come) all this way if I (know).
 - 11 It's just as well we (bring) a guide-book with us. If we not (have), we (be) completely lost.
 - 12 You can't (remember) (tell) him how to get here. If you (have), he (arrive) long before now.
- 2 Instructions as for 1
 - 1 By the time the firemen (arrive), the house (be) ablaze from top to bottom, but it (be) clear that if someone (give) the alarm earlier, they might (stand) a chance of (save) the building.
 - 2 I wish you (tell) me last week that you (come) to London. If I (know) in time, you not (have to) stay in a hotel.

¹ These exercises may be used as a preliminary test of the student's grasp of the language. They incorporate many points of grammar that are dealt with more fully in later exercises.

- 3 Why you not (tell) me you (can) lend me the money? I not (need) (borrow) it from the bank.
- 4 The driver said he not (can) (understand) why the car (break down) during the race. It (undergo) thorough testing before (be) entered in the competition.
- 5 It's time we (go). If we not (leave) now, we (miss) the last train.
- 6 (Be) you cut off while I (talk) to you just now? You (be)? I think something must (go) wrong with the telephone.
- 7 The manager (talk) to an important customer at the moment but he (be) free (see) you presently. (Like) you (take) a seat for a few minutes?
- 8 I know I ought (write) to you before, but I (be) so busy recently that I not (have) time for (write) letters. I (telephone) you instead, but I (forget) your number.
- 9 When I last (see) him, he (live) in London. He (tell) me then that he (think) of (emigrate) to Australia, and he may well (do) so by now.
- 10 I (be) very excited at the prospect of (go) (ski). It (be) the first time I (try). I think there's nothing like (ski) for (make) a holiday enjoyable.
- 11 I wish you (let) me (know) you not (be) able to come to dinner. I certainly not (go) to all this trouble if I (know).
- 12 He said he not (want) (see) the film as he (hear) that it (be) not as good as the critics (suggest).

3 Instructions as for 1

- 1 It's a great pity you not (come) to Brighton with us last Saturday. As you never (see) the sea before, it (be) a new experience for you.
- 2 By the time I (complete) my studies next month, I (live) in London for nearly a year. I not (think) I (stay) any longer after that.
- 3 It's odd that you (mention) his name. I just (think) about him and (wonder) what (become) of him.
- 4 I not (call) on him just yet if I (be) you, as I don't think he (get) home from work.
- 5 He said he (wish) he (be) able (see) you before he (leave). He (like) (say) goodbye personally. He (hope) you (accept) his apologies.
- 6 (Be) you sure there (be) no one in the room next door? I (can swear) I heard someone (talk) in there.
- 7 'Mr Smith not (work) here for four years. (Be) you sure you (get) the right name?' 'Quite sure. He (ring) me only yesterday, and I certainly not (come) here if he not (ask) me to.'
- 8 Not until we (arrive) at his house we (discover) that he (be) on holiday, and that we (waste) our time in (call) on him.
- 9 It not (take) very long (get) here after all. We not (need) (take) a taxi. We could (save) the money we (spend) and (have) dinner on the train.
- 10 It's high time you (make) up your mind about (choose) a career. If you not (decide) soon, you never (settle) down to anything.

- 11 The blackmailer not (realize) that the police (be informed) of his activities, and that his victim (be asked) (go on) (talk) to him while the call (be traced).
- 12 You hardly (believe) it, but that (be) the third time tonight someone (telephone) me and then (apologize) for (get) the wrong number. The next time the phone (ring) I not (answer).

Modal auxiliary verbs

Introduction

- [1] There are only twelve modal auxiliary verbs, but they are used with very great frequency and in a wide range of meanings. They express concepts or attitudes relating to recommendation, obligation, necessity, and prohibition; permission and refusal; possibility, expectation, probability and certainty; promise and intention, ability and willingness.
- [2] There are four paired forms—can, could, may, might, shall, should, will, would; and four single forms—must, ought, need, dare. There are no other forms, and all modals are therefore, to varying degrees, 'defective' verbs. The two verbs need and dare present special problems: dare can follow the grammatical patterns of either modal auxiliaries or lexical, 'regular' verbs, while need contrasts grammatically with the regular verb to need.
- [3] The grammatical (or 'formal') contrast between modals and regular verbs is perhaps best illustrated and summarized in sentences with question tags:

He	can may need dare	not	go,	can may need dare	he?
	ought		to go,	ought
He	doesn't		to go,	does	he?
	want like need dare

- The principal distinctive formal features of modal verbs are, explicitly:
- (a) negative sentences are formed by adding not after the modal verb;
 - (b) interrogative sentences are formed by inverting the subject and the modal verb;¹
 - (c) there is no -s ending in the third person singular in the present tense, as there is with regular verbs (he wants, likes, etc.);
 - (d) the modal verbs are followed by the infinitive of a verb without to (except in the case of ought).

¹ This feature is, of course, common to all auxiliary verbs.

- [4] All these features contribute to the distinction between the two grammatical patterns of dare, and between the modal verb need and the regular verb to need:

Regular

He

dares	to go.
-------	--------

He

doesn't	dare	to go
---------	------	-------

He

dare	need	not go.
------	------	---------

Does he

dare	to go?
------	--------

Dare he go?
Need he go?

Modal

He

dare	to go.
------	--------

He

doesn't	dare	to go
---------	------	-------

He

dare	need	not go.
------	------	---------

Does he

dare	to go?
------	--------

Dare he go?
Need he go?

Note that the modal verb need, and dare in its modal pattern, are used only in negative and interrogative sentences.

- [5] The modal verbs (including dare and need as modals) have no infinitive form, and no participle forms. Hence the need on occasion for a number of more or less synonymous expressions having a fuller range of forms—be able to, or have to, for example. It would not be possible to use can or must in the following:

I'd like to be able to speak English fluently. (infinitive)

No one has been able to solve the problem. (present perfect)

I'm having to read this very carefully. (present progressive)

You will have to pay extra for a single room. (infinitive without 'to')

- [6] The modal verbs are also limited in their range of time reference. When used with the 'present' infinitive of the main verb, they generally have a present or future time reference:

He

can	or	could may	or	might will	or	would shall	or	should must ought	to help you (e.g.) immediately, later

The use of the alternatives could, might, would, should, suggests a more tentative attitude on the part of the speaker. In requests, it represents what is commonly called the 'polite' form:

'Would you do me a favour?'

'Could you pass the sugar, please?'

- [7] This particular use of could, might, would, should, is consistent with their appearance in either of two forms of conditional sentences (though there may, of course, be slight differences in meaning between the two versions):

I think he could might would should help you if you tell told him your problem.

- [8] It is misleading to regard could as the equivalent in past time of can, might as the equivalent of may, etc. Of the four past tense forms (could, might, would, should), only the first three are used to refer to past time when followed by a present infinitive, and then only within a restricted range of meanings:¹

He could speak several languages by the time he was ten.

He was very independent, and would never ask for help.

Try as he might, he couldn't get the car to start.

The use of the four past tense forms is, however, automatic in the sequence of tenses in reported speech:²

'He

can	or	could
may	or	might
will	or	would
shall	or	should tell me.' = I said he could might would should tell me.

The four single forms must, ought to, dare, need, may be left unchanged in reported speech:

'He

mustn't oughtn't to daren't needn't

 tell anyone.' = I said he mustn't

oughtn't to daren't
needn't

 tell anyone.

- [9] We cannot, of course, use must, needn't or ought to with a present infinitive to refer to a time earlier than the time of speaking.³ It is impossible to say:

*I

must needn't
ought to do it yesterday.

However, in the reported speech examples given above, these verbs do not refer to a time earlier than the time of speaking. In the statement 'You mustn't tell anyone', the obligation (not to tell anyone) exists from the time when it is expressed, i.e. from now onwards. Similarly, in the report 'I said he mustn't tell anyone', the obligation (not to tell anyone) existed from the time when it was expressed, i.e. from then onwards, and not at some earlier time.

¹ See tables I and II on page 20.

² It is important to understand that the term 'past tense' is essentially only a convenient label for a particular form of a verb. Tense and time are not always synonymous terms in English, and although a past tense often refers to the chronological past, it does not necessarily do so. The past tenses of both modal and other verbs are frequently used with a present or future time reference, especially in 'tentative' or 'unreal' conditional sentences:

I could come tomorrow, if that's convenient. (future)

If you came at ten tomorrow, you'd probably find him in. (future)

If I knew how it worked, I could tell him what to do. (present)

³ Dare is perhaps unique, in that we can say:

I didn't dare (to)

or I daren't

or I dared not mention it to him yesterday.

[10] At this point, it is important to recognize a distinction between two uses of modal verbs, as illustrated in tables I and II below. In table I, the modal verbs are all used to assert various degrees of likelihood regarding the truth of the statement (It's certain, probable, possible, etc., that this is true), whereas in table II, the modal verbs are used to refer to ability, duty, willingness, permission, etc., in relation to the subject:

I He	must can't/couldn't will/would may/might could should/ought to	be there already. 	logical conclusion logical conclusion belief possibility possibility probability obligation absence of obligation
II He	must/mustn't needn't should/ought to shall will may can	go immediately.	recommendation promise willingness permission ability or permission

[11] We can extend the range of time reference of the modal verbs as used in table I and refer to past time by using the 'perfect' infinitive of the main verb, as in table Ia:

Ia He	must can't/couldn't will/would may/might could should/ought to	have been there yesterday.
-------	---	----------------------------

The use of the perfect infinitive in such cases generally refers to 'real' past: it does not usually affect the truth of the statement, and in only a limited number of contexts can it indicate 'unreal' past (i.e. contrary to past fact). Note also that it is possible to use the present tenses can, will, may, with the perfect infinitive, to refer to past time.

If we wish to refer to 'real' past time with the modal verbs as used in table II, we either use the past tense of the modal verbs, if appropriate (and if available), or we use a synonymous verb phrase (had to, didn't need to, was able to, was permitted to, etc.). If the modal verbs as used in table II are followed by a perfect infinitive, they always indicate 'unreal' past:

He	needn't should/ought to would might could	have gone yesterday.
----	--	-----------------------------

Some of the complex problems of usage and meaning are discussed and practised in the notes and exercises that follow. The modal verbs in their various meanings are assigned to use I or use II as illustrated above.

Ability or potential (II): can, could, be able to

Can is used to indicate (1) the possession of ability in general, or (2) the ability in particular circumstances, to perform the activity indicated by the main verb:

- 1 He can speak German fluently.
 2 I can (or could) give him an answer (e.g.) now, later, tomorrow.
- In sentence 1, can forms part of a statement having general current validity, whereas in 2, it refers to an ability existing in particular circumstances at the present or future time indicated. It is important to recognize this distinction between ability in general and ability in specific circumstances. It is also important to note that both sentences refer to a potential performance of the action mentioned (speaking German, giving an answer), not to an actual performance.

1a He could speak German fluently (e.g.) when he was younger.

This sentence represents the equivalent of sentence 1 in the chronological past. It refers to the possession of the ability to speak German, not to an actual performance of speaking.

2a I could have given him an answer (e.g.) yesterday.

This is the exact equivalent in past time of sentence 2, and means 'I was in a position to give him an answer' (ability in specific circumstances at a specific time). Again, it does not refer to an actual performance; indeed, it implies that I did not give him an answer. Such sentences suggest a conditional idea:

I could have given him an answer (e.g.) if he had asked me.

If we wish to refer to an actual performance, we use a form of be able to, as in sentence 2b below:

2b I was able to give him an answer (e.g.) yesterday.

3 I can see quite clearly what you are doing
 I could hear were saying.

Verbs like see, hear, understand, etc., come into a special category. The ability to see and the performance of seeing are inseparable (I can see = *I am seeing, I could see = *I was seeing)², and in this case the use of could is possible when referring to an actual performance in past time.

¹ Could functions here as the 'tentative' form of can, and may relate to a conditional idea:

I could give him an answer tomorrow e.g. if he wants (or wanted) one.

In tentative or conditional statements, could + present infinitive always refers to present or future time. See Exercise 6.

² We do not, of course, normally use these verbs in the progressive form.

The negative form couldn't necessarily indicates non-performance of an action, and may always be used to refer to past time:

- 4 He can't speak German fluently.
 4a He couldn't speak German fluently (e.g.) when I knew him.
 5 I can't give him an answer (e.g.) right now.
 5a I couldn't give him an answer (e.g.) yesterday.

In all the examples so far, we could substitute a form of be able to for can or could, but we tend to use the latter (shorter) forms where possible.

could, could have

- 4 Rewrite the sentences, using the adverbs suggested, so that they represent the equivalent situation in past time (i.e. potential, not actual, performance). Any words in italics should be omitted in your answers.

He can speak German fluently. (when he was younger)
 He could speak German fluently when he was younger.

I can give him an answer. (last week)
 I could have given him an answer last week.

- 1 He can drive a car. (when he was eighteen)
 2 I find I can understand English better than I can speak it. (when I first arrived in England)
 3 I can let you have the money tomorrow. (yesterday)
 4 You can persuade him to come, if anyone can. (last week)
 5 My daughter can play the piano beautifully. (at one time)
 6 You can see that he is bored to death. (at the party last night)
 7 I can't get into the house. (because I had forgotten my key)
 8 We can overhear every word our neighbours say. (in the hotel we stayed at) 9 The doctor can see you later today. (yesterday)
 10 (When they asked my advice) I can suggest only one way of solving the problem.
 11 I can well understand how you feel about the situation. (at the time)
 12 I can't get the letter translated immediately, but I could get it done by tomorrow morning. (by the following morning)

be able to

As we have seen, can may be used with a future time reference ('I can see you tomorrow'), but in this case the ability is more or less taken for granted now and is not really in question. In cases where ability will exist only eventually, or where it is dependent on some other event in the future, we use be able with will (if) or shall.¹

By the time he finishes his course, he'll be able to speak English well. We also use be able when we wish to indicate that an action was in fact performed in the past:

After looking at his notes again, he was able to complete the exercise. Since can and could lack infinitive and participle forms, we use be able where an infinitive or a 'perfect' form is required (be able is not used in the progressive form):

Ask that policeman over there. He should (or ought to) be able to help you. This is all the information I've been able to get so far.

- 5 Replace the words in italics with a suitable form of be able to. (NB not to be able to = to be unable to)

- 1 If we don't book seats soon, it won't be possible for us to get into the theatre.
- 2 In two months' time we shall be in a position to give you the examination results.
- 3 The main road was under repair, but it was possible for us to take an alternative route.
- 4 By pretending to be ignorant of the rules, he managed to escape being punished.
- 5 Luckily we retraced our steps and succeeded in finding our way again.
- 6 It has been impossible for me to get to the bank yet, so I haven't any money.
- 7 May I borrow this piece of material? I'd like to have the opportunity of showing it to my wife.
- 8 He took a crash course in Spanish—he wanted to be in a position to speak it when he went on business to S. America.
- 9 They bought their first house last year: previously it had been impossible for them to get a loan.
- 10 The student said there were a few questions he had found impossible to answer.

Conditional could, would be able to

When could (+ present infinitive) is used as the tentative form of can, it refers to present or future time (see footnote on page 21):

- a I could do it for you now if you like.
 b I can't do it immediately, but I could do it tomorrow morning.

¹ Compare this with the notes on must, page 43.

The reported version of sentence b is:

I told him I couldn't do it immediately, but that I could do it the following morning.

In conditional sentences, could very often represents the 'unreal' present:

If I knew how it worked, I could tell him what to do. (= but I don't know, so I can't tell him)

The equivalent form of be able in this case is would be able (not, of course, was able).

In a conditional sentence, could + perfect infinitive expresses unreal past:

If I had known how it worked, I could have told him what to do. (= but I didn't know, so I couldn't tell him)

could, could have

6 Complete the sentences, using could + present or perfect infinitive.

- 1 If the teacher spoke a little more slowly, ...
- 2 If the roads weren't so icy, ...
- 3 If you didn't live so far away, ...
- 4 ... if I weren't so busy.
- 5 If the traffic hadn't been so heavy, ...
- 6 ... if you had let me know earlier.
- 7 If we had a bit more time, ...
- 8 ... if we had had a bit more time.
- 9 If we had the right materials for the job, ...
- 10 ... if we had had the right materials for the job.

would be able, would have been able

- ### 7
- When you have checked your answers to the last exercise, rewrite your answers, replacing could by a suitable form of be able. If you wish, you can work from the answers suggested in the key.

General characteristics (II): can, could

Can and could are also used to refer to a general characteristic or quality that may show itself from time to time:

A house in London can cost a lot of money.
He could be very unpleasant when he was angry.

Neither of these sentences refers to an actual occurrence of the phenomena referred to, and be able is not used as a substitute for can or could in such sentences.

- ### 8
- Replace the words in italics, using can or could together with the words given in brackets, e.g.

Learning a foreign language isn't always easy. (sometimes difficult)

Learning a foreign language can sometimes be difficult.

- 1 She doesn't always remember everything. (quite forgetful)
- 2 Holidays abroad aren't necessarily expensive. (quite cheap)
- 3 Racial harmony isn't always easy to achieve. (difficult)
- 4 When I was at school, discipline wasn't generally lax. (very strict)
- 5 He wasn't miserable all the time. (occasionally, quite high-spirited)
- 6 September isn't by any means a bad month for taking a holiday in England. (wonderful)
- 7 Students at university don't always approve of the way their courses are run. (very critical)
- 8 One-way traffic systems aren't always as clear as they might be for a foreign driver. (very confusing)
- 9 She doesn't always look so plain. (quite pretty at times)
- 10 English cooking isn't necessarily bad. (in fact, excellent)

Possibility (I): can, could, may, might

At this point, we meet one of the features of modal verbs that often causes difficulty; many modal verbs have more than one meaning or use, and in some cases two different modal verbs have some meanings or uses in common, but are not fully interchangeable.

For practical purposes, students need learn only the more important distinctions. A fuller description may be found in the reference books listed at the beginning of this book.

1 A fuller description can/may be found in the reference books listed at the beginning of this book.

In this sentence, can and may are fully interchangeable, may being a little more formal.

2 Agreement between management and unions may be reached tomorrow.

Assuming we wish to state a possibility rather than a fact, only may is appropriate in this sentence, which means 'It is possible that agreement will be reached'. The distinction between sentences 1 and 2 may be paraphrased as:

(1) It is possible for this to be done at any time (= statement of present fact)

(2) It is possible that this will be done (= statement of future possibility)

Might represents the tentative form of may as used in sentence 2:

3a I

may
might
could

 be wrong, of course. (present)

3b The two parties

may
might
could

 reach agreement tomorrow. (future)

Could (often stressed) is quite commonly used as an alternative to tentative might, as in 3a and 3b.

Could is not used in this way, however, in affirmative negative sentences:

4a They may (or might) not reach agreement tomorrow.

4b They could not reach agreement tomorrow.

These sentences have quite different meanings, because of the way the negative particle not operates. In affirmative sentences with may or might (in the sense of possibility), not goes with the main verb:

They may/might not reach agreement tomorrow

= It is possible that they will not reach agreement.

With could, however, not goes with the modal (unless we use a very special stress and intonation pattern):

They could not reach agreement tomorrow.

= It is not possible that they will reach agreement.

In this sentence, moreover, could operates in a conditional context: 'They could not reach agreement tomorrow, (e.g.) even if they sat talking all day.'

Present or future possibility: may, might, could

9 Replace the words in italics with a clause using may, might, or could, as in sentences 3 and 4a above. (Note that all the sentences refer to present or future possibility.)

- 1 Perhaps you will find you have made a mistake.
- 2 It is just conceivable that we shall get an answer tomorrow.
- 3 Accept his offer now. It is just possible that he will change his mind later.
- 4 Owing to the strike, trains will possibly be subject to delays.
- 5 It is possible that parents will find that they cannot understand the way their children are now being taught.
- 6 We shall possibly find we can't get accommodation, as we haven't booked rooms.
- 7 Ask your bank manager. He will perhaps be able to advise you better than I can.
- 8 Let's not wait any longer. It's possible that he won't turn up at all.
- 9 It is not impossible that the Government's policy will prove to be little short of disastrous.

10 It is quite possible that getting the two sides to agree will not be as easy as some people imagine.

Past possibility: may have, might have, could have

In the last exercise, might and could represented the tentative form corresponding to may. They did not refer to past time, but to present or future. To refer to past time, we use may, might, or could with a perfect infinitive:

No statement was issued after yesterday's talks, but it is thought that the two parties may have reached agreement.

(= It is possible that they reached agreement)

Might and could suggest that the possibility is a little more remote:

The two parties might/could have reached agreement.

This sentence, however, is potentially ambiguous, and only the context or situation will make clear which of the following meanings is intended:

It is just possible that the two parties reached agreement. (but we don't actually know whether they did or not) or, in a conditional context:

The two parties might/could have reached agreement (e.g.) if they had been prepared to be more flexible. (but we know they didn't in fact reach agreement)

Situations

10 Respond to the statements or questions with a sentence suggesting a possible explanation, using may, might, or could + the perfect infinitive of the verbs given, e.g.

Why isn't he here? (may, miss)

He may have missed the train.

- 1 No one is waiting at the bus stop. (may, miss)
- 2 He didn't come to the party last night. (might, or could + the perfect infinitive of the verbs given, e.g.)
- 3 No one has answered the door. (might, go out)
- 4 How on earth did the thief get in? (could, break)
- 5 Why didn't the teacher explain? (may, not know)
- 6 How did they know about our plans? (could, guess)
- 7 He didn't seem surprised when I told him. (may, already know)
- 8 They should have been here long before now. (may, lose)
- 9 I haven't seen my neighbours for over a week. (may, go)
- 10 Why hasn't she written to me? (could, forget)
- 11 I can't understand why he didn't look me up while he was down here. (may, not have)
- 12 It's strange that he hasn't said any more about his plans to emigrate. (might, change)

Permission (II): can, could, may, might Giving permission, we use can or may, though the latter is generally considered more formal:

- 1 You can/may speak to the patient for just a few minutes (e.g.) now, later, tomorrow.
- Asking for permission, we use can or may; asking tentatively ('politely'), we use could or might:

- | | |
|---|---|
| 2 | Can/May I speak to you for a moment? |
| | Could/Might |

In the reported version of sentence 1, we use could or might:

- 3 The nurse said we could/might speak to the patient for just a few minutes.

We do not, however, use could or might + present infinitive to refer to permission given in past time. We are obliged to use a paraphrase:

- 4 We had (or were given) permission to speak to the patient.

Since we were given permission, we presumably acted on it and spoke to the patient. Could and might + perfect infinitive suggest that permission existed but wasn't acted on, perhaps because of ignorance on the part of the subject:

- 5 You could/might have come yesterday (e.g.) if you had wanted to.

can, could, may, might* in reported speech*11 Rewrite the statements and questions in reported speech.

- 1 'You may leave work early this evening if you want to,' the manager told me.
- 2 'You can put off making a decision for a week, but no longer,' his interviewer told him.
- 3 'Could I see your passports, please?' the Customs officer asked.
- 4 'May I ask you a rather personal question?' the teacher asked the student.
- 5 'You can borrow my notes provided you take care of them,' I told my friend.
- 6 'Might I see that photograph you're holding?' the police inspector asked his colleague.
- 7 'Cars may be parked at the rear of the building,' the notice stated.
- 8 'Might I interrupt you for a moment?' the chairman asked the speaker politely.
- 9 'May I join you?' he asked his friend.
- 10 'Visitors may not take photographs inside the building,' the notice stated.

Other uses of may and *mightConcessive *may

May is often used in clauses with a concessive meaning (I):

- Your job may be very demanding, but at least it isn't boring.
= Although (I am prepared to admit that) your job is very demanding, at least it isn't boring.

May + perfect infinitive is used for referring to past time:

- The work may have been difficult, but at least it was interesting.

12 Rewrite the sentences, using may as in the examples above.

- 1 Although the restaurant is expensive, the cuisine is excellent.
- 2 Although the method is crude, it's certainly effective.
- 3 Although he is badly paid, his work is very rewarding.
- 4 Although the book is long, you could hardly call it boring.
- 5 Although he is old, he isn't by any means senile.
- 6 Although the climb was exhausting, the view from the top made it well worth while.
- 7 Although I was rude to him, I feel he had given me every justification.
- 8 Although he acted unwisely, he was at least trying to do something constructive.
- 9 Although his work has improved, it still isn't good enough.
- 10 Although old-age pensions have risen considerably, they haven't kept pace with the cost of living.

might* in requests and suggestions

Might is sometimes used as a tentative way of making a request, suggestion or recommendation (II):

- You might send me a postcard while you're on holiday.

In some contexts, might suggests sarcasm or annoyance on the part of the speaker:

- You might look where you're going!
You might have told me you weren't coming!

13 Rewrite the sentences, using might as in the above examples, and beginning with the word in italics.

- 1 Perhaps you would let me know tomorrow.
- 2 I wish he would be a little more tactful!
- 3 I think perhaps you should ask him if it is convenient before you call on him.

- 4 Perhaps you would post this letter for me while you're out shopping.
- 5 I'm annoyed that you didn't warn me that the car was nearly out of petrol.
- 6 I think you should at least have apologized for what you said.
- 7 I'm irritated that he didn't try to look at the problem from my point of view.
- 8 I'm annoyed that she doesn't keep her room reasonably tidy.

Expectation or probability (D): should, ought to Should and ought to are often used to indicate what is regarded as probable or what may reasonably be expected.

The introduction of new machinery should contribute greatly to better profits next year.

Should and ought to + perfect infinitive refer to expectations in past time, and may indicate that expectations were not realized or fulfilled:

He should have passed the examination easily.

This sentence will yield two interpretations:

Perhaps he has passed—this, at least, is what I expected. (said, probably, before the examination results are known) or:

He didn't pass—this is not what I expected (said, probably, after the results are known)

- 14 Rewrite the sentences, using should or ought to as in the examples above.

- 1 The Conservatives are expected to win the next election.
- 2 There will probably be a lot of people at the meeting.
- 3 The weather forecast says it will probably be fine tomorrow.
- 4 Our visitors were expected to arrive long before now.
- 5 It probably won't be too difficult to get over the problem.
- 6 The meeting was expected to have finished by now.
- 7 The organizers of the games will probably be meeting tomorrow to try to resolve any outstanding problems.
- 8 We didn't expect that it would take so long to get there. (It . . .)
- 9 The new regulations probably won't affect foreigners already living in this country.
- 10 We expect to be able to move into our new house at the end of the month.

Inference and logical conclusion (I): must, can't

We use must to assert what we infer or conclude to be the most likely interpretation of a situation or events:

He must be at least sixty.

We don't know for a fact that this is true, but taking everything into account, we think that it is almost certainly so. The opposite of must in this sense is can't:

John: He must be at least sixty.

Peter: Oh no! He can't be anything like as old as that.

John is almost certain that 'He' is sixty, and Peter is equally certain that 'He' is not. In reported speech, this dialogue becomes:

John said he must be at least sixty, but Peter thought he couldn't be anything like as old as that.

To refer to past time, we use must and can't (or couldn't) with the perfect infinitive:

It must have been a great shock to him. (It was a great shock, I feel sure.)

You can't (or couldn't) have understood what he said. (It seems clear that you didn't understand.)

Situations

- 15 Complete the responses to the statements, using must or can't, to suggest what seems to be the most likely explanation.

- 1 His fiancée writes to him every day. She must . . .
- 2 I don't seem to have my key with me. I must have . . .
- 3 He drives a Rolls-Royce and his wife a Mercedes. They must . . .
- 4 No one thought he would be offered the job, but he was. The person who interviewed him must have . . .
- 5 He has no idea what the book is about. He can't have . . .
- 6 He talks about going to the moon next year. He must . . .
- 7 She didn't reply to his letter. She can't have . . .
- 8 He wears glasses all the time. His eyesight can't . . .
- 9 They haven't been on speaking terms recently. They must have . . .
- 10 He said he would ring, but he hasn't. He must have . . .
- 11 The last bus has already gone. It must . . . than I thought.
- 12 I'm amazed that she married him so soon. She can't have . . .

Belief and conjecture (I): will, would

Will and would are used to express what we believe or guess to be true. Although they lack the assertive force of must and can't (in the sense of inference or logical conclusion), they do not necessarily indicate any less certainty on the part of the speaker. Indeed, the truth of what is asserted is more or less taken for granted.

Used with the present infinitive, will and would refer to present time:

You will already be familiar with this subject.

This is not a statement relating to future time, but means 'You are, I feel sure, already familiar with this subject.'

Would is used as the tentative form of will, and is more commonly used than will in questions (which necessarily indicate some lack of certainty):

He wouldn't be a friend of yours, I suppose?

Would your name be Smith, by any chance?

To refer to past time, we use will and would with the perfect infinitive:

John: I met a charming girl at your party last night.

Peter: Ah, yes! That will/would have been my cousin Sarah.

16 Rewrite the sentences, using will or would with the appropriate infinitive form, and omitting any words in brackets.

- 1 This is (probably) what we're looking for.
- 2 Ah! It's half-past eight. That is the postman at the door (I should think).
- 3 You appreciate (I am sure) that this puts me in a very difficult position.
- 4 As you have no doubt heard, he's getting married soon.
- 5 You (probably) haven't seen this morning's headlines, I suppose?
- 6 I met Mr Jones at the interview. He was the manager's personal assistant, I assume.
- 7 You (almost certainly) don't know my name, of course, but I was a friend of your father's.
- 8 You haven't (by any chance) seen my gloves anywhere, I suppose?
- 9 Don't call on them just now. The family (almost certainly) haven't finished their evening meal yet.
- 10 Unless you explained it very carefully, he (almost certainly) didn't understand properly.

Characteristic behaviour (II): will, would

Will may be used to refer to a characteristic or persistent pattern of behaviour or of events:

- 1 When he has a problem to solve, he will work at it until he finds an answer.

This isn't a prediction about a future event, but a statement having general current validity. Would is used to refer to a similar situation in past time:

- 2 When he had a problem to solve, he would work at it until he found an answer.

In these sentences, we could use the simple present tense instead of will and the simple past tense (or used to) instead of would, with little change except for a loss of emphasis:

- 1a When he has a problem to solve, he works at it until he finds an answer.

- 2a When he had a problem to solve, he worked (or used to work¹) at it until he found an answer.

If will and would are stressed, it indicates that the speaker is annoyed by a persistent pattern of behaviour:

- 3 (The one thing I dislike about him is that) he will borrow my things without asking.

- 4 (The one thing I disliked about him was that) he would borrow my things without asking.

In these sentences, we can substitute the simple present or past for will or would only if we express the clauses in brackets, but such a substitution weakens the force of the original.

17 Replace the words in italics by will or would + present infinitive. If the statements appear to indicate the speaker's annoyance, underline the modal verb to indicate that it is stressed.

- 1 My children love watching television. They sit for hours without saying a word.
- 2 He's very absent-minded. He often buys things and then leaves the shop without paying.
- 3 My wife persistently leaves things where other people can fall over them!
- 4 When we lived in the north, the water pipes used to freeze every winter, and we had to call in a plumber.
- 5 The chairman's main fault was that he persistently interrupted the speakers before they had finished.
- 6 I tried to refuse his invitation, but he repeatedly insisted on my coming.
- 7 Why do you persist in being so difficult?
- 8 My headmaster had great authority. Whenever he spoke, everyone used to listen attentively.
- 9 No wonder the house is cold! You always go out and leave the doors open!
- 10 In the nineteenth century, people used to go to church on Sunday as a matter of course.

¹ 'Used to work' carries an added implication of contrast between past and present, suggesting 'this once happened habitually but doesn't now'.

Inherent capacity (II): will, would

Will for present time and would for past time may refer to the possession of an inherent quality or a capacity in relation to things (as opposed to people):

- 1 The pound in your pocket will buy far less today than it would ten years ago.

Such sentences are half statement of fact and half prediction, and they often suggest that the fact or prediction can be put to the test and verified.

The use of will and would may even suggest that an object is capable of co-operation or willingness (or their absence):

- 2 This suitcase will hold everything.
 - 3 The car wouldn't start. (Compare: The car refused to start)
- Used in this latter sense, will or would may appear in the 'if' clause of a conditional sentence:¹
- 4 If one suitcase will hold everything, we can cut down on our luggage.

Situations

18 Complete each short dialogue, using will together with one of the verbs in the list. The negative form will be needed in some cases.

seat bear do fit hold reach suit work

- 1 'Is your car very fast?' 'Oh, yes! It . . . over 180 kilometres an hour.'
- 2 'Is that jug big enough?' 'Oh, yes! It . . . at least a gallon.'
- 3 'What's wrong with that machine?' 'I don't know. It simply . . .'
- 4 'Why haven't you opened the door?' 'This key . . . the lock.'
- 5 'How big is the new conference centre?' 'Oh! It . . . up to 5,000 people.'
- 6 'Is that ladder long enough?' 'Oh, yes! It . . . up to the roof.'
- 7 'Shall we say 7.30?' 'Yes, that time . . . me perfectly.'
- 8 'Is it safe to walk on the ice?' 'Oh, yes! It . . . your weight easily.'

Prediction: shall, will

There are many ways of referring to future events in English, and the use of shall and will is one of them (see notes on page 61). We have already seen that all modal verbs can refer to future time. They do, however, carry some additional implication (e.g. ability, permission, possibility). Shall and will, similarly, often carry an additional implication (e.g. promise, refusal, determination), and their use in a purely predictive sense, i.e. simply to state what lies in store in the future, is only one of their several uses.

¹ Will and would are not, however, used with the verb be in a conditional clause: we do not say *If this suitcase will be big enough for everything. . . . See also Conditional Sentences, p. 91

In the restricted use of 'pure' future, shall is used only after I or we, and is often replaced by will or 'll, especially in speech.¹ When used with other pronouns, shall does not have a purely predictive meaning, and is not interchangeable with will.²

	shall
I	will	be on holiday next week.
	'll

In this sentence, shall, will, and the short form 'll are all used simply to state what the future holds. The pronouns I and we naturally occur more commonly in the spoken language than in the written, and the use of the short form 'll is therefore extremely common in speech.³

The use of will and 'll as alternatives to shall can sometimes lead to ambiguity:

	shall
2	will	finish the work tonight.
	'll

In the case of will and 'll the precise meaning of the speaker would be made clear only by the context, situation, or intonation:

- a I think I shall finish the work tonight. ('pure' future)
- b I think I will finish the work tonight. ('pure' future or intention?)
- c I think I 'll finish the work tonight. (a or b?)

Will and 'll as substitutes for shall after I/we are ambiguous only in a sentence like 2, where the context will support the idea of promise, willingness, or intention. In any case, such an ambiguity would hardly lead to a fatal misunderstanding!

In negative sentences, we use shan't and won't, and the short form 'll not is not often used. As for the meaning, the same considerations apply as for shall and will.

The interrogative shall I/we? used with an active verb form does not generally occur with a 'pure' future meaning, since we rarely ask other people about what our own future actions will be. It may, however, be used in a 'pure' future sense with verbs denoting actions or events which do not depend on the speaker for their performance:

¹ It might be truer to say that in spoken English the choice lies between I shall (or 'll) and 'll (or 'll), or between we shall (wi: ʃ) and we'll (wi:l).

² The forms 'You shall know tomorrow' (the speaker promises) and 'He shall do it again' (the speaker promises to enforce action) are still occasionally heard in spoken English, but the use of shall in this sense appears to be common only with a relatively small number of verbs, e.g. have: 'You/he shall have it as soon as I've finished with it.' It is not sufficiently current in general to justify further comment or practice, although it is quite commonly found in highly formal or legalistic written English.

³ In more formal situations (e.g. broadcasts, speeches, lectures) and when the spoken language is written down (e.g. in letters, printed talks), the full forms shall and will are normally used.

- 3 Shall | I hear from you soon?
 3 Will |

Shall I? is also used in a 'pure' future sense with passive verbs, since the speaker is not in this case asking about his own future activities:

- 4 Shall | I be told what to do?
 4 Will |

In most cases, however, shall I? used with an active verb form represents a request on the part of the speaker to know the wishes or opinion of the person he is talking to, and in this sense it is never replaced by will:

- 5 Shall I order a taxi for you?

What does this mean for the foreign learner? Students will probably find that they use 'I' quite frequently in their own speech, so that there is no need to choose between shall and will after I/we. Where a choice is necessary, e.g. in negative sentences and in the written language, it is advisable to use shall (or shan't) if there is any need to avoid ambiguity.

Perhaps the most important thing to understand is that shall and will have several distinctly different uses, and it should not be assumed that these two words simply function as part of what is often called 'the future tense'.

Reported speech

- 6 'I shall be able to come.'
 6a I said I would (or should) be able to come.
 6b You said you would be able to come.
 6c He said he would be able to come.

For reporting I shall, a choice between should and would arises only when the speaker reports his own words, as in 6a. In fact, we tend increasingly to use only would,¹ possibly because of the potential ambiguity of should in some contexts: I said I should be able to come could be interpreted as the reported version of 'I should be able to come' = 'This is what I may reasonably expect to be able to do.'

If the report is made by a person other than the original speaker, only would is used, as in 6b and 6c. These remarks also apply when we report 'pure' future questions beginning Shall I?:

- 7 'Shall I hear from you soon?'
 7a I asked if I would (or should) hear from him soon.
 7b You asked if you would hear from him soon.
 7c He asked if he would hear from him soon.

¹ Students must remember that these remarks are not in any way applicable to should as a modal verb synonymous with ought to.

shall after I, we

19 Rewrite the sentences in direct speech, using shall, and omitting the words in brackets, e.g.

(I said) I wouldn't be easy in my mind till the question was properly settled.

'I shan't be easy in my mind till the question is properly settled.'

- 1 (He said) he could manage for the time being, but he would need some help later.
- 2 (The chairman pointed out that) if the price of raw materials increased, they would be obliged to raise prices to offset the cost.
- 3 (The speaker said that) he would have more to say about that problem later.
- 4 (I told him) I would be writing to him again within a day or two to let him know the precise arrangements.
- 5 (He told his wife that) he would be working late at the office that evening.
- 6 (He asked if) I thought we would need to take maps with us.
- 7 (I said that) I wouldn't be sorry to see the end of the bad weather.
- 8 He assumed he would be given all the necessary information.
- 9 (It was my opinion that) we would never get there, at the rate we were going.
- 10 (He reminded me that) we would be making an early start the following morning, so we mustn't be late to bed.

After the pronouns you, he (she, it) and they, only will is used in a purely predictive sense. It should be noted, however, that in many cases will may carry an additional implication, particularly after the pronoun you. In statements, you will may represent an instruction rather than a prediction:

'You will arrive punctually in future,' the manager told him.

In questions, will you? may represent either (a) a request for information, or (b) a request for action:

- a 'Will you know the result soon?'
 b 'Will (or would) you go and see the manager, please?'

The predictive function of will is most obviously illustrated and most commonly seen after he (she, it) they, and after nouns generally:

The space shuttle will land at 6 p.m. our time tomorrow.

These uses of will are not a source of difficulty, in the sense that they do not involve a choice between will and shall. But students should be sensitive to the nuances of meaning expressed by will, both those indicated above and those practised in earlier exercises, and should not always assume that will is functioning in a 'pure' future sense, or necessarily in a future sense at all.)

¹ See also Conditional Sentences, page 91.

Review: various uses of will

- 20 Explain what meaning lies behind the use of will ('ll) in the following sentences.
- 1 It's no good phoning him at his office. He'll be on his way home now.
 - 2 Why will you ask such stupid questions?
 - 3 Will you clear away the dinner things?
 - 4 If you'll clear away the dinner things, I'll make the coffee.
 - 5 The luggage boot will never take all those cases!
 - 6 You'll do as you're told.
 - 7 The meeting will begin at 6.30.
 - 8 He can be quite obstinate, but he'll generally see sense in the end.
 - 9 They will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary next year.
 - 10 Don't worry! I'll let you know by tomorrow, without fail.
 - 11 Ah! Here we are! This will be the restaurant they recommended to us.
 - 12 This table's too small for a dinner party. It'll only seat four in comfort.

Advice and recommendation (II): shall, should, ought to, had better

*Shall I?*¹ generally represents a request on the part of the speaker to know the wishes or opinion of the person he is talking to:

Shall I try this number again?

Only in limited circumstances is it used in a 'pure' future sense (see page 34). Shall I? is, of course, much stronger than Should I?, and the question calls for a firm response such as Yes, please do or No, don't bother rather than Yes, you should or No, you shouldn't. Nevertheless, shall I? and should I? are clearly related.

When such questions are reported, shall always becomes should (never would):

I	asked if	you		should	try his number again.
You
He				he

¹ Shall you? is outdated and may be disregarded. A question such as 'Shall my wife make you some tea?' (again, asking about the wishes of the person addressed) is very formal, and an alternative is far more likely, viz., 'Would you like my wife to make you some tea?'

Should and ought to express advice or recommendation. The advice or recommendation may relate to everyday or practical matters, or to what is morally desirable:

You should/ought to read that book. You'd enjoy it.

You should/ought to see a doctor if you're still feeling ill tomorrow.

You shouldn't/ought not to tell lies.

All these sentences have a present or future time reference.

Had better ('d better) is used to suggest the wisest course of action in a particular situation:

You'd better see a doctor if you're still feeling ill tomorrow.

The short form 'd better is usual in affirmative positive sentences. In affirmative negative sentences, the negative particle not comes after the complete phrase:

You'd better not make a mistake next time.

In interrogative negative sentences, however, n't comes after had:

Hadn't you better see who that is at the door?

Had better is used almost exclusively with the present infinitive, and refers to present or future time. Should and ought to are used with the perfect infinitive to refer to past time, and in this case the sentences always imply that the opposite was in fact true:

He should/ought to have been a little more tactful. (i.e. but he wasn't tactful)

Situations

21 Respond to the statements by giving advice or making a recommendation, using should, ought to, or 'd better, with a suitable infinitive form, e.g.

I've got toothache. — You'd better go to the dentist.

He failed his exam. — He should have worked harder.

1 John's terribly overweight.

2 You're always late for work!

3 Our train leaves in a few minutes.

4 Peter was involved in an accident with his car.

5 Someone's stolen my wallet!

6 The rain is coming through the roof.

7 Our tent was always getting blown down when we were on holiday.

8 Mary got terribly sunburnt yesterday.

9 We're spending our holidays in Spain next summer.

10 This suit of mine is just about done for!

11 I've been feeling rather off colour recently.

12 We ran out of wine half way through the party.

- 13 John's always complaining about being underpaid.
- 14 We all got soaked in yesterday's downpour.
- 15 Let's face it. We're hopelessly lost!
- 16 There's ice on the roads this morning.
- 17 My passport expires next month.
- 18 I overslept again this morning.
- 19 There's someone knocking at the door.
- 20 The sink's blocked!

Other uses of *should*¹ should in noun clauses after suggest, recommend, etc.

Should is often used in a 'that' clause, after verbs like suggest, recommend, require, decide, etc.:

I suggested (that) he should take legal advice.
The law requires that all motor cars should be tested regularly for safety and efficiency.

Should is sometimes omitted in such sentences, leaving only the infinitive without to:

I suggested (that) he take legal advice.

The verb form is then sometimes 'regularized' to give the 'normal' sequence of tenses:

I suggested (that) he took legal advice.

22 Rewrite the sentences, incorporating a clause introduced by that, following the verbs suggested in brackets, e.g.

- 1 I wanted him to take legal advice. (suggest)
I suggested that he should take legal advice.
- 1 Factory inspectors wanted new safety rules to be introduced. (recommend)
- 2 The judge wanted the court to adjourn for lunch. (order)
- 3 The Speaker wanted the MP to withdraw his remark. (rule)
- 4 The Colonel wanted his troops to attack at dawn. (decide)
- 5 The leader of the expedition wanted them to make a further attempt to reach the summit while the weather held. (propose)
- 6 Teachers wanted more nursery schools to be set up. (advocate)
- 7 The magistrate wanted the man to be released. (direct)
- 8 The police wanted members of the public not to approach the two men but to report to the nearest police station. (give instructions)

¹ Ought to is not used in any of these cases.

- 9 Shareholders wanted the Board to give more detailed information about profits. (demand)
- 10 The employers wanted the men to return to work so that negotiations could begin. (urge) should in adverbial clauses of purpose

Should is sometimes used in adverbial clauses of purpose, after the conjunctions so that, in order that, lest, in case, etc.:

I have put everything in writing so that you should know exactly how things stand.

23 Join the pairs of sentences, using the conjunctions given in brackets, e.g.

I have put everything in writing. I want you to know exactly how things stand. (so that)

I have put everything in writing so that you should know exactly how things stand.

- 1 He left the letter on the hall table. He wanted me to be sure of seeing it when I came in. (so that)
- 2 The two students talked in undertones. They didn't want the teacher to overhear what they were saying. (so that)
- 3 The police issued a warning. They wanted the public to be aware of the danger. (in order that)
- 4 I'm taking an umbrella. It may rain. (in case)
- 5 He keeps his wife's jewels in the bank. He fears the house may be burgled. (lest)
- 6 I don't want you to think I'm not telling the truth. I have brought two witnesses with me. (lest)
- 7 He sent his son to university. He wanted him to have the best possible chance of a good career. (so that)
- 8 I asked you to come here. I wanted you to have an opportunity to explain things yourself. (so that)
- 9 Loudspeakers were fixed in an adjoining hall. Everyone would have an opportunity to hear the speech. (so that)
- 10 I'll give you my telephone number. You may want to get in touch with me again. (in case) should in noun clauses after subject + to be + adjective

Should is also used in a 'that' clause after adjectives expressing pleasure, surprise, shock, or disapproval, in sentences of the pattern:

Subject + to be + adjective + that clause
I'm horrified that he should have told anyone.

This use of should is particularly common when the subject is it:
It's odd that you should mention his name.

A similar pattern is found after adjectives like important, essential, imperative, vital, inevitable.

It's essential that you should be there to meet him.

24 Rewrite the sentences, beginning with it, as in the example:

How odd! Both our wives have the same name.

It's odd that both our wives should have the same name.

- 1 Quite naturally, you're upset about what's happened.
- 2 It's incredible! We've been living in the same street for two years and have never got to know each other.
- 3 You missed the one talk that was worth hearing. What a pity!
- 4 That's curious! He asked you to come rather than me.
- 5 It's typical of him. He expects everyone else to do all the work.
- 6 Isn't it odd! They're getting married, after all they've said about marriage.
- 7 You have to pay so much tax. It's crazy!
- 8 Look over the agreement before you sign it. This is essential.
- 9 Read the instructions carefully before you start answering the questions. This is important.
- 10 How splendid! You'll be coming to live near us.
- 11 You've bought the house we once thought of buying ourselves. How interesting!
- 12 Emergency supplies must reach the area quickly. This is vital.

Should may be used in a conditional clause, and has the effect of making it seem less likely that the condition will be fulfilled:

If he should come while I'm at lunch, tell him I'll be back at two.

This use of should is practised in Exercise 72, in the section on conditional sentences.

Obligation and necessity (II): must, mustn't, have (got) to

- 1 Candidates must attempt all the questions.
- 2 I simply must tell you what happened.
- 3 We must make an early start tomorrow.
- 4 You must see the film if you get a chance.

[1] As we can see from these sentences, must varies in meaning from (1) the expression of an instruction or of what is obligatory, to (2) the expression of a sense of inner compulsion, and then to (3) the expression of what is necessary or inevitable in the speaker's opinion. In sentence 4, must expresses little more than pressing advice, and represents a 'stronger' form of should.

In every sentence, however, must expresses the authority of the speaker, or a decision or firm opinion on the speaker's part. If obligation or necessity is imposed by a person other than the speaker, or by force of circumstance, we use have to:

- 1a You have to answer all the questions. (The teacher explains to students the requirements of the examiners)
- 2a I have to tell you what happened. (Those are the instructions I've been given)
- 3a We have to make an early start tomorrow. (Circumstances or arrangements make it necessary)
- 4a You'll have to see the film tomorrow if you don't want to miss it. (It won't be showing any longer)

[2] Must can be used with adverbs having a present or future time reference:

We must discuss that question (e.g.) now, later, next week.

However, the obligation or necessity is felt by the speaker to exist now, and it is the activity denoted by the main verb (discuss) that lies in the future. In cases where the obligation or necessity will exist only eventually, or where it is dependent on some other event, we use have to with will ('ll) or *shall*¹:

5 If we miss the last bus, we shall have to walk.

We use the simple present tense of have to to indicate (6) what is habitual, or (7) what is already planned or arranged for the future:

6 I have to get up at seven every morning.

7 We have to be there at ten tomorrow.

A more colloquial form, have got to, is commonly used as an alternative in sentences like 7, and reinforces the idea of external authority:

We've got to be there at ten tomorrow.

[3] The interrogative form in the present tense is generally formed with do:

6a What time do you have to get up?

(rather than: What time have you to get up?)

7a What time do we have to be there?

(rather than: What time have we to be there?)

or What time have we got to be there?

[4] Must can be left unchanged in reported speech (see page 19):

'You must tell me how to do it.'

= I said he must tell me how to do it.

Must cannot, however, be used to refer to obligation or necessity existing before the time of speaking. Instead, we use had to:

I had to shout to make myself heard above the noise.

(I tell you this now)

¹ Compare this with the notes on can (page 22).

[5] We also use forms of have to in the many situations where must lacks the necessary verb forms:

I'm having to read this very carefully. (present progressive)

I've had to give up the idea. (present perfect)

I told him I'd had to give up the idea. (past perfect)

We may have to change our plans. (infinitive without to)

It's a pity to have to give up the idea. (infinitive)

No one likes having to pay taxes. (gerund)

You'd have to do it if he insisted. (conditional)

You'd have had to do it if he'd insisted. (conditional perfect)

[6] In view of the fact that forms of have to are sometimes the only ones available, it is hardly surprising that a distinction in meaning between must and have to is not always rigidly maintained in those cases where both verbs are possible grammatically. But generally speaking, students will find that English usage bears out the distinction mentioned earlier, and that the choice of one form rather than another reflects a difference in attitude on the part of the speaker.

[7] One other verb phrase needs to be considered here: am/is/are to. This sometimes expresses a command or instruction issuing from the speaker, or imposed on the speaker by external authority:

You are to give this letter to the manager. (Those are the instructions I'm giving you, or the instructions I'm passing on from some other authority.)

We are to be there by ten o'clock. (Those are the instructions we have received.)

Such sentences always have a future time reference, and the form will be to* is never used. In reported speech, and to refer to past time, we use was/were to:

I told him he was to give the letter to the manager.

We left at eight o'clock—we were to be there by ten.

Was/were to + perfect infinitive generally implies that instructions were not carried out:

You were to have given the letter to the manager. (implying but you didn't)

[8] If must is followed by a perfect infinitive, it nearly always indicates an inference on the part of the speaker (see page 31):

It must have been a great shock to him. (= It was a great shock, I feel sure)

Students will, however, find occasional examples where must + perfect infinitive is equivalent in meaning to 'It is essential that this should already have been done':

To be eligible for a full pension, an employee must have contributed to the fund for at least twenty years.

[9] In all the examples so far, must, have to, etc., express the necessity for positive action on the part of the subject. To express the necessity for non-action, we use mustn't or am/is/are not to:

You mustn't say anything about it.

(= You must say nothing about it.)

You are not to say anything about it.

(= You are to say nothing about it.)

Students should note, therefore, that must (and am/is/are to) always expresses obligation, whether for positive or negative action. Although the negative particle not is often attached to must in the form n't (= mustn't), it does not cancel the obligation, but instead relates to the main verb:

You must	<table border="1"> <tr> <td>tell</td> <td>him.</td> </tr> <tr> <td>not tell</td> <td>do not tell</td> </tr> </table>	tell	him.	not tell	do not tell tell	him.
not tell	do not tell must, mustn't, have (got) to 25 Complete the sentences with must, mustn't, or a suitable form of have to or have got to.

1 We . . . hurry, or we'll be late.

2 'Application forms . . . be returned to this office within 15 days.'

3 You . . . visit us again some time.

4 I can never remember people's phone numbers. I always . . . look them up.

5 The car broke down, and we . . . have it towed to a garage.

6 The situation has now become intolerable, and something . . . be done about it immediately.

7 I realize how difficult the situation is, but you . . . try not to let it get you down.

8 'Visas where required . . . be obtained in advance of travel to the countries concerned.'

9 I'm sorry to . . . tell you this, but you leave me no alternative.

10 It's not fair! I always . . . do the dirty work!

11 You really . . . try to be a little more tactful.

12 No one likes . . . work at the weekend.

13 Whichever party forms the next government . . . probably reintroduce some sort of prices and incomes policy.

14 'Candidates . . . write in ink, and . . . write on one side of the paper only.'

15 The verdict of a jury . . . be unanimous: if its members are unable to reach agreement, the case . . . be retried before a new jury.

16 Fortunately, the crowd dispersed peaceably. If they hadn't, the police might . . . use force.

17 We . . . make the job sound too difficult, or he won't take it on.

18 He suddenly took a turn for the worse, and I . . . call the doctor in the middle of the night.

19 If a similar problem crops up again, you . . . report it to me at once.

20 It's a very difficult choice to . . . make.

Reported speech

26 When you have checked your answers to the last exercise, write the sentences in reported speech, using the sentence openings suggested below.

- 1 I pointed out that ...
- 2 The advertisement stipulated that ...
- 3 I told him ...
- 4 He said ...
- 5 We explained that ...
- 6 The tenants stated that ...
- 7 I told him ...
- 8 The regulations laid down that ...
- 9 I said ...
- 10 He complained that ...
- 11 He told me ...
- 12 I agreed that ...
- 13 The editorial argued that ...
- 14 The instructions stated that ...
- 15 According to the book I was reading, the verdict ...
- 16 The newspaper reported that ...
- 17 I warned the others that ...
- 18 She told her neighbour that her husband ...
- 19 I made it clear to him that if ...
- 20 He felt ...

Absence of obligation or necessity (II): needn't, not need to, not have to

- 1 You needn't come if you don't want to.
- 2 You don't need to see a doctor. You're perfectly healthy.
- 3 I *don't have to*¹ work on Saturdays.

[1] The use of the three forms illustrated above has several parallels with the use of must and have to, namely:

- (a) needn't generally expresses the authority of the speaker, while the other two verbs denote that external authority, or circumstances, remove the obligation or necessity for action;
- (b) needn't + present infinitive has only a present or future time reference, although it can be left unchanged in reported speech;
- 4 I told him he needn't come if he didn't want to.

¹ The negative form don't have to is used throughout the examples in preference to the alternative form haven't to.

If the absence of obligation or necessity will exist only eventually or is dependent on some other event, we use not need to or not have to, with will and shall:

- 5 When you get an assistant, perhaps you won't have to work quite so hard yourself.

The simple present tenses don't have to and don't need to express (6) what is habitual, or (7) what is already planned or arranged for the future:

- 6 I don't need to get up till eight to get to work on time.

7 We don't have to be there till ten tomorrow.

or We haven't got to be there till ten tomorrow.

(c) We use negative forms of have to and need to in the many situations where needn't lacks the necessary verb forms:

I haven't had to see a doctor for several years. (present perfect)

We may not need to bring the subject up. (infinitive without 'to')

We wouldn't have to hurry if the play started later. (conditional)

We wouldn't have had to sleep in the car if we had booked a room at the hotel. (conditional perfect)

(d) In view of the fact that the 'deficiencies' of needn't are supplied by the other verbs, distinctions in meaning between the three verbs are not always maintained.

We can, in fact, sometimes make distinctions in meaning, which students will find more clearly expressed in some contexts than in others. Sentence 1 above, for example, is coloured by the permissive attitude of the speaker ('You can please yourself what you do'), whereas sentence 2 is a statement of objective fact ('It isn't necessary'). The difference between don't need to and don't have to in sentences 2 and 3 may be paraphrased as:

2a It isn't necessary for you to see a doctor.

3a I am not obliged to work on Saturdays.

'It isn't necessary for me to work on Saturdays' does, of course, amount to the same thing, though it presents the situation in a slightly different way.

[2] A more important distinction is the grammatical one between don't need to and needn't. Don't need to is part of the regular verb to need. Negative and interrogative sentences are formed using do, as with other regular verbs, and there is a full range of verb tenses. To need may be followed by (8) a noun, or (9) an infinitive or gerund:

8 He

needs/needed		doesn't need/didn't need		your help.
---------------------	--	---------------------------------	--	------------

Does | he need your help?
Did |

9 I

need/needed		don't need/didn't need		to see him immediately.
--------------------	--	-------------------------------	--	-------------------------

A gerund after to need is the equivalent of a passive infinitive:

9a My pen needs filling. = My pen needs to be filled.

[3] The modal auxiliary verb need is always used in negative and interrogative sentences, which, as with other auxiliary verbs, are made by adding not (n't) to the auxiliary verb, and by inversion of the subject and auxiliary verb:

He needn't come.
Need he come?¹

The positive form need is, however, found in sentences that already contain a negative verb or adverb:

I don't think that need worry us unduly.
 He need study only the first two chapters.

The above sentences also illustrate the fact that the auxiliary verb need, like other auxiliary verbs, is followed by the infinitive without to, and that there is no -s ending after 'third person' subjects.

[4] Needn't is followed by a perfect infinitive to indicate the absence of necessity or obligation in the past:

He needn't have come.

This sentence may be compared with others containing similar verb forms (auxiliary verb + perfect infinitive), which often suggest the idea 'contrary to fact':²

You shouldn't have come. (but you came)
 You could have come. (but you didn't come)
 He needn't have come. (but he came)

Needn't + perfect infinitive always expresses unreal past, and contrasts with didn't need to, which nearly always expresses real past:

I needn't have gone. (but I went)
 I didn't need to go. (so presumably I didn't go) needn't, not need to, not have to 27 Rewrite the clauses in italics, using needn't or a suitable negative form of have to or need to. For the purpose of this exercise, assume that 'obligation' is expressed with a form of have to, and that 'necessity' is expressed with needn't or a form of need to.

- 1 It isn't necessary for us to leave so soon. The show doesn't start till eight.
- 2 You're not obliged to come just to please me.
- 3 I don't think it's necessary for us to take his threats too seriously.
- 4 It isn't necessary for you to decide immediately. You can let me know tomorrow.

¹ The interrogative forms must I? and need I? are more or less synonymous, although need I? often suggests that the speaker hopes for a negative answer. The positive answer to both must I? and need I? is 'Yes, you must' (never '*Yes, you need'), and the negative answer is 'No, you needn't'.

² See notes on pages 19–20.

- 5 It's a public holiday tomorrow, so you're not obliged to go to work.
- 6 You're not obliged to take my word for it. You can go and see for yourself.
- 7 If we get everything ready now, we shan't be obliged to rush around doing everything at the last minute.
- 8 If you listened more carefully, it wouldn't be necessary for me to keep repeating things just for your benefit.
- 9 He doesn't know what work is. He's never been obliged to earn his own living.

10 You're not obliged to do everything he tells you, are you?

11 It's hardly necessary for me to say how grateful I am for all you've done.

12 It was quite unnecessary for you to have told John anything. It was none of his business.

13 I shan't be able to come tomorrow, but it's unnecessary for this to make any difference to your plans.

14 He was completely at a loss. He had never been obliged to deal with such a situation before.

15 The house had just been decorated, so it wasn't necessary for us to do anything before we moved in.

16 They offered him the job on the strength of his letter. He wasn't even required to have an interview.

17 You were disappointed, I realize, but there was no need for you to have made such a fuss in public.

18 Unless you choose to tell him yourself, it is unnecessary for him ever to discover what happened.

19 It's unnecessary for you to be alarmed.

20 Nothing new came up at the meeting. I don't think it was necessary for me to have gone.

Reported speech

28 When you have checked your answers to the last exercise, write the sentences in reported speech, using the sentence openings suggested below.

- 1 I felt we . . .
- 2 He made it clear that I . . .
- 3 I didn't think we . . .
- 4 He told me . . .
- 5 He reminded me that . . .
- 6 He obviously didn't believe me, so I said he . . .
- 7 My idea was that . . .
- 8 The teacher told the student that . . .
- 9 I couldn't help saying that . . .

- 10 I pointed out to my friend that . . .
- 11 He felt he . . .
- 12 He thought I had been very indiscreet, and said . . .
- 13 I told them all that . . .
- 14 It was obvious to me that . . .
- 15 They told their friend that, when they moved in, . . .
- 16 I thought he had been very lucky—they . . .
- 17 He realized I . . . disappointed, but felt that . . .
- 18 As you pointed out to me, quite rightly, unless . . .
- 19 I assured him that . . .
- 20 He said that . . .

Introduction to the verb forms of English

- [1] The notes and exercises that follow are mainly concerned with establishing how the different forms of English verbs are used to express the aspect ('simple', 'progressive', or 'perfect') of an action or event, and only secondarily with problems of tense or time (present, past, or future).¹ Problems in learning the use of these forms may arise because either the student's native language does not make the same distinctions as English or, if and when it does, it makes the distinctions in a different way.
- [2] The choice of verb form (simple, progressive, perfect) made by an English speaker depends on many factors, and not on a rigid set of grammatical rules. Students may have learned not to say e.g. I have seen the film yesterday*, following a 'rule' that we cannot make a specific reference to the time of a past event when we use the present perfect tense. But this is a negative way of looking at the problem: it gives no indication (except, perhaps, by implication) of what the use of the present perfect tense means to an English speaker, or of the considerations that determine the choice of the present perfect rather than, say, the past simple in situations where the use of either form seems theoretically possible.
- [3] The choice of one verb form rather than another may be determined by the nature of the action or event itself, and the circumstances in which it occurs:
 - a I read all his books. (present simple)
 - b I've read all his books.
 - c When our visitor arrived, my wife made tea.
 - d When our visitor arrived, my wife was making tea.
 Assuming 'he' is a writer (and not simply a friend with a large library), sentence a states that I read his books as they are published, and implies that 'he' is still an active writer whose books I shall continue to read if any more are published. Sentence b states that I have read all the books 'he' has written so far. 'He' may still be an active writer, but he may equally well have ceased writing (or may, indeed, be dead). In c, our visitor arrived and then my wife made tea, whereas in d, tea-making was already in progress when our visitor arrived. In these examples, the 'meaning' of the situation determines our choice of verb form.
 - 1 Students should note, in any case, that the terms 'tense' and 'time' are not to be regarded as synonymous in English. The term 'tense' is used to refer to a verb form, not to chronological time. See note on page 19.

- [4] The choice may, however, depend entirely on the speaker's viewpoint. The speaker may wish to take a 'synoptic' view, a view of an action or series of actions as a whole, in which case he chooses the 'simple' verb form. In describing a scientific experiment, a demonstrator is more likely to take this view—he is interested in his acts, or in phenomena, as items in a chain of events:

I place a bell jar over the candle, and after a few moments the water gradually rises.

If the speaker is more concerned with drawing attention to the fact that an activity is in progress and is in a state of incompleteness, he chooses the progressive verb form:

I'm placing a bell jar over the candle. There! Can you see what's happening? The water is gradually rising.

In each case, the actions or phenomena are the same, but the speaker looks at them differently.

- [5] In other cases, the choice of verb form may be restricted by limitations in the meaning of the verb. A verb like contain, for example, refers to a state or condition, where an essential element in the meaning of the verb is that of duration or permanence. It is extremely unlikely that a speaker would use such a verb in the progressive form:

The book contains a lot of useless information.

The three sets of notes and exercises that follow deal with each aspect in turn, (simple, progressive, perfect), discussing each in greater detail, and with further examples.

The 'simple' verb forms

Present simple

- 1 Water boils at 100° C.
- 2 He works in a bank.
- 3 I (always) take sugar in coffee.

The present simple form is used to refer to the existence of a situation or state of affairs which either is permanent (sentence 1), or is regarded as permanent (2), or to refer to repeated or habitual actions (3).

The verb in 1 is in fact completely timeless: it states what is true for all time; while in 2, the verb refers to a constant and unchanging feature of the current situation, a situation that is regarded as permanent. The present simple used in these ways is particularly characteristic of scientific and technical English, and of expository writing generally.

The verb in 3 refers to one of 'my' habits, which presumably existed before now, and which may be assumed to continue to exist in the future. Someone who knows me would say, when offering coffee, whether yesterday, today, or tomorrow, 'Ah, yes. You take sugar, don't you?' The name 'neutral' present is sometimes given to the verb as used in 1 and 2, and the name 'iterative' present to the verb as used in 3.

29 Complete these sentences so that they represent a universal truth or a situation that may be regarded as permanent, using the present simple ('neutral') of the verbs in the list. Add any other words that may be needed to complete the sentences, e.g., a, the, at, on, etc.

belève exist float flow generate indicate work make risé sell sét stand treat

- 1 The sun . . . east, and . . . west.
- 2 A tobacconist . . . cigarettes.
- 3 The Thames . . . London.
- 4 London . . . Thames.
- 5 Water . . . moon. (negative)
- 6 Jet aircraft . . . lot of noise.
- 7 Combustion . . . heat.
- 8 Hospitals . . . sick.
- 9 A drop in barometric pressure . . . change in the weather.
- 10 Computers . . . great speed.
- 11 Oil . . . water.
- 12 An atheist . . . God. (negative)

Present simple in explanations

30 The following passage explains the working of an automatic ticket barrier on the London Underground Railway system. Complete the passage, using the present simple tense of the verbs in the list. Use each verb once only.

be buy leave let record release scan show suck take

When you . . . a ticket you . . . it to a machine which . . . it in . . . it, . . . it, and . . . a barrier for you—in about a third of a second. And when you . . . a station a similar gate . . . your ticket from you (always assuming you've got the correct ticket) and . . . you out, returning your ticket if it . . . a season.

(from The Times, 1969)

Present simple for daily habits

31 Douglas Fairbanks Jr describes a typical day's activities. Complete the extract with the present simple tense of the verbs in the list. Some verbs are used more than once.

be eat get go have need read separate take throw wake up walk

'I normally . . . about seven. I seldom . . . to be called because I . . . a built-in alarm clock. I . . . sparingly, one piece of dry toast, fruit juice and tea. It . . . (negative) me long to dress, about three minutes. I . . . a relatively large wardrobe, but that . . . because I rarely . . . anything away. I . . . the New York Times, Daily News and Washington Post over breakfast, and then . . . the mail between my wife's and mine. The business mail . . . into my briefcase, to be dealt with at the office. My office . . . about a mile away and I usually . . . It . . . about the only exercise I . . . in the city.'

(from the Sunday Times, November 1984)

Present simple with 'frequency' adverbs (Situations)

32 Answer the questions, using the present simple ('iterative') of a verb, together with the adverb suggested. Note: Adverbs like sometimes, often, hardly ever, etc., are frequently associated with the use of the present simple iterative: their meaning and use are, of course, fully consistent with the 'meaning' of this verb form. These adverbs generally come before the simple verb form (see Ex. 31).

- 1 When do you get up? (generally)
- 2 What do you do on Saturday mornings? (often)
- 3 Where do you spend your summer holidays? (occasionally)
- 4 What sort of radio programmes do you not listen to? (never)
- 5 How do you travel to work or school? (always)
- 6 What sort of books do you rarely read? (hardly ever)
- 7 What sort of films do you enjoy? (nearly always)
- 8 What punctuation does one find at the end of a printed sentence? (usually)
- 9 What do your parents ask you to do for them? (sometimes)
- 10 What do you keep in your pockets or your handbag? (usually)
- 11 What do you take if you have a headache? (generally)
- 12 Where do you meet your friends? (frequently)

Composition topics

33 Write sentences using each of these verbs in the present simple, describing the activities or characteristics or appearance of some of your relatives, neighbours, friends, colleagues at work, or fellow-students. You may include the following adverbs (if appropriate) in your sentences: always, often, usually, generally, occasionally, rarely, seldom, hardly ever.

- | | |
|---------|---------|
| 1 catch | 6 smoke |
| 2 drink | 7 take |
| 3 go | 8 walk |
| 4 live | 9 wear |
| 5 play | 10 work |

34 Write a short paragraph of about 80 words on one of the following, using the present simple tense.

- 1 Describe the day-to-day activities at your place of work or your school.
- 2 Describe how you spend your leisure time in the evenings or at weekends.
- 3 Describe what happens in your country at Christmas, or on some other important day in your national calendar.

If we wish to refer to the 'actual' present, we generally use a progressive form (but see examples 4, 5a, and 5b below). We may thus compare boil and work as used in examples 1 and 2 (page 51) with the progressive as used in sentences 1a and 2a:

- 1 Water boils at 100°C.
- 1a You can make the tea. The water's boiling.
- 2 He works in a bank.
- 2a My husband's working in the garden. (at the moment)

There are, however, some verbs in English that are not normally used in a progressive form because they describe states, not events, and their meaning is incompatible with the characteristic 'meaning' of the progressive, i.e. uncompleted action or series of actions, and limited duration (see notes on 'progressive' forms, pages 62 ff.). Two such verbs appear in the following sentence, and in this case they refer to the 'actual' present:

- 4 I know what you mean.

Examples 1-4 represent the commonest uses of the present simple, but it is also used in the following ways:

- (a) in descriptions accompanying demonstrations or experiments:
 - 5a We make sure that the current is switched off, and then remove the cover plate.

and in commentaries on radio or television.¹

5b Smith hits that one off the back foot, and the ball goes straight to the boundary.

In the case of commentaries, the speaker may also use the present progressive. The choice will depend either on the duration of the action, or on the speaker's point of view.

(b) in announcements (this use is similar to example 2 above):

6a This park opens half an hour after sunrise and closes half an hour before sunset.

and in headlines:

6b America puts forward peace plan.

(c) as the 'historic'² or 'dramatic' present, which is used to give immediacy to past events (real or fictitious):

7a I rush to the station, and find I've just missed the train! (real event, colloquial usage)

When Hamlet meets his father's ghost, he learns the truth about his uncle Claudius. (fictitious event) and in stage directions:

7b (Petkoff goes beside Sergius; looks curiously over his left shoulder as he signs; and says with childlike envy):

Present simple in demonstrations

35

The following is a recipe for making iced coffee mousse. Imagine that you are giving a demonstration to a cookery class, and change the verbs in italics from the imperative form into the present simple, using the subject I or we. The words in brackets do not appear in the original text, but are needed in the spoken demonstration. You should also supply other essential words where there are spaces in the text. Begin your 'demonstration' as suggested at the end of the text.

ICED COFFEE MOUSSE Serves 6

- 3 eggs
- ½ pint (275 ml) strong black coffee
- 1 level tablespoon powdered gelatine
- 3 oz (75g) caster sugar
- ½ pint (275 ml) double cream

¹ These are, of course, two further examples of the present simple indicating 'actual' present. In any comprehensive view of the use of the present simple, therefore, it is important to note that this tense can represent both 'habitual' and 'actual' present. Similarly, it is important to note that the present progressive may be used for 'habitual' as well as 'actual' present (see pages 62 and 73).

² The 'historic' present is not, however, used for narrating historical events in history books, although it is used when historical facts are presented in note form.

Measure the coffee into a small saucepan, sprinkle in the gelatine and leave . . . to soak for five minutes. (Next) Crack the egg yolks and whites into separate basins. (Now) Add the sugar to the egg yolks; (then) place the basin over a saucepan of hot water and whisk until . . . mixture is thick and light in colour. (That's ready now, so) Remove . . . from the heat and gradually whisk in the dissolved gelatine. Continue beating until . . . cooled a little. (Next) Beat the egg whites stiffly; (and then) beat the cream lightly. (Now) Use a metal spoon, and fold . . . egg whites and cream into the egg yolk mixture. Pour . . . into a serving dish, and chill . . . until . . . set firm. ('Now here is a recipe for iced coffee mousse for six persons. We need three eggs, . . .')

- 36 Give a spoken or written description of how to make one of your typical national or local dishes.

Present simple in headlines

- 37 Complete the headlines with the present simple tense of the verbs in the list, putting the verb in its correct position. Do not add any other words.

continue crash demand hit face fear find forecast hit launch retain

- 1 MP URGENT INQUIRY
2 INJURIES ENGLISH TEAM
3 CONSUMER BOOM
4 BRITISH RAIL LOWER LOSSES
5 PLANE IN FOG
6 AMERICA SPACE SHUTTLE
7 BOYS GOLD COIN HOARD
8 SIX DRUG CHARGES
9 DOCTORS FLU EPIDEMIC
10 CHAMPION TITLE

Past simple

- 8 He worked in a bank all his life.
9 When I was in England, I drank tea with breakfast.
10 I knew what he meant.
11 I made sure the current was switched off, and then removed the cover plate.

The past simple is used to refer to actions or events completed in past time, and the examples above are analogous to sentences 2, 3, 4, and 5 in the present simple (pages 51 and 54). There is no analogous use of the past tense as in sentence 1 (page 51), since universal truths are independent of time.

In 8, his working in a bank was a constant and unchanging feature of his past life (either he is now dead, or he has retired), and this use of the verb form could be classified as past 'neutral'. In 9, the verb expresses an habitual action in the past (past 'iterative'). In 10, the verbs belong to the special group not normally used in a progressive form, and they refer to the past 'actual'. Sentence 11 could be either the description in retrospect of a demonstration or experiment; or it could be simply the narration of past events—one of the commonest uses of the past simple (past 'narrative').¹

Stative verbs: present simple and past simple

- 38 Complete the sentences, using the present simple or past simple of the verbs suggested. (NB. These verbs are not normally used in a progressive form.)

- I understood exactly what . . . (mean)
- . . . everything he tells me. (not believe)
- Listen! . . . there's someone at the door. (think)
- Five plus five . . . (make)
- . . . his suit. (not match)
- John . . . when he was young. (resemble)
- Who . . . to? (belong)
- The . . . ten gallons. (hold)
- How . . . where I lived? (know)
- Do you think the winner . . . ? (deserve)
- . . . what I see? (see)
- This wine . . . (taste)
- How do I look in this dress? . . . me? (suit)
- . . . better than he speaks. (understand)
- What exactly . . . of? (consist)

Past simple ('narrative') for past events

- 39 Complete the following newspaper report with the past simple ('narrative') of the verbs in the list. The verb be is used twice, all others only once.

advance be come leap make order reach say sink submerge watch

One minute Mr Jack Jones was using his huge mechanical digger to clear sand which had blown up against the foreshore at Swansea. The next his mighty machine had scooped up a breathless police sergeant and a constable who . . . him to follow a man running along the beach.

¹ It is unnecessary for students to learn the different names used here for the different 'meanings', but it is useful to note that such distinctions in meaning can be made.

With the two determined lawmen crouching in the bucket, the digger . . . its top speed of 10 mph as it . . . on the fugitive. When the digger . . . level with the man, the two law officers . . . out of the bucket and . . . their arrest. But as Mr Jones . . . in horror the 10-ton digger . . . deeper and deeper into the sand. His efforts to free it . . . fruitless and soon the tide . . . in and . . . it.

Last night, after a five-hour rescue operation, Mr Mervyn Owens, head of the company which owns the digger, . . . : 'We have been landed with a repair bill of at least £6,000.'

(from The Times, 25 October 1984)

Past events (Situations)

40 Answer the questions, using the past simple tense of the verbs in italics, together with any adverbs suggested. (NB. If this exercise is done in class, students may themselves ask each other the questions.)

- 1 Where did you spend your holiday last year?
- 2 Why did you choose this place for a holiday?
- 3 At what time of year did you go?
- 4 How did you travel?
- 5 Who did you go with?
- 6 What sort of luggage did you take?
- 7 Where did you live?
- 8 How did you pay for your accommodation—in cash or by cheque?
- 9 What other people did you meet?
- 10 How did you spend your time?
- 11 What sort of food did you eat?
- 12 What did you drink with dinner? (usually)
- 13 What sort of weather did you have?
- 14 How many hours did you sleep each night? (generally)
- 15 At what time did you wake up each day? (generally)
- 16 At what time did you get up? (usually)
- 17 Who did you send postcards to?
- 18 What did you bring home as souvenirs?
- 19 How much did the holiday cost altogether?
- 20 How did you feel when you got back home?

Composition topics

- 41 Give a step-by-step description of your activities from the moment you got up this morning until you left the house or arrived at work.

42 Re-tell the story or plot of one of the following:

- 1 A book you have read recently.
- 2 A film or play you have seen recently at the cinema or theatre or on television.

Future actions or events

Present simple with adverbs having future time reference

12 The examination begins at 9.0 a.m. tomorrow morning.

The present simple can be used with adverbs referring to future time when the action or event is regarded as part of a fixed timetable. This differs a little in meaning from the present progressive used with such adverbs (see page 67), in that the present progressive implies an element of personal agreement, planning, or intention on the part of the subject, whereas the present simple does not.

Verbs commonly used in this way are those associated with announcements about timetables, schedules, organized events, etc., for example, begin, end, stop, leave, depart, arrive, come, go, open, close. There is an analogous use of the past simple:

13 He set his alarm for seven o'clock: the examination began at 9.0 the following morning.

There are also some verbs that are not used in this way, viz., those verbs not normally used in a progressive form—verbs referring to activities of the mind or senses (know, understand, realize, etc.), and those referring to a state or condition (contain, resemble, equal, etc.). We do not make statements such as:

- *I know the answer tomorrow.
- *He resembles his father in a few years' time.

43 Rewrite the sentences, using the present simple tense of the verbs in italics, and omitting any words that may then be unnecessary.

- 1 The exhibition is due to close on Friday next week.
- 2 Clearance of the site for the new concert hall is scheduled to begin next month.
- 3 I haven't time to discuss it now. My plane is due to leave in twenty minutes.
- 4 It has been fixed that the new regulations should come into force from the beginning of the new year.
- 5 What time is the concert due to end this evening?
- 6 The arrangements are that the exhibition should open at the British Museum next week.
- 7 The ship is scheduled to make her maiden voyage next month.

- 8 Next year, the winter term is due to finish on 28th March, and the spring term to start on 7th April.
- 9 When has it been arranged for you to take up your new appointment?
- 10 The new motorway is due to open to traffic tomorrow.

Present simple in adverbial clauses of time¹ referring to future

14 He won't be satisfied until he gets an apology.

In adverbial clauses of time referring to future, we use one of the present tenses. We do not use shall or will in a predicative sense in such clauses. The conjunctions commonly used to introduce time clauses are: when, as soon as, before, after, until, once, by the time (that), the moment (that). To this list we can also add the conditional conjunction if.

There are two points to note, however:

- (a) When may introduce a noun clause, in which case the restriction does not apply. We can compare two sentences:

15a He will tell you (e.g. what you want to know) when he has the necessary information.

The clause in italics says when he will tell you, and is an adverbial clause of time. We therefore use the present simple tense.

15b He will tell you when he will have the necessary information.

Here, the clause in italics says what he will tell you (i.e. it is a noun clause), and is the grammatical equivalent of 'what you want to know' in 15a. In 15b, moreover, we could add an adverb of time:

Tomorrow he will tell you when he will have the necessary information.

- (b) Will is often used in a modal sense, expressing willingness or agreement on the part of the subject. Used in this sense, it may appear in a time clause or a conditional clause:

You'll have to pay him before he will do anything.
Everything will be all right if you will all do as you're told.

- 44 Complete the sentences with the present simple tense or a future form of the verbs in brackets.
- 1 Thousands of vending machines (have) to be converted before the new coins (come) into circulation.
- 2 The employers (start) negotiations as soon as the men (return) to work.
- 3 The Government (have) to decide what to do about these naval bases before the present treaty (expire).

¹ See also Adverbial Clauses (page 187).

- 4 What he (do) when he (leave) school?
- 5 As soon as there (be) even a temporary break in the weather, the climbers (renew) their attempt to reach the summit.
- 6 After the monsoon (set) in, no further attempts (be) possible.
- 7 Many familiar faces (be) absent from Parliament when the new session (open) next Thursday.
- 8 If we (not leave) soon, the party (be) over by the time we (get) there.
- 9 If you (wait) much longer before you (make) up your mind, it (be) too late.
- 10 We (have to) buy new carpets and curtains when we (move) into our new house.
- 11 The new boy soon (settle down) once he (get) to know the others in his class.
- 12 We (interrupt) our programmes the moment we (have) any further news of the situation.
- 13 If you (not tell) him everything now, he simply (keep on) pestering you until you (do).
- 14 As soon as we (hear) from the suppliers, we (let) you know when the goods (be) in stock.

A note on the 'future'

We have already seen that the present simple can be used with adverbs referring to future time:

The Olympic Games begin in two week's time.

The present progressive can also be used in this way, but introduces an additional element of personal planning, intention or agreement on the part of the subject:

I am meeting him at six-thirty tomorrow evening.

The form going to + infinitive is very commonly used to express intention on the part of the subject, or to express what appears likely or inevitable:

I am going to tell him what has happened.

It's going to be difficult to persuade him to change his mind.

The forms will/shall + infinitive may be used in a purely predictive way:

I shall be forty-five next Saturday.

The space shuttle will land at 6 p.m. our time tomorrow.

However, shall and will often function as modal verbs, carrying an attitudinal implication (promise, threat, determination, probability, etc.), and as there are so many other ways of referring to future time, it can be misleading to speak of a 'future tense', as if it were something as formally distinct as, say, the present or past tense. Any references made in these notes (for convenience) to 'future' should be considered in this context.

The 'progressive' verb forms

Present progressive

- Ia* Do be quiet! I'm trying to hear what the man's saying.
Ib Do you think I look any thinner? I'm slimming.
Ic We're eating in the kitchen during this cold weather.

The progressive forms represent actions or events, or series of actions or events, viewed at some point between their beginning and end. They imply that an action or series of actions has already begun but is not yet completed. At the same time, they indicate that the duration of the action or series of actions is limited.

In sentence Ia, the progressive form indicates an activity in progress at the very moment of speaking; while in Ib, it indicates a temporary activity over a more extended period of time. Sentence Ic refers to a series of actions of limited duration: the repeated act of eating, whenever it occurs, occurs in the kitchen, but this is viewed as a temporary arrangement ('during this cold weather'). Ic is, in other words, concerned with habitual activity, but habitual activity over a limited period of time.

It should be clear from the above examples and comments that the progressive forms do not necessarily indicate that an action is being performed at the very moment of speaking. This is so in Ia, where we could say 'I'm trying at this very moment to listen to what the man is saying (at this very moment)'. But we would not say '*I'm slimming at this very moment' in Ib; and in Ic, it is very possible that we are not engaged in eating in the kitchen at the very moment of speaking.

The one feature that is common to all three sentences, however, is that the action or series of actions is regarded as incomplete or temporary (of limited duration). We can contrast the meaning and use of the simple and progressive forms in sentences like the following:

- a* They spend a lot of money on improving their house.
b They're spending a lot of money on improving their house.

Sentence a is a general observation on a more or less permanent state of affairs, whereas b implies that their spending money on their house is a temporary phenomenon. There is a difference in the facts of the situation, and this determines the choice of verb form.

In other cases, however, the choice of verb form may depend entirely on the speaker's viewpoint, as explained on page 51:

- c* I place a bell jar over the candle, and after a few seconds the water gradually rises.
d I'm placing a bell jar over the candle. There! Can you see what's happening? The water's gradually rising.

Here the facts of the situation are the same in both cases, but the speaker looks at those facts differently.

Present progressive

45 Complete the sentences with the present progressive tense of the verbs in the list, putting the adverbs in italics in their correct position. Use the short form of auxiliary verbs where possible.

act	be	begin	boil	brush	come die	drive	get on	give	go	happen jump	kill	read	take	try

- 1 Do be quiet, will you? I . . . to concentrate.
- 2 The tea won't be long. The kettle nearby . . .
- 3 Don't take the newspaper away! I still . . . it.
- 4 Let's sit down for a while. My feet . . . me.
- 5 Do tell me what happened! I . . . to hear.
- 6 I'll be ready in a minute. I just . . . my hair.
- 7 I won't have another drink, thanks. I . . .
- 8 I . . . to work by bus this week—my car . . . trouble.
- 9 Peter . . . very strangely these days. What's come over him?
- 10 Just listen to that noise! What on earth . . . out there?
- 11 How you . . . in your new job?
- 12 He should have arrived by now. I . . . to think he not . . .
- 13 You rather . . . to conclusions?
- 14 Why you not . . . the medicine the doctor prescribed?
- 15 Don't you think you . . . rather foolish?

46 Rewrite the sentences, using the present progressive tense of the verbs related to the nouns in bold type, and beginning your sentences with the words in italics. It may be necessary to omit some words, and some adjectives need to be changed into adverbs. All the sentences illustrate the use of the present progressive to denote a temporary activity over an extended period of time, e.g.

There is a vigorous exercise of their powers under the new Act on the part of Customs authorities.

Customs authorities are vigorously exercising their powers under the new Act.

- 1 There is a steady introduction in industry of robots on production lines.
- 2 One effect of the present credit squeeze is a severe reduction in the ability of the average citizen to save a greater proportion of his income.
- 3 There is an expansion of the Company's activities abroad.
- 4 There is a slower rise in living standards in most European countries.
- 5 The investigation of the crime is in the hands of the police.

- 6 The result of the strike at London Airport is heavy delays to passengers.
- 7 There is a steady improvement in passenger services on suburban lines.
- 8 There is a fight among manufacturers of personal computers to maintain their position in a highly competitive market.
- 9 There is a gradual replacement of large jumbo jets by quieter, more economical aircraft.
- 10 One result of the apparently inexorable rise in oil prices is the creation of a search for energy-saving schemes.

Past progressive

- 2a I asked them to be quiet. I was trying to hear what the man was saying.
 2b I thought she looked thinner. Apparently, she was slimming.
 2c We had moved the dining-table into the kitchen — we were eating there during the cold weather.

These three sentences describe situations in past time parallel to the present situations in sentences 1a–1c (page 62). In sentence 2a, the progressive indicates an activity in progress at that very moment of past time. In 2b, it indicates an activity of limited duration over a longer (unspecified) period of past time; while in 2c, it refers to a series of actions limited in duration to the period mentioned ('during the cold weather').

In 2a, the actual time at which the activity was in progress is suggested by the context (i.e. at the time when I asked them to be quiet), but in such sentences, the time is often specified by an adverbial:

- At 11 o'clock, | I was working in the garden.
 When the storm broke, |

We can contrast the use of the past progressive and the past simple in the main clause:

- a When our visitor arrived, my wife was making tea.
 b When our visitor arrived, my wife made tea.

In a, tea-making was in progress when our visitor arrived, whereas in b, tea-making took place after (and probably as a result of) our visitor's arrival.

The past progressive is also used to draw attention to continuous activity during a specified period in the past:

- 3a I was working all day last Saturday.
 3b I was giving a lesson between two o'clock and three.

In many such sentences, however, there may be very little difference between the past simple and the past progressive:
 We watched television all evening.
 We were watching television all evening.

The phrase all evening itself expresses the idea of duration, and the progressive form simply reinforces that idea. This is yet another example where the choice of one form rather than the other represents little more than a difference in attitude or emphasis on the part of the speaker.

Past simple and past progressive

- 47 Complete the sentences with the past simple or the past progressive of the verbs in brackets. In Nos. 7 and 9, you will need to use either the simple or progressive form of the infinitive. The adverbs in italics should be put in their correct position.
- Who was that girl you (talk) to when I (pass) you in the street?
 - He (sleep) soundly when he (awaken—passive) by a noise. He (go) downstairs to find out what (happen). He (know) something must be wrong because the dog (bark) furiously.
 - He (not take) my remarks seriously. In fact, he (think) I (joke).
 - A storm (break) while the golfers (approach) the half way stage in the competition. They (take) shelter in the clubhouse, and play (restart) as soon as the rain (stop).
 - The men (drink) together when an argument (break out). The men soon (come) to blows, and the publican (call) the police. The situation just (begin) to get out of hand, when the police (arrive) and (take) the two men to the police station. While they (get) out of the police car, one man (make) a break for it, and (succeed) in getting away. They still (look) for the man two hours later.
 - One of the airliner's tyres (burst) as it (taxi) along the runway. Fortunately, no one (injure—passive).
 - What (go on) in your house when I (call) on you last night? I (ring) the bell three times, but you (not answer) the door. Judging by the noise that (come) from the sitting room, I (think) you must (have) a party.
 - I (look) for you in the theatre all evening. Where you (sit)?
 - When I (leave) the airport, John and his wife still (talk) to the customs official. They (seem) (have) some difficulty over their passports.
 - It's odd you should mention seeing him last night. I just (wonder) what had become of him. I suppose you (not ask) where he (live) these days?
- Present and past, simple and progressive
- 48 The American spacecraft Apollo 13 was about 205,000 miles from earth on its journey to the moon, when an explosion occurred. What follows is part of the conversation that took place between the spacecraft and mission control at Houston, Texas. All the verbs in brackets were used in the present simple or present progressive, or the past simple or past progressive. Put the verbs in the most suitable of these forms, using the short forms of the auxiliary verbs where appropriate.

At 04.04, British Summer Time, Captain Lovell (report): 'Hey! We've got a problem here.'

Twenty-one minutes later he (tell) mission control: 'It (look) to me, looking out the hatch, like we (vent) something into space. It (be) gas of some kind.'

Mission control (ask): 'Can you tell us anything about the venting? Where it (come) from; what window you (see) it at?'

Spacecraft: 'It (come) out of window one right now. Jack. Something (give) us a breach, Jack, both in pitch and roll so I (suspect) that maybe it (be) whatever it (be) that (spin) back there.'

Later, during the first critical hours when mission control (work) desperately but calmly towards a solution that would give the three astronauts a chance of survival, (come) this agitated message from the spacecraft: 'I (transmit). I (not have) any current now. Hey, it (be) off. It (be) dead.'

For three hours, one of the three fuel-cells (keep—passive) working on the command module. But at 05.40, B.S.T., Fred Haise (report) that cabin oxygen pressure (fall). Mission control (order) the emergency batteries to be activated.

The spacecraft (report): 'Jack it (look) like O₂ pressure (be) just a hair over 200.'

MC: 'We (confirm) that here and the temperature also (confirm) it.'

SC: 'Okay. It (look) like it still (go) down?'

MC: 'It slowly (go) down to zero and we (start) to think about the LM (lunar module) lifeboat.'

SC: 'Yes, that (be) something we (think) about too.'

(from The Times, 18 April 1970)

Simple and progressive forms

- 49 Complete the sentences with the present simple or present progressive, the simple or progressive infinitive, or the present participle form of the verbs in brackets. (NB. The infinitive particle 'to' is supplied where necessary.)

1 Wine-drinking (appear) to (gain) in popularity in Britain.

- 2 Why you (sit) there (watch) television when you (know) you ought to (get) on with your work?
- 3 Is there anything I can (get on) with while I (wait)?
- 4 I (think) I (hear) someone (talk) in the next room.
- 5 Perhaps you should (leave) now? Your friend may (wait) for you outside.
- 6 I wouldn't (call) on them just now. They'll probably (have) their dinner.
- 7 He (say) he (know) someone who'll (do) the job. I (wonder) who he can (think) of?
- 8 If I were at home now, I'd (sit) down (do) nothing.
- 9 His appearance (seem) to (improve) now that he (have) a steady girl friend.
- 10 I can (smell) something (burn). Can you?
- 11 We must (travel) at a snail's pace. All the other cars (overtake) us.
- 12 Can we (accept) what he (say) at its face value? He may or may not (tell) the truth.

Future actions or events

Progressive forms with adverbs referring to future time (plans and arrangements)

4a I'm meeting John at six-thirty tomorrow.

4b I left home at six: I was meeting John at six-thirty.

When used with an adverb referring to future time, the present progressive indicates that the action or event is pre-arranged. We could paraphrase sentence 4a:

I have arranged to meet John at six-thirty tomorrow.

(This is not to say that the two sentences are exactly the same: in 4a, the focus of interest is on the meeting, whereas in the paraphrase our attention is directed towards the arrangement.)

Sentence 4b represents a situation in past time parallel to the situation in 4a in present/future time: my meeting John at six-thirty was part of a pre-arranged plan that existed at the time I left home.

The past progressive sometimes refers to plans that do not or did not materialize:

5a I was coming to see you tomorrow, but now I find I can't.

More frequently, we find the form going to instead (this form would not be used in 5a for stylistic reasons—we would not normally say *'I was going to come to see you').

5b I was going to tell you myself (i.e. but I find you already know).

- 50 Replace the words in italics by the present progressive or past progressive of the verbs in bold type.
- The plan is that* oil producers should meet tomorrow to discuss oil prices.
 - I have arranged to take a week's holiday starting next Monday.
 - Do you intend to visit* the exhibition before it closes?
 - I can't see you this evening because I plan to go out.
 - Some friends of ours have arranged to come to stay with us. We have agreed to meet them at the airport this evening.
 - You needn't have told him, because I had arranged to see him myself later in the week.
 - The Prime Minister said arrangements had been made for him to hold a press conference the following day.
 - 'Thanks for coming over to see us! How do you plan to get back to your hotel?'
 - The chairman of the bank said that they planned to open three new branches in the town the following month.
 - The plan is that* the theatre company take the show on tour after its initial run in London.

Future progressive¹

- 6a* This time tomorrow, we'll be crossing the Atlantic.
6b We'd better move the dining-table into the kitchen. We'll be eating there during the winter.

The progressive form in sentence 6a, as in examples 1a and 2a, indicates an activity in progress at a specific time, in this case in the future. In 6b, it indicates that the speaker views the series of future actions (eating in the kitchen) as a temporary arrangement.

The use of the progressive infinitive after will (7b) may be compared with the simple infinitive (7a), and with the present progressive referring to future (7c):

- 7a* I'll see him about it tomorrow.
7b I'll be seeing him about it tomorrow.
7c I'm seeing him about it tomorrow.

In 7a the speaker is making a promise or announcing a decision about his future actions, whereas in 7b the speaker suggests that 'seeing him' will occur as part of the normal pattern of events. 7c, on the other hand, suggests that the event is part of a specially pre-arranged plan.

¹ The term 'future' is used here for convenience to indicate chronological future, and not to represent 'the future progressive tense'.

In a question, the use of the progressive infinitive may represent the prelude to a request or suggestion for some further action in the event of an affirmative answer:

Will you be seeing him tomorrow?

If the answer to the question is 'Yes', the speaker might go on to make a request: 'Well, in that case, could you tell him I got his letter?'

We can make one further distinction between the present progressive referring to future and the future progressive:

a I'm giving a lesson at two o'clock tomorrow.

b I shall be giving a lesson at two o'clock tomorrow.

Sentence a states that the lesson will begin at two o'clock, whereas b suggests that the lesson may already be in progress at that time.

Simple and progressive infinitive after shall, will, may, etc.

51 Complete the sentences with the simple or progressive infinitive form of the verbs in brackets.

- Will you (come) to the concert this evening? If so, we'll (meet) you there.
- I'd rather you didn't call tomorrow afternoon. I shall (entertain) visitors.
- What do you think you'll (do) at this time next year?
- Listeners who missed any of these talks may (like) to know that we shall (repeat) the whole series during the next four weeks.
- I'll (see) him next week, so I will (mention) it to him then.
- I shall (work) late at the office this evening, so I won't (get) home till about ten.
- You'll (disappoint) her if you don't go. Now that you've promised, she'll (expect) you.
- 'Do you think they'll still (wait) for us when we get there?' 'Oh, yes! They won't (go) till we arrive.'
- We can't (make) any definitive plans for October, because we may (move) house then.
- When you arrive at the airport, an escort will (wait) for you. You'll (recognize) him very easily. He'll (wear) a dark green suit and a yellow tie.

Perfect progressive

8a Go out and get some fresh air! You've been sitting there reading all morning.

8b Look at the mess my paper's in! Who's been reading it?

9a I thought he needed some fresh air. He 'd been sitting there reading all morning.

9b When I saw the mess my paper was in, it was obvious that someone had been reading it.

10 By next Christmas, I shall have been living in London for two years.

In examples 1a-1c and 2a-2c (pages 62 and 64), the progressive forms indicate actions or series of actions viewed at some point between their beginning and end. Although these forms imply that the action began at some earlier time and ended at some later time, they draw our attention only to the situation at the particular time indicated by the context.

The perfect progressive forms, in common with other progressive forms, draw attention to the duration of an action and indicate that the duration of the action is limited. But they differ from other progressive forms in that they indicate explicitly that the action or series of actions began at some point earlier in time (before now, before a time in the past, or before a future time).

In sentences 8a, 9a, and 10, the action is in progress up to and including the time indicated by the context. But this is not an essential feature of the perfect progressive forms, as we can see in 8b and 9b—no one is actually reading the paper at the time the question is asked.

In every case, however, the action is relevant to the current situation: in 8a and 9a, 'you' need some fresh air at the time referred to because of your earlier activity; in 8b and 9b, 'my' paper is in a mess because of someone's earlier reading of it; while in 10, a period of two years will be complete when next Christmas comes. (See notes on the 'perfect' forms, page 73.)

Present and past perfect progressive

52 Complete the sentences with the present perfect progressive or past perfect progressive of the verbs in the list.

ask	expect	fly	give	learn	listen	look operate	point out	say	see	wait	work

- 1 At last you're here! I . . . for you for over twenty minutes.
- 2 He knows quite a lot of English. He . . . it for six years.
- 3 She finally said 'Yes'. He . . . her to marry him for years.
- 4 I think I need a break. I . . . solidly for the last three hours.
- 5 You . . . to a word I . . . , have you?
- 6 For some time now, world leaders . . . the necessity for agreement on arms reduction.
- 7 The police, who . . . trouble during the civil rights demonstration, were surprised by the eventual absence of violence.
- 8 The manager went down with pneumonia. He . . . unwell for several days.
- 9 The chairman said that the Board of Directors . . . serious thought to the possibility of entering the American market.

10 At the inquiry into the plane crash, the pilot said in evidence that he . . . this type of aircraft for ten years.

11 I know why you're having nightmares. You . . . too many horror films recently.

12 The new one-way scheme . . . for just over twelve months, and traffic has improved considerably as a result.

Verbs not normally used in progressive forms

We have seen that the distinctive characteristic of progressive forms is that they refer to actions or series of actions viewed at some point between their beginning and end, and that they indicate limited duration. There are a number of verbs whose inherent meaning is not easily compatible with the use of the progressive:

(a) verbs referring to activities of the mind, the emotions or the senses, e.g. think, believe, understand, remember, forget, wish, want, like, love, hate, notice, recognize, hear, see, feel, smell, etc.;

(b) verbs referring to a state or condition, where an essential element in the meaning of the verbs is that of permanence, e.g. contain, equal, resemble, belong, own, have (= possess), include, comprise, etc.

These two sets of verbs are rarely used in a progressive form for the reason given above—the meaning of the verbs is not easily compatible with the 'meaning' of the progressive forms.

Some of the verbs may, however, occur in the progressive form in certain circumstances:

[1] The verbs may have more than one meaning or use, and one of these meanings may be compatible with the use of a progressive form:

11a What do you think I should do? (= what is your opinion?)
11b What are you thinking about? (= what is going on in your mind at the present moment?)

12a I see you've got a new car. (= I perceive)¹

12b I'm seeing him later this evening. (= I've planned to meet him)

¹ We can also compare verbs like see and hear (referring to normal human functions, which we cannot start or stop at will) with the prepositional verbs look at and listen to (referring to actions which we can choose either to do or not to do). In a classroom, a teacher might ask his students:

Can you see the blackboard?

Are you looking at the blackboard?

Can you hear what I'm saying?

Are you listening to what I'm saying?

Part of a conversation might run as follows:

Did you hear what I said?

Well, I heard you say something, but I wasn't listening.

- [2] We may use the progressive form if we wish to stress the idea that something is happening by degrees, but in this case, the sentence nearly always contains a specific reference to the idea 'by degrees' or 'gradually':
- 13 Now that my eyes are getting used to the dark, I'm seeing things a bit more clearly.

- [3] Some of the verbs of sensation have both a transitive and an intransitive use, and it is possible to use a progressive form when the verb is used transitively:

14a This sauce tastes superb. Did you make it yourself?

14b I'm tasting the sauce to see if there's enough spice in it.

The verb 'taste' in 14a refers to a 'state' ('superb'), which is regarded as a permanent quality of this sauce; whereas in 14b, the verb refers to an activity taking place at the moment of speaking and limited in duration.

Present simple (Situations)

- 53 Answer the questions to describe this book, using the present simple tense.

- 1 How much does it weigh?
- 2 How big is it? (use the verb 'measure')
- 3 How much does it cost in your country?
- 4 How many copies do you have?
- 5 How many exercises does it contain?
- 6 Does the cover feel smooth or rough?
- 7 Does the cover look shiny or dull?
- 8 Where do the exercises on phrasal verbs come?
- 9 What type of exercise do you like best?
- 10 What does the book lack in your opinion?

States and events: present simple or progressive

- 54 Complete the sentences with the present simple or present progressive tense of the verbs in brackets. The adverbs in italics should be put in their correct position.

- 1 I (think) you already (know) my views on the matter.
- 2 I'm tired of working in an office. I (think) of changing my job.
- 3 I just (smell) your roses. They (not smell) wonderful?
- 4 I gradually (forget) all the physics I ever learnt at school.
- 5 You (see) that house over there? No, not there! You (not look) where my finger (point).
- 6 I (not hear) anything. You just (imagine) things.
- 7 The court (hear) this particular part of the evidence in private.

- 8 I just (taste) the cocktail to see if there's enough gin in it. Here! How it (taste) to you?
- 9 I (think) my daughter (see) too much of that young man these days, and I (not approve) of it.
- 10 Don't take his remarks too seriously. He's so upset that I (not think) he really (know) what he (say).
- 11 The monument (stand) on a hill overlooking the town.
- 12 You (realize) that you (stand) on my toe?
- 13 The town (have) a population of 50,000.
- 14 The resort (have) a big influx of foreign visitors this year.

Note: We do not normally use adverbs such as often, generally, sometimes, etc., with verbs in the progressive form: the ideas often and for the time being do not go easily together. Nor do we use the progressive form with adverbials denoting a certain number of occasions. We can say:

I have been ringing the doorbell for several minutes, but no one has answered.

But we do not say:

*I have been ringing the doorbell six times, but no one has answered.

We do, however, use always (constantly, perpetually, continually, forever) with a progressive form to indicate that an action or event occurs persistently and causes us irritation.

He's always asking me for money.

He's forever getting into trouble.

The 'perfect' verb forms

Present

1 John: I've read the book.

Peter: What's it like? Is it worth reading?

2 John: What on earth have you been doing? Your clothes are covered in paint.

Peter: I've been decorating the room upstairs. Come and see it. It looks marvellous.

Past

3 John: When I got there, everyone had gone home.

Peter: So you didn't meet them?

John: No, of course not.

4 When I looked at the stare my room was in, I could see it hadn't been cleaned.

Future

5 We shall have finished the repairs to your car by tomorrow morning. It will be ready for you at 11 o'clock.

The perfect forms imply two ideas:

- (a) that an action or event occurred before the time indicated by the context or situation: it has happened before now, it had happened before a certain time in the past, or it will have happened before a certain time in the future; and
- (b) that this action or event has produced, had produced, or will have produced a result or a state of affairs that is relevant to the present situation, was relevant to the past situation, or will be relevant to the future situation.

An important characteristic of perfect forms is, therefore, that they explicitly link an earlier action or event with the current situation. In examples 1 and 2, we understand that reading, doing, and decorating all occurred before now, and that each of these past actions or events has a direct relevance to the present situation: Peter asks what the book is like, Peter's clothes are covered in paint (the room, fortunately, looks marvellous!)

In 3, everyone's going home occurred before John got there, with the result that he didn't meet anyone (past); while in 4, the non-occurrence of cleaning earlier in the past meant that the earlier state of affairs remained unchanged at the time of my looking at the room (past). In 5, the garage will finish the work at some time before 11 o'clock tomorrow, by which time the repairs to my car will be in a state of completion (future).

In each case, the time of the action or event is irrelevant, or is at least disregarded. The important elements are the occurrence of the action itself and the current results or state of affairs produced by it.

If we wish to direct attention specifically to the result or state produced by an earlier action without drawing attention to the activity that has produced this state, we can use the auxiliary verb 'be' together with an adjective (or passive participle):

- 6a The floor is clean.
6b The chair is broken.

While there is little ultimate difference in meaning between these sentences and:

- 7a The floor has been cleaned.
7b The chair has been broken.

our attention in 6 is directed to a present state or condition, the past action being only implied; while in 7, the focus of interest is on the past action, the present result then being implied.

Difficulties for foreign learners arise either from the fact that their own language hasn't led them to look at events in this way, or from the fact that their language contains a verb form that looks similar to the English form but operates differently.

English speakers frequently switch their specific focus of interest from one aspect of events to another:

John: I'm getting married soon.
Peter: So I've heard.

John: Oh! When did you hear about it?
Peter: Your father told me yesterday.

Peter's first reply is tantamount to his saying 'I know'. John's interest then focuses specifically on the time of the past event—when Peter heard. But we could not, even in the interests of economy, condense both Peter's replies into:

*I've heard yesterday.

In other words, we cannot combine a specific reference to the time of a past event with a verb form that implies a specific reference to its current relevance. This does not, however, mean that the use of the past simple necessarily excludes the possibility of current relevance (though it often does):

I know what your boss is like. I worked for him two years ago.

If we omit the phrase two years ago, the present perfect could (and probably would) be used, representing the 'indefinite' past:

I know what your boss is like. I've worked for him.

Perfect forms in past, present and future time

55 In each of the following sentences, the words in italics indicate the state of affairs existing at a particular time. Rewrite the sentences, using a perfect tense of the verbs in brackets, to indicate that an earlier action or event has produced, had produced, or will have produced the current result or state, e.g.

When we arrived at the stadium, the match was already in progress. (start)

When we arrived at the stadium, the match had already started.

- 1 We are in unanimous agreement on what should be done. (agree)
- 2 By the time the doctor arrived, the man was already dead. (die)
- 3 If we don't hurry, the meeting will already be in progress by the time we get there. (start)
- 4 When we got to the airport, we found that all flights were off because of the fog. (cancel—passive)
- 5 Do you think he will already be at the house when we arrive? (reach)
- 6 When she got home, she found that her parents were already in bed. (go)
- 7 By the end of next week, he will be out of hospital. (leave)
- 8 The name of the book escapes me. (forget)
- 9 They missed their plane. When they reached the airport, it was already airborne. (take off)
- 10 They are husband and wife at last. (get married)

- 56 Complete the sentences, using a perfect tense of the verbs in brackets, to suggest what has occurred, had occurred, or will have occurred to produce the situations described, e.g.
- He knows France very well. He . . . (spend)
He has spent a lot of time there.
- I don't know your friend Smith. I . . . (never meet)
 - Don't ask me what spinach tastes like. I . . . (not try)
 - When he first arrived, he couldn't speak a word of English. He . . . (never study before)
 - He went to see a doctor. He . . . for some time. (feel ill)
 - If you keep forgetting to water the plants, there won't be any by the end of the week. They . . . (all die)
 - He woke up feeling tired because he . . . (not sleep)
 - There isn't any more typing paper. It . . . (all use up—passive)
 - A: How's your son getting on at school? B: I don't really know. I . . . teachers for some time. (not speak)
 - We got home to find the whole house turned upside down. Thieves obviously . . . (break in and ransack)
 - A: Don't you know what the book is about? B: No, I . . . (not yet read)
 - A: Why didn't you come to the meeting? B: I . . . (not tell—passive)
 - I couldn't telephone you—I . . . (forget)
 - Don't worry about the telegram. It . . . (already send—passive)
 - You can stop looking for my gloves. I . . . (just find)

Present perfect and past perfect, simple or progressive (Situations)

- 57 Respond to the statements and questions, using the present perfect or past perfect simple or progressive tense. (NB. The passive form may be found suitable in some cases.)

- A: Your hands are filthy. B: Yes, I . . .
- A: What's this book doing here? B: I . . .
- A: Where do all these empty bottles come from? B: We . . .
- A: These letters are still unopened. B: Yes, I . . .
- A: All the pavements are wet. B: Yes, didn't you know? It . . .
- A: There's an ambulance at the house next door. B: I expect someone . . .
- A: Why aren't you at work today? B: I . . .
- A: You've got a lovely tan. B: Yes, I . . .
- A: You didn't come to the meeting. B: No, I thought it . . .
- A: I hear you're leaving the firm. B: Yes, I . . .

Present progressive and present perfect

- 58 In each example, one sentence (or clause) relates to an uncompleted action or series of actions in an extended period of present time, and the other relates to an action or series of actions that have occurred at some time before the present and that are relevant to the current situation. Rewrite the sentences, using the present progressive tense in one sentence (or clause) of each example, and the present perfect in the other. The adverbs in italics should be put in their correct position.
- He (write) a history of England in six volumes. Two volumes already (publish—passive)
 - The construction of the new motorway now (go ahead) quickly.
 - Three large sections already (complete—passive)
 - The talks rapidly (approach) an end. Agreement already (reach—passive) on most points.
 - We at present (take) vigorous steps to modernize our factories. Much of our obsolete plant already (scrap—passive).
 - There is nothing new in what I (say). Indeed, it often (say—passive) before.
 - The Museum currently (try) to build up its collection of medieval manuscripts. Two important private collections (acquire—passive) over the last three months.
 - The Chancellor constantly (receive) suggestions for simplifying the tax system. These on occasion (be) quite sensible.
 - The Company (push ahead) with its plans for the establishment of new supermarkets. Five new stores (open—passive) during the past twelve months.
 - The Government apparently (win) the fight against inflation. A steady fall (record—passive) over the last six months.
 - Troops still (have to) deal with sporadic outbreaks of violence, although the situation now (quieten down) considerably.

The use of perfect tenses appears to create special difficulties for foreign learners in sentences like the following:

- 8a He has never met you before. (during the whole of past time and up to the present)
8b That's the second time someone has interrupted me this evening. (during the whole of this evening and up to now)
9a I first spoke to him last Friday. I had never met him before. (during the whole of previous time and up to then—last Friday)
9b There was a knock at the door. It was the second time someone had interrupted me that evening. (during the whole of that evening and up to then—the time of the knock at the door)

The present perfect in sentences 8a and 8b automatically implies 'until now', while in 9a and 9b the past perfect indicates 'until that time in the past'. The present perfect is also used to refer to similar events in the future:

- 10 I'm meeting an old friend next week. It'll be the first time we've met for ten years.

Present perfect (Situations)

- 59 Answer the questions, using the present perfect tense.
- 1 What films have you seen this month?
 - 2 What new places have you visited this year?
 - 3 What new buildings have been completed in your town during the year?
 - 4 How many cigarettes have you smoked today?
 - 5 How much money have you spent this week?
 - 6 What different types of lesson have you had today?
 - 7 How many phone calls have you made since the beginning of this week?
 - 8 What has your weather been like this month?
 - 9 How many holidays have you spent abroad over the past six years?
 - 10 Which of your friends haven't you seen for some time?
 - 11 How long have you lived in your present house?
 - 12 What articles have you lost during the past year?
 - 13 How long have you been learning English?
 - 14 How many questions have you answered so far?
 - 15 How long has it taken to complete this exercise?

for and since

The perfect tenses are used with for, together with a phrase denoting a period of time, to indicate the duration or continuance of an action or state of affairs up to the time specified by the context or situation:

11a I've lived (or I've been living) in London for twelve years. (up to the present time)

11b By the end of 1970, I'd lived (or I'd been living) in London for two years.

11c By the end of 1995, I shall have lived (or I shall have been living) in London for seventeen years.

The present perfect and past perfect tenses are used with since, together with a phrase or clause denoting the beginning of an action or state of affairs, to indicate the continuance of that action or state from the time specified until the present time, or until the time specified in the past:

12a I've lived in London since | 1960
| I was 21.

12b At the age of 40, he decided to move to the north of England. He had (up to that time) lived in London since he was 21, and had some misgivings about moving.

Since is also used as in 12a and 12b after the construction. It's + period of time:

13a It's ten years since I met him.

However, the present perfect is also occasionally found after since in such sentences:

13b It's ten years since I've met him.

While there is little, if any, difference between these two sentences, we could perhaps make a distinction in emphasis (or focus of interest) by means of a paraphrase:

a I last met him ten years ago. (the speaker is thinking primarily of the time of the last meeting)

b I haven't met him for ten years. (the speaker is thinking of the length of time that has elapsed)

Present perfect with since

60 Rewrite the sentences, using the past simple tense for one of the verbs in each example, and the present perfect tense for the remaining verbs. The adverbs in italics should be put in their correct position.

- 1 More people (buy) properties abroad since exchange controls (abolish—passive).
- 2 The students' work (show) a striking improvement since the new teacher (take over) the class.
- 3 Since British Rail (introduce) its new fares structure, more people (take) to travelling by train.
- 4 Since I (make) my report last year, there (be) a steady improvement in the Company's trading position. The performance of our overseas branch, which now (establish—passive) for five years, (be) particularly encouraging.
- 5 Since the last survey (make—passive) conditions (change) considerably.
- 6 Since the new laws (introduce—passive), the flow of foreign workers into the country (reduce—passive) to a trickle.
- 7 The number of unofficial strikes in the factory (go down) dramatically since the new system of incentives (institute—passive).
- 8 The railways in Britain (be) under State control since they (nationalize—passive) in 1948.
- 9 The new manager (have) many problems to solve since he (take over) six months ago.
- 10 Output of vehicles (rise) to 1 million in 1984, since when it (remain) fairly static.

for and since

61 Rewrite the sentences, using the present perfect tense with since or for, as appropriate, e.g.

He was last in touch with me three weeks ago.

He hasn't been in touch with me for three weeks.

The President last visited Britain in 1980.

The President hasn't visited Britain since 1980.

- 1 I last went to the dentist six months ago.
- 2 He last spoke to me about his plans a year ago.
- 3 When I last met him he was 15 years old.
- 4 He last wrote to me when I was in America.
- 5 It last rained three weeks ago.
- 6 The side last won a home game two months ago.
- 7 I last had a cold last winter.
- 8 I last set eyes on him when he borrowed some money from me.
- 9 The Company last made a profit in 1982.
- 10 I last went on holiday six months ago.

62 Rewrite the sentences, using since as in the example, e.g.

He was last in touch with me three weeks ago.

It's three weeks since he was in touch with me.

- 1 I last went to the dentist six months ago.
- 2 He last spoke to me about his plans a year ago.
- 3 It last rained three weeks ago.
- 4 The side last won a home game two months ago.
- 5 I last went on holiday six months ago.
- 6 I last smoked a cigarette four days ago.
- 7 They wrote ten days ago, saying they had sent the goods.
- 8 We were last living all under one roof a long time ago.
- 9 I last read the book such a long time ago that I've forgotten what it's about.
- 10 He last visited us it seems ages ago.

Simple and progressive perfect forms (see also page 69)

14a Go out and get some fresh air! You've been sitting there reading all morning

14b Look at the mess my paper's in! Who's been reading it?

In 14a, the activity of sitting began at some earlier time and is still in progress at the time when the remark is made, whereas in 14b, the verb draws attention to the duration of an activity that occurred before the time of speaking and which is not now taking place. In both cases, however, the action is relevant to the current situation: 'you' need some fresh air now because of your sitting reading all morning; 'my' paper is in a mess because of someone's earlier reading of it.

There are three points to note here:

- [1] In sentences like 14a, it would be possible to use the simple perfect form, because the phrase all morning itself expresses the idea of duration:

Go out and get some fresh air! You've sat there reading all morning.

The use of the progressive form in this sentence is largely a matter of emphasis—it focuses attention on the duration of the activity. (See page 64 on the progressive forms.)

- [2] The choice may be determined by either the nature of the action (15a, 15b) or the meaning of the verb (16):

15a Joan: Ouch!

John: What've you done?

Joan: I've just cut my finger.

Joan would not reply 'I've been cutting my finger'—the accident is the work of a moment. We can contrast this with:

15b John: Why are you crying?

Joan: I've been cutting up onions for the last ten minutes.

On the other hand, the meaning of some verbs expresses the idea of duration, and the choice between simple and continuous may be an open one:

16 I've lived | been living | in London for five years.

- [3] In other cases, the choice may depend on the contrast between completed and uncompleted action:

Who's been reading my paper?

Although the activity of reading has now finished, the speaker does not suggest that someone has read the whole paper (Who has read my paper?), but simply that someone has been engaged in the process of reading it for a limited period in earlier time.

Present perfect simple or progressive

63 Complete the sentences with the simple or progressive form of the present perfect tense of the verbs in brackets. Use the short forms of the auxiliary verb where appropriate. The adverbs in italics should be put in their correct position.

- 1 I (write) the letter, so perhaps you would post it for me.
- 2 For the last two years, he (write) a history of the Civil War.

¹ Students should bear in mind that there are some verbs that are not normally used in any of the progressive forms. See page 71.

- 3 A: What you (do) for the last half hour? B: I (sit) here working at this problem.
- 4 We always (live) in a bungalow, so it will seem strange when we move into a house.
- 5 How you (keep)? Well, I hope.
- 6 You look very upset. What (happen)?
- 7 He shouldn't drive this evening. He (drink).
- 8 I'd better not drive. I already (drink) quite a lot.
- 9 The meat must be nearly ready. It (cook) for nearly an hour.
- 10 You (not finish) that book yet? You (read) it for more than a week.
- 11 I wonder if John (forget) my number. I (expect) him to call for the past two hours.
- 12 I'm sorry we're late. You (wait) long?
- 13 A: How long (know) you the truth? B: I only just (find out), but I (find out) a lot of other things just recently.
- 14 If he (ask) me that question once, he (ask) me a dozen times.

Present perfect in adverbial clauses of time referring to future

17 You can go when you've finished your work.

In adverbial clauses of time referring to future, we use one of the present tenses (see page 60). We do not use shall or will in a predictive sense in such clauses. The conjunctions commonly used to introduce time clauses are: when, as soon as, before, after, until, once, by the time (that), the moment (that).

In some sentences, there may be little difference in meaning between the present simple and the present perfect in the time clause:

18 I shall leave as soon as the meeting ends.
has ended.

In other cases, however, there are two factors that appear to operate in determining an English speaker's choice:

- [1] The perfect forms indicate that an action or event occurs before the time indicated by the context. We can, therefore, distinguish between:

19a Come over and see us when our guests leave.

19b Come over and see us when our guests have left.

Sentence 19a might suggest that the arrival of one set of visitors will coincide with the leaving of the other, whereas 19b clearly indicates that 'our guests' will no longer be with us when our other visitors come.

A great deal depends on the meaning of the verb involved; either the present perfect or the present simple is appropriate in 18 above, while only the present perfect makes good sense in 20:

20 We can go out as soon as we've had dinner.
(not * We can go out as soon as we have dinner)

- [2] The perfect forms also indicate that an action or event has produced a result or state of affairs that is relevant to the current situation, and there is often a causal connection between the time clause and the main clause:

21 You'll feel a lot better after you've had a rest.

The conjunction after itself clearly establishes the time relationship between the two activities or events, and the present perfect is used here to establish the causal connection between these events rather than to establish a time difference between them.

Present perfect in future time clauses

- 64 Rewrite the sentences, using the imperative or a future form in one clause, and the present perfect in the other.
- 1 I (let) you know as soon as I (finish).
 - 2 (Not start) on Section 2 until you (complete) all the questions in Section 1.
 - 3 (Not make up) your mind until you (have) a chance to give the matter some thought.
 - 4 I (be) ready for some lunch by the time I (finish) digging the garden.
 - 5 We're going to Scotland next summer. It (be) the first time we (spend) a holiday there.
 - 6 You (get) used to our methods when you (work) here a bit longer. And once you (get) used to our methods, you (find) the job a lot easier.
 - 7 The builders (start) work as soon as the plans (approve)—passive.
 - 8 He (make) a very fine tennis player when he (have) a little more competitive experience.
 - 9 As soon as we (thrash out) this problem we (be able) to go ahead.
 - 10 Please (not smoke) until after the plane (take off).

Reported speech

- 65 When you have checked your answer to the above exercise, rewrite the sentences in reported speech, beginning as suggested.

- 1 I promised to . . .
- 2 The examinees were instructed not . . .
- 3 I told him not . . .
- 4 He told his wife that . . .
- 5 We told our friends . . .
- 6 The manager assured the trainee that . . .
- 7 The architect told his client that . . .
- 8 His coach was of the opinion that . . .
- 9 The chairman agreed that . . .
- 10 The air hostess asked the passengers not . . .

Past simple and past perfect: time distinctions

Much of what was said about the choice between the present simple and the present perfect in future time clauses (pages 82–3) also applies to the choice between the past simple and past perfect in past time clauses. In some sentences, there may be little difference in meaning between the two verb forms:

22 I left as soon as the meeting ended.		had ended.

--------	--	------------

If, however, we need to make a time distinction between two past events, we use the past perfect for the earlier of the two events:

23a We went out as soon as we'd had dinner.

23b When I got there, everyone had gone home.

We also use the past perfect if we wish to establish a causal connection between two clauses, even when a time distinction between two events is already made clear by a conjunction:

24 After he had given the police his name and address, he was allowed to go.

We could paraphrase the time clause in 24 in either of two ways:

When the police were in possession of the necessary information, . . . (this expresses the current relevance of his having given his name and address)

Because the police were in possession of the necessary information, . . . (this expresses the causal connection)

If we wish to list a number of past events simply as a sequence, and if the time distinction between these events is made clear by words like after, before, first, next, later, etc., we can use a succession of past simple forms:

It was a very busy evening for us. First the Smiths came for cocktails, and we were later joined for dinner by the Joneses. Shortly after the Joneses arrived, we got a phone call from the Robinsons to say they couldn't come. We ate an enormous meal, and then looked at some slides of our holiday in Majorca. At 11.30 the Joneses left in a hurry to catch the last bus, and half an hour later the Smiths called a taxi to take them home.

In noun clauses, following the past tense of verbs like realize, know, think, etc., the past perfect contrasts in meaning with the past simple:

25a I

realized		knew
thought		he had acted stupidly.

25b I

realized		knew
thought		he (sometimes) acted stupidly.

In 25a, the noun clause (in italics) refers to something already done before the act of realizing, knowing or thinking, whereas in 25b, it refers to what was a recurrent feature of the situation at that time in the past.

In adjectival (relative) clauses, a similar distinction applies:

26a He apologized for any trouble he had caused.

26b He (generally) apologized for any trouble he caused.

The past perfect is, of course, used quite regularly in all three types of clause mentioned (adverbial, noun, and adjectival) when associated with for and since:

27a He dropped out of the race after he had been running for only five minutes.

We hardly recognized each other, because we hadn't met since we were quite young.

We immediately recognized each other, although we hadn't met for years.

27b We all knew he had been drinking heavily since his wife died.

27c The divers came across a wreck that had lain on the sea bed for over 200 years.

The past perfect (like other perfect tenses) is also frequently used in association with the adverbs already, just, yet, still, and before:

28a When I got there, the meeting had already		just started

28b When I last spoke to him, he hadn't yet		heard the result.

28c He particularly wanted to visit London because he had never been there before.

Past simple and past perfect

66 Rewrite the sentences, using the past simple or past perfect of the verbs in brackets, as appropriate. The adverbs in italics should be put in their correct position.

- 1 We (get down) to business as soon as we (introduce—passive) to each other.
- 2 When Queen Victoria (die) in 1901, she (reign) for over 60 years.
- 3 Once they (settle) the agenda, the committee (circulate) it to all members of the society.
- 4 Nothing (move—passive) in the room until the police (take) photographs.
- 5 He (refuse) to sign the agreement until after certain points (clear up—passive).
- 6 We all (realize) what a lucky escape we (have).
- 7 A friend of mine (return) to his house after a holiday to find it (break into—passive).
- 8 None of his teachers (understand) how he (manage) to fail the examination.
- 9 I (write) to the suppliers asking why the goods (not arrive) yet. They (reply) to say that they already (send—passive).

- 10 I (call) at the manager's office, but (discover) I just (miss) him. He (go out) for lunch.
- 11 A search party (set out) to look for the two climbers, who (leave) their hotel early that morning and who still (not return).
- 12 The troops (have) great difficulty in breaking through the defences, which (strengthen—passive) considerably during the preceding month.
- 13 The scientist suddenly (see) the answer to the problem that (occupy) his mind for the last two months.
- 14 The team (win) the game against a side that previously (not beat—passive) at home that season.
- 15 The Company (decide) to continue with a design that (stand) the test of time.
- 67 Rewrite the sentences, using the past simple tense for one verb in each example, and the past perfect for the remaining verb or verbs. Any adverbs in italics should be placed in their correct position.
- The results last term (be) better than anyone (expect).
 - What (happen) next was just what everyone (fear).
 - We eventually (arrive) at a solution, but not the one we (envisage).
 - Not one person (agree) with him. This was something he (not anticipate).
 - Ten o'clock, and the climbers (be) already near the summit. They (make) better progress than they ever (dare) to hope for.
 - No one (seem) to know exactly what arrangements (make—passive) for accommodation.
 - The stop-watch (say) three minutes, fifty-eight seconds—he (break) the world record. He (succeed) in doing what previously (think—passive) impossible.
 - Now (begin) the exploration of a territory that no European ever (set) foot on before.
 - The motorist (discover) to his relief that he (not take) the wrong road after all.
 - The Government (find) itself forced to adopt policies it earlier (reject).

Past perfect

- 68 Replace the non-finite clauses in italics with finite clauses,¹ using the past perfect tense. Suitable conjunctions have been suggested where necessary. (NB. Since is used to introduce a clause of reason in these examples, not a clause of time.)
- He gave up hope of passing the examination, having already failed it twice. (since)

¹ For an explanation of these terms, see the Appendix, pages 264–5.

- Having made quite sure* that everything was ready for an emergency blast-off, the astronauts stepped out of the lunar module and on to the moon's surface. (when)
- The two parties decided to break off negotiations, having come no nearer to a solution during three days of continuous discussion. (since)
- Mr Smith retired at the age of 70, having spent nearly 40 years with the Company. (after)
- I was amazed when he accepted a drink, having always assumed that he was a teetotaler. (since)
- He lost interest in his job, having failed to obtain promotion. (since)
- The MP resigned through ill health, after having represented his constituency for over 25 years.
- I had to get a new passport, my old one having expired. (since)
- The newspaper finally ceased publication, its circulation having dropped steadily over a period of years. (since)
- The coin was something of a rarity, only a small number having ever been put into circulation. (as)

Past perfect in reported speech

In reported speech the past perfect may represent any of three tenses in direct speech, according to the context:

- 'I've lost my wallet.' (present perfect)
= He said he had lost his wallet.
- 'I lost my wallet yesterday.' (past simple)
= He said he had lost his wallet the previous day.
- 'When I got home, I found I had lost my wallet.'
= He said that when he got home, he found he had lost his wallet.

Note that in sentence 3 it is not necessary to change the past simple got and found, and it is impossible to change the past perfect had lost—we have reached the limits of the verb tense system. The relationship between the tenses is clear from the context, and we are hardly likely to misinterpret the report as representing:

*'When I get home I find I have lost my wallet.'

- 69 Write the letter which Felix received from Marie-Laure, based on the following report, paying special attention to your rendering of the verbs which appear in the past perfect tense.

Felix received a disturbing letter from Marie-Laure, and phrases from it were passing through his head as he talked to Mildred. Marie-Laure, as it turned out, was still in Singapore. She was having second thoughts about going to India. She did not, she said, want to pursue him if he found her a nuisance. It was still possible for her to stay in Singapore. So much had been unspoken between them, and at the time it had not mattered. He had been thoroughly English, and though this was rather beautiful it was something for which she now had to pay. He must forgive her for asking for definitions. But she did not want to die of being quiet and reasonable. Did he want to see her again or not? He had said, when they parted, that he did, and he had said it with a fervour. On that fervour she had been living ever since. But had he spoken merely to smooth over a distressing parting? Now that he was back in England she would perhaps seem someone far off and unreal. There would be perhaps girls in England, a girl, indeed he had once hinted it, who would make him forget his Marie-Laure. Yet when she thought of their last time together she felt that there must be for them another time. She had never positively said it—but in case he had not understood, and for fear of perishing by a mistake, let her say it now: she loved him, she wanted to marry him, she wanted to be with him forever. All she asked of him now was some response, however vague, something quite non-committal: but which might help her to decide.

(from An Unofficial Rose by Iris Murdoch)

For use of the past perfect in unreal conditions, see exercises 81–85.

Conditional sentences

Introduction

- 0 If you heat ice, it melts.
 1 If we catch the 10 o'clock train, we shall (can, may, etc.) get there by lunch-time.
 2 If we caught the 10 o'clock train, we would (could, might, etc.) get there by lunch-time.
 3 If we had caught the 10 o'clock train, we would (could, might, etc.) have got there by lunch-time.

There are many possible sequences of tense in conditional sentences, but the examples above represent perhaps the four commonest and the most useful ones to learn initially. Each of the sentences may be divided into two parts:

- 0a If you heat ice
 b it melts
 1a If we catch the 10 o'clock train
 b we shall get there by lunch-time 2a If we caught the 10 o'clock train
 b we would get there by lunch-time 3a If we had caught the 10 o'clock train
 b we would have got there by lunch-time

Part a of each sentence (introduced by if) is called a conditional clause. It states the condition that must be satisfied before part b may be true. Part b of each sentence is called the main (principal) clause. The two parts of each sentence may be written in reverse order with no change in meaning, though with a slight change in emphasis:

0 Ice melts if you heat it.

- 1 We shall get there by lunch-time if we catch the 10 o'clock train.
 2 We would get there by lunch-time if we caught the 10 o'clock train.
 3 We would have got there by lunch-time if we had caught the 10 o'clock train.

It is worth noting that in these four sentences the conditional clause does not contain a conditional verb form.

Type 0: cause and effect

- a If you heat ice, it melts.
 b If I make a promise, I keep it.

These sentences are statements of universal truth or general validity, and in this type of sentence, if corresponds closely in meaning to whenever. Statements in this form commonly appear in factual discussions or explanatory (particularly scientific and technical) material. The tenses in both the conditional and the main clause are the same. Sentence b may be written in the past tense with a similar correspondence between the verb forms in the two clauses:

- c If I made a promise, I kept it.

Situations

- 70 Answer the questions with conditional sentences like a or b, e.g.
 What happens if you heat ice?
 If you heat ice, it melts.

Note: In this example, you is equivalent to one. In the reply, therefore, we also use you, (not I).

- 1 What happens if flowers don't get any water?
- 2 What must a motorist do if the traffic lights are at red?
- 3 What materials do you need if you want to write a letter? (you = one)
- 4 What do you like to drink if you're very thirsty? (you = you)
- 5 Who do businessmen go to see if they want to borrow money?
- 6 What do you expect a teacher to do if you make a mistake?
- 7 What must one have if one wants to visit a foreign country?
- 8 Who do people go to see if they feel ill?
- 9 What happens if there is a power failure?
- 10 How do people dress in your country if they work in an office?

Type I: open conditions

a If we catch the 10 o'clock train, we shall (can, may, etc.) get there by lunch-time.

b If you wake up before me, give me a call.

In these sentences, the conditional clauses represent 'open' conditions; that is, conditions that may or may not be fulfilled. We make such statements when the action or event mentioned in the conditional clause is being actively considered, or is under discussion, or appears likely to happen. Such statements can even be comments on decisions already taken.

Conditions of this sort are sometimes labelled 'probable', but it is important to note that the probability of the condition being fulfilled often exists only in the mind of the speaker. If, for example, it seems likely that someone is going to do something foolish or dangerous, we give a warning:

If you touch that plate, you'll burn your hand.

Only a fool would fulfil the condition in these circumstances.

The commonest sequence of tenses in this type of sentence is:

(If) present tense, (Main) Future (or Modal verb) or Imperative

Note that will and shall are not used in a predictive sense in the conditional clause, even though it is the future that is referred to.

Basic forms (Situations)

71 Write conditional sentences like a or b above, using the given fact in your conditional clause, and adding a suitable completion, e.g.

He's thinking of going to England.

If he goes to England, he will have to learn English.

- 1 It looks as if those shoes in the window are my size.
- 2 Don't drop that vase!
- 3 It looks like being fine tomorrow.
- 4 My father has suggested that I change my job.
- 5 It seems that we'll be late for the theatre.
- 6 Don't lose my library book!
- 7 You may meet some friends of mine in London.
- 8 He expects to pass his exam.
- 9 They're hoping it will be a baby boy.
- 10 I anticipate getting a rise in salary next year.

Type I: variations

a If we should miss the 10 o'clock train, we shan't get there till after lunch. The introduction of should (sometimes stressed) in the conditional clause has the effect of making it seem less likely that the condition will be fulfilled. It is possible to substitute by any chance for should, without changing the meaning:

If by any chance we miss the 10 o'clock train, we shan't get there till after lunch.

We may call this a condition of remote possibility, and this variation can be used in any conditional clause of this first type. Note that only should (never 'would') is used in this way.

b If you will reserve seats, we shall be sure of a comfortable journey.

We saw earlier that will is not used in a predictive sense in the conditional clause in conditionals of Type I, even though the sentence has a future time reference. In the above sentence, will in the conditional clause is not an auxiliary indicating future; it is a modal verb, and introduces the idea of 'your' agreeing, or being willing, to do what is suggested.¹ We cannot use this construction in the following sentence:

If he gets my letter in time, he'll be able to change his plans.

We cannot say *If he will get my letter in time', since 'he' can hardly exercise any willingness or unwillingness to get it. Students must, therefore, be careful to use will in this way only where the context will support the idea of co-operation, agreement, or willingness on the part of the subject.

should and will in conditional clauses

72 Rewrite the sentences, substituting for the words in italics a verb form as in a above (Nos. 1-5) or as in b (Nos. 6-10).

If by any chance you die before retiring age, your widow will receive your pension for a period of 7 years after your death.
If you should die before retiring age, your widow will receive your pension for a period of 7 years after your death. (Nos. 1-5)
I'll cook the meal if you are prepared to do the washing up.
I'll cook the meal if you'll do the washing up. (Nos. 6-10)

- 1 If by any chance your car needs any attention during the first twelve months, take it to an authorized dealer.
- 2 If by any chance I am a little late coming home, don't wait up for me.
- 3 If the baby wakes up (though I doubt he will), give him some warm milk.
- 4 If by some unlucky chance the talks break down, there could be a serious international crisis.
- 5 If by some remote chance he dares to show his face again, I shall give him a piece of my mind!

¹ It is also possible to use the tentative or 'polite' form would in this conditional clause, the rest of the sentence being unchanged: If you would reserve seats, we shall be sure of a comfortable journey. See also page 34 and page 96.

- 6 If he is willing to accept the nomination, a lot of electors will vote for him.
- 7 If you are prepared to take the trouble to read his letter carefully, you will see what he means.
- 8 If you are agreeable to waiting a few more minutes, the doctor will see you without your making an appointment.
- 9 If my father is willing to give me permission, I shall spend a few months abroad.
- 10 What will you do if he refuses to give you permission?

Type 1: alternative forms

- a Set your alarm clock, and you won't oversleep.
- b Set your alarm clock, or (else) you 'll oversleep.

In these sentences, the imperative construction is equivalent to an 'if' clause. We can rewrite the sentences, using if:

- a If you set your alarm clock, you won't oversleep.
- b If you don't set your alarm clock, you 'll oversleep.

Note that the conjunction 'and' implies a verb form in the conditional clause of the same sign (positive or negative) as the imperative; whereas 'or (else)' implies a verb form of the opposite sign. Thus in a, 'Set . . . and . . .' becomes 'If you set . . .'; whereas in b, 'Set . . . or . . .' becomes 'If you don't set . . .?'

73 Rewrite the sentences, beginning with the imperative form of the verbs in italics.

- 1 If you give him a little encouragement, he'll work really hard.
- 2 If you take a pill, you won't be seasick.
- 3 If you don't remember your wife's birthday, she'll be upset.
- 4 If you send her some roses, she'll forgive you.
- 5 If you don't put on some suntan oil, you'll get sunburnt.
- 6 If you don't tell me the truth at once, I'll never trust you again.
- 7 If you just say you're sorry, we can forget the whole incident.
- 8 If you're not firm with the children, they'll misbehave.
- 9 If you lend me a fever, I'll pay you back tomorrow.
- 10 If you don't practise speaking English regularly, you'll never become really fluent.

Review of Type 1 conditions

74 Complete the sentences, following one of the patterns for conditionals of Type 1.

- 1 We'll just manage to catch the train if . . .
- 2 If I see him again, I . . .

- 3 I will accept your explanation only if . . .
- 4 If my bank manager will lend me the money, . . .
- 5 What will happen if . . .?
- 6 If you don't hear from me by next Friday, . . .
- 7 If your work continues to improve, . . .
- 8 . . . only if you will promise not to tell anyone else.
- 9 Look up the answer in the key only if . . .
- 10 What will he say if . . .?
- 11 If the worst should come to the worst, . . .
- 12 Give me time and . . .

Type 2: tentative, hypothetical and unreal conditions (present or future time reference)

- a If we caught the 10 o'clock train, we *would*¹ (could, might, etc.) get there by lunch-time.
- b If I came into a fortune, I would give up working.
- c If I knew how it worked, I could tell you what to do.

In these sentences, the conditional clauses represent what is a possible, b hypothetical/imaginary, or c contrary to present fact. The verb form in the conditional clause represents the attitude of the speaker towards the condition; it does not represent time, which is indicated (if at all) by other elements in the context or situation.

Sentence a is analogous to Type 1 ('If we catch . . ., we shall get . . .'), but it is more suppositional. The speaker either regards catching that train as improbable, or he wishes to put forward in a more tentative or 'polite' way the suggestion of catching it. It does not necessarily follow that the condition is in fact unlikely to be fulfilled.

Sentence b, on the other hand, is much more hypothetical: it is a form of day-dreaming in which we all indulge at times. Sentence c presents us with a totally imaginary (or unreal) situation with reference to the time of speaking: it implies that I don't, in fact, know how it works, so I can't tell you what to do. Note that the past tense is used here to indicate present unreality.

The three sentences are formally identical: they all have the same sequence of tenses:

(If) past tense, (Main) conditional

However, contextually (i.e. in their meaning and use) they are rather different. They represent three points on a scale of decreasing probability, from a suppositional or tentative but possible, to b hypothetical but not impossible, to c contrary to present fact, and hence unreal. Note that the conditional tense is not used in the conditional clause.

¹ It is, of course, possible to use should as well as would after I/we, but would (or 'd') is probably commoner.

Tentative suggestions and hypothetical conditions

75 Complete the sentences, following the pattern of Type 2 conditionals. You should find that many of your sentences can be interpreted as 'tentative' suggestions.

- 1 If you explained the situation to your solicitor, he would ...
- 2 Perhaps he ... if you spoke to him yourself.
- 3 If you changed your job, you ...
- 4 If you went to see a doctor, he ...
- 5 If we bought a house in the country, we ...
- 6 If they came to see us in London, we ...
- 7 I'm sure he would take the job on if ...
- 8 If you took the shoes back to the shop, they ...
- 9 If you read the book a second time, you ...
- 10 If we all pooled our resources, we ...

Situations

76 Answer the questions with conditional statements of Type 2.

- 1 What cities or other places of interest would you visit if you went to America? (Russia? Brazil? Australia? etc.)
- 2 What would you do (or not do) if you could live your life over again.
- 3 What would you say or do if someone called you a fool?
- 4 If a visitor came to your town, what places would you advise him to see?
- 5 What famous person would you like to meet if you had the chance?
- 6 Which country would you choose if you decided to live abroad?
- 7 What changes would you make in your house, assuming you had the money?
- 8 What would you do if you saw a house on fire?
- 9 What would you do if you had something stolen?
- 10 Which books or gramophone records would you take with you if you went to live on a desert island?

Unreal conditions (present time)

77 Write sentences like example c above (page 93), based on the given facts, e.g.

*We don't have any wood, so we can't light a fire.
If we had some wood, we could light a fire.*

- 1 Since she doesn't love him, she won't marry him.
- 2 Our teacher explains things clearly, so we understand his lessons.

- 3 As I haven't a watch, I can't tell you the time.
- 4 Britain doesn't export enough, so she has a constant balance of payments problem.
- 5 Since I know the meaning of the word, I don't have to look it up.
- 6 This exercise is easy, so everyone will get the correct answers.
- 7 I know the answer so I can tell you.
- 8 We haven't any matches so we can't light the fire.

wish, 'd rather, It's time + noun clause with past tense

As we saw in example c above (page 93), the idea of something contrary to present fact is conveyed by the use of the past tense in the conditional clause. We also use the past tense to refer to present unreality after the verb wish ('if only' also expresses the wish of the speaker), and after expressions like I'd rather and It's time:

- a* I wish (that) I were rich! (If only I were rich!)
- b* I'd rather you told me frankly what you think.¹
- c* It's time (It's about time, It's high time) we left.

We never use the present tense or a future form after wish. We use either the past tense as illustrated above, or would (not 'will') to invite someone's co-operation or to indicate that people or events frustrate our desires:

- I wish you would hurry up!
I wish it would stop raining! (If only it would stop raining!)

Compare:

I hope it will stop raining soon.

Note: The subjunctive hardly survives as a distinctive form nowadays, except in the past tense of to be in conditional clauses, when were is used for all Persons: If I/you/he/she/it/we/they were.

Past tense after wish

78 Write out the sentences, using the verbs in brackets in the correct tense. Then write a conditional sentence based on each answer, e.g.

I wish I (earn) more money.
I wish I earned more money. Why? Because if I earned more money, I'd be able to buy a bigger car.

- 1 I wish I (can) speak several languages.
- 2 I wish I (have) a car.
- 3 She wishes her parents (approve) of her boy friend.
- 4 I wish I (be) older (or younger).
- 5 I wish you (like) 'pop' music.

¹ Note that we use the bare infinitive when 'd rather is immediately followed by a verb: I'd rather tell him myself. See page 153.

Past tense after wish, 'd rather, It's time

79 For each of the sentences below, write a new sentence as similar as possible in meaning to the original sentence, but using the words given in brackets, e.g.

I would like to be rich. (wish)
I wish I were rich.

- 1 Please hurry up! (wish)
- 2 It's very late. We really ought to be leaving. (time)
- 3 It would be nice to know his opinion. (wish)
- 4 Please keep it a secret for the time being. (rather)
- 5 It's a pity that you're going away so soon. (wish)
- 6 Would you mind not smoking at table? (rather)
- 7 He really should find himself a regular job. (time)
- 8 My parents would prefer us to live in the country. (rather)
- 9 When is the weather going to improve? (high time)
- 10 Please stop making so much noise! (wish)

Type 2: variations

a If we were to miss the 10 o'clock train, we wouldn't get there till after lunch.

The use of were to in the conditional clause sometimes has the effect of emphasizing the suppositional nature of the condition, and is in some ways analogous to the use of should in conditional clauses in Type 1: we can often substitute by any chance without changing the meaning:

If by any chance we missed the 10 o'clock train, we wouldn't get there till after lunch.

Were to is used for all Persons, and this variation can be used in any conditional clause of this second type.¹

b If you would reserve seats, we would be sure of a comfortable journey. In this sentence, would is not part of a conditional tense; it is a modal verb, and represents a more tentative (or 'polite') form of will as used in conditional clauses of Type 1 (see p. 90). It introduces the idea of 'your' agreeing, or being willing, to do what is suggested. We cannot use this construction in the following sentence:

If he got my letter in time, he would be able to change his plans.

¹ It is important to distinguish between were to used as part of a conditional construction, and the different forms am/is/are to and was/were to, used to indicate obligation. The difference is illustrated in the following pair of sentences:

I If he were to get in touch with me, I could explain.

= Supposing he got in touch with me, ...

2 If he was to get in touch with me, why hasn't he done so?

= If the arrangement was that he should get in touch with me, why ...

We cannot say *'If he would get my letter in time', since 'he' can hardly exercise any willingness or unwillingness to get it. Students must, therefore, be careful to use would in this way only where the context will support the idea of co-operation, agreement, or willingness on the part of the subject.

Review of Type 2 conditions

80 Complete the sentences, following one of the patterns for conditionals of Type 2.

- 1 What ... if you were in my shoes?
- 2 If ... , I wouldn't think of changing my job.
- 3 If my father were to say such a thing to me, ...
- 4 How would you react if ... ?
- 5 If only you would read more carefully, ...
- 6 If you were to stay in England just a few months longer, ...
- 7 Do you think I would be telling you this if ... ?
- 8 I wouldn't buy the picture even if ...
- 9 It might only add to our difficulties if ...
- 10 Even if he knew the truth, what ... ?
- 11 If only he would admit he was wrong, ...
- 12 I'd much rather you ...

Type 3: unreal conditions (past time reference)

a If we had caught the 10 o'clock train, we would (could, might, etc.) have got there by lunch-time.

This sentence is completely hypothetical, and represents what is contrary to past fact. In this case, the past perfect tense is used to indicate past unreality—we didn't catch the 10 o'clock train, so we didn't get there by lunch-time.

This is analogous to the use of the past tense to indicate present unreality in Type 2*c*, and tense usage after the verb wish follows the same pattern: we use the past perfect to refer to something wished-for in the past:

I wish you had told me before. (but you didn't)

Variations on sentence a are not very common, though sentences like the following are occasionally met with:

b If you were to have asked me, I would have been only too willing to help.

Unreal conditions (past time)

- 81 Write sentences like a above, based on the given facts, e.g.
 As you didn't explain your problem to me, I wasn't able to help you.
 If you had explained your problem to me, I would have been able to help you.
- 1 He didn't give me his number, so I couldn't telephone him.
 - 2 As the sun was in the right direction, the photographs came out very well.
 - 3 The shop didn't pack the goods properly, so they got damaged.
 - 4 He didn't remember what had been said because he wasn't paying attention.
 - 5 He wasn't able to answer all the questions, so he didn't pass the examination.
- 82 Write sentences like a above, basing your conditional clause on the given fact, and adding a suitable main clause, e.g.
 She didn't take the medicine.
 If she had taken the medicine, she would have felt much better.
- 1 He passed his examination.
 - 2 We didn't get there on time.
 - 3 She didn't read the book.
 - 4 We understood what he was saying.
 - 5 The rocket didn't go into orbit.

- 83 Repeat the above exercise, basing your main clause on the given fact, and adding a suitable conditional clause, e.g.
 She didn't take the medicine.
 She would have taken the medicine if it hadn't tasted so awful.

Unreal conditions (past and present time)

It is possible for each of the two clauses in a conditional sentence to have a different time reference, and in this case we get a 'mixed' type of sentence:

If we had brought a map with us, we would know which road to take.

The conditional clause represents a situation contrary to a past fact (we didn't bring a map), and the main clause represents a situation contrary to a present fact (we don't know which road to take).

- 84 Write sentences like the example above, based on the given facts.
- 1 He failed his examination last year, so he is taking it again in June.
 - 2 You didn't remember to bring a corkscrew, so we can't open the wine.
 - 3 We missed the train, so we're waiting on this cold platform.
 - 4 There was a very sharp frost last night, so we're able to go skating today.
 - 5 Since you didn't take my advice, you're in a difficult position now.

Review of Type 3 conditions

- 85 Complete the sentences, following one of the patterns for conditionals of Type 3.

- 1 I would have enjoyed the party much more if . . .
- 2 It . . . if the sea hadn't been so rough.
- 3 Would you have been able to come next Tuesday if . . . ?
- 4 If you had taken my advice, . . .
- 5 If I had realized that you were really serious in what you said, . . .
- 6 If it hadn't been for the fact that his father has influence, . . .
- 7 If he were to have told me the truth in the first place, . . .
- 8 Would you have lent him the money if . . . ?
- 9 What difference would it have made, even if . . . ?
- 10 If the fire brigade had arrived but a quarter of an hour earlier, . . .
- 11 I'm sure she wouldn't have married him if . . .
- 12 If . . . , we would have left without them.

Inversion

An inversion of subject and verb may be used instead of if in the conditional clause of some types of sentences:

- 1 Should you need my help again, just give me a ring.
 = If you should need my help again, . . .
- 2 Were the Government to go back on this election pledge, there would be a revolt among back-benchers.
 = If the Government were to go back . . .
- 3 Had I known you were ill, I would have visited you.
 = If I had known you were ill, . . .

The first and third types of inversion occur in both the written language and (though less commonly) the spoken. The second type, however, is generally confined to the written language. All occur most commonly when 'it' is the subject and 'be' is the verb in the conditional clause.

- 86 Rewrite the sentences, making an inversion in the conditional clauses, as in the examples above.
- 1 If you should need to consult me again, you can contact me at this number.
 - 2 The hospital can switch to an emergency generator if the need should arise.
 - 3 If you should be late once again, you'll lose your job.
 - 4 If it were not for the fact that his father is on the board of directors, he would never have got the job.
 - 5 If such a merger were ever to be proposed, it would undoubtedly be referred to the Monopolies Commission.
 - 6 If it were not for the expense involved, I would go there by air.
 - 7 If it hadn't been for your laziness, you could have finished the work by now.
 - 8 If he had taken a little more time to think, he might have acted more sensibly.
 - 9 If the attempted assassination had succeeded, there would almost certainly have been civil and political chaos.
 - 10 If the driver of the train hadn't reacted so quickly, the accident would have been much worse.

Conjunctions introducing conditional clauses

The conditional clauses in all the examples so far have begun with if. In Type 0, if is closely related in meaning to when(ever):

If I make a promise, I keep it.

In some cases, if corresponds closely to as, since, or because:

If (as you say) you haven't done the homework, you won't be able to follow this lesson.

If can also introduce a concessive-type clause:

If you know the answer, nobody else does.

= Although you may know the answer, nobody else does.

Other conjunctions commonly used to introduce 'true' conditional clauses are illustrated in the following sentences:

Suppose (or supposing) you told him the truth, what could he do about it?

You can borrow my notes on condition (or provided) that you give them back to me tomorrow.

You can come with us, so long as (or as long as) you don't make a nuisance of yourself.

For a negative condition, we can use unless, which in many cases has the same meaning as if...not, though it is more emphatic:

He wouldn't have come unless you had invited him.

= He wouldn't have come if you hadn't invited him.

Unless is especially useful for introducing clauses that contain other negative elements, and we could not substitute if...not in the following sentence:

Don't ask me to explain unless you really don't understand.

*In case*¹ poses a rather special problem. It introduces a contingency or possibility against which a precaution is needed in advance. The difference between in case and if is illustrated in the following two sentences:

a I'm taking an umbrella in case it rains later on.

b I'll take an umbrella if it rains later on.

In a, I am taking an umbrella now, whatever the weather and even if it's fine now, so as to be prepared for the later possibility of its raining. In b, my decision whether or not to take an umbrella (later on) will depend on whether or not it is raining at the time.

Conditionals: general review

87 Complete the sentences, following any correct sequence of tenses.

- 1 If only . . . , you wouldn't now be in such a difficult position.
- 2 If . . . , tell him I'm out.
- 3 I can't understand why . . . , unless he thinks we are all fools.
- 4 If you are to succeed in your career, . . .
- 5 So long as . . . , swimming in this river is fairly safe.
- 6 If you were to explain the situation to him, I'm sure . . .
- 7 Is there any point in your coming with us if . . . ?
- 8 How . . . , if you didn't know my address?
- 9 Should Mr Smith ring up while I'm at lunch, . . .
- 10 I can't possibly advise you properly unless . . .
- 11 If . . . , I shall blame you for it.
- 12 If you knew the answer, why . . . ?
- 13 My neighbour said I could borrow his lawn-mower provided that . . .
- 14 If anything has occurred to make you change your mind, . . .
- 15 When . . . , supposing we left immediately?
- 16 Had it been anyone but you that spoke to me in such a way, . . .
- 17 How I wish . . .
- 18 Make a note of the telephone number in case you . . .
- 19 If you . . . , you have only to say so.
- 20 If you really have been studying English for so long, it's about time you . . .

¹ See exercise 23, nos. 4 & 10.

88 Finish each of the sentences in such a way that it means exactly the same as the one printed before it.

- 1 It's my opinion that you should take more exercise.
If I ...
- 2 Without his wife's constant support he would never have achieved his ambition.
If he ...
- 3 But for his presence of mind there might have been a serious accident.
If it ...
- 4 Considering all the problems, it's a miracle we succeeded.
If one ...
- 5 Without proper lessons, you could pick up a lot of bad habits.
If you ...
- 6 It would be a waste of everyone's time to discuss the question any further.
It ... if we ...
- 7 Given favourable weather, all the yachts should have reached the half-way stage by the weekend.
Provided that ...
- 8 You won't get a loan without being able to offer some security.
You ... unless ...
- 9 Follow the instructions carefully and you won't have any problems.
As long as ...
- 10 For us to have given up at that stage would have been an admission of total defeat.
If we ...

Composition topic

89 Describe the town where you live, or your place of work, or your school, incorporating (a) comments on its disadvantages or shortcomings ('If they had installed a lift in the building, we wouldn't have to walk up so many stairs'; 'If there were more cinemas in the town, it would be a livelier place'); (b) suggestions for future projects ('If the authorities improved the road system, we wouldn't get so many traffic jams'); and (c) comments on the possible outcome of ideas or plans already under discussion ('They're talking of widening the main street. If they do, a lot of houses and shops will have to come down.')

Conditionals in reported speech

- 1 'If we catch the early train, we will get there by lunch-time.'
In reported speech this becomes:
I thought that if we caught the early train, we 'd get there by lunch-time.
It can be seen that Type 1 of the conditional sentences becomes Type 2 in reported speech.
- 2a 'If we caught the early train, we 'd get there by lunch-time.'
This type of sentence represents a supposition or a tentative suggestion of what could happen at some time in the future. The tenses do not change in reported speech, since the meaning would change if we reported:
I thought that if we had caught the early train, we 'd have got there by lunch-time.
This reported version gives the impression that we didn't, in fact, catch the early train, and that we didn't get there by lunch-time. We can say only:
I suggested that if we caught the early train, we 'd get there by lunch-time.
or I suggested that if we were to catch the early train, we 'd get there by lunch-time.
- 2b 'If I came into a fortune, I 'd give up working.'
Again, the sentence is concerned with what could conceivably happen at some time in the future, and the tenses would remain unchanged in reported speech.
He said that if he came into a fortune he 'd give up working.
- 2c 'If I knew how it worked, I could tell you what to do.'
As we have already seen, this sentence differs from 2a and 2b in that it represents present unreality, (page 93), and in this case the tenses may change in reported speech:
I said that if I 'd known how it worked, I could have told him what to do.
Such changes are not essential, however, and in some cases would be incorrect:
'If I knew the answer to all your questions, I 'd be a genius.'
Although this sentence, like 2c, presents us with an imaginary (or unreal) situation, the situation in this case is conceived in general terms (i.e. without reference to a particular moment). Ideas of this nature cannot be expressed in any other form, whether reported or not.
- 3 'If we 'd caught the early train, we 'd have got there by lunch-time.'
In this type of sentence, the tenses necessarily remain the same in reported speech.
Note: 'Are you willing to help me do this job?'
This is a simple question, and should not be confused with a conditional sentence when, in reported speech, it is introduced by if (= whether):
I asked him if he was willing to help me do the job.
The subjunctive 'if he were willing' is not required, and would be incorrect if used here.

Reporting Type 1 conditions

90 When you have checked your answers to Exercise 74¹, rewrite the sentences in reported speech, using the sentence openings suggested below.

- 1 I pointed out that we ...
- 2 I promised that if ...
- 3 I made it clear that I ...
- 4 I knew that if ...
- 5 I wondered what ...
- 6 He said that if I ...
- 7 His teacher thought that if ...
- 8 He said he ... only if I ...
- 9 The students were told to ...
- 10 I wanted to have some idea of what ...
- 11 I reassured him, saying that if ...
- 12 I asked him to ...

Reporting Type 2 conditions

91 When you have checked your answers to Exercise 75¹, rewrite the sentences in reported speech, using the sentence openings suggested below.

- 1 He felt that if I ...
- 2 It was suggested that perhaps he ... if I ...
- 3 He thought that if I ...
- 4 He said that if I ...
- 5 I pointed out that if we ...
- 6 We promised that if they ...
- 7 I was sure he ...
- 8 His advice was that if I ...
- 9 My opinion was that if ...
- 10 He suggested that if ...

¹ Students may, if they wish, work from the answers suggested in the key.

The passive voice

Introduction

The passive is frequently used in English to express ideas that require a reflexive or impersonal construction in other languages, and in many cases is also used where other languages use the active. The exercises that follow are aimed at giving the student practice in a number of applications of the passive that may be new to him.

It is assumed that students will already know how to construct the passive of the finite verb forms, but the non-finite forms may be less familiar:

Infinitive	Active	Passive
Perfect Infinitive	to choose	to be chosen
Participle and Gerund	to have chosen	to have been chosen
Perfect Participle and Gerund	choosing	being chosen having chosen	having been chosen

Bearing in mind that the passive is far commoner in English than in some other languages, students must know when to use it: converting active into passive (and vice versa) may be useful for practice purposes, but the process is essentially an artificial one. The following observations may serve as a general guide:

- [1] When the active form would involve the use of an indefinite or vague pronoun or noun as subject, we generally prefer to use the passive (the agent with 'by' is not expressed):
- a I've been robbed! (Someone has robbed me!)
 - b The building had to be demolished. (They had to demolish the building.)
 - c It is assumed that they'll get married one day. (People assume that they'll get married one day.)
- Note that in c the construction with the impersonal it as subject is preferable to the active form introduced by the vague pronoun people.
- [2] The passive provides a means of avoiding an awkward change of subject in the middle of a sentence:
- The Prime Minister arrived back in London last night, and was immediately besieged by reporters. (The Prime Minister arrived back in London last night, and reporters immediately besieged him.)
- [3] The passive may be used when we wish to make a statement sound impersonal (perhaps out of modesty, or when we have some unpleasant statement to make). The management of a company might be quite happy to announce:
- The new working methods we have introduced will result in higher earnings for all workers.

They might well prefer, however, to use the passive in giving the following information, in order to avoid drawing attention to the fact that they themselves are responsible:

The new working methods that are to be introduced may result in some redundancies.

- [4] The passive is not, therefore, simply an equivalent alternative to the active. While both forms of expressing an idea may be syntactically possible, we tend to choose the passive for one of the reasons described above, or if we are interested in what happened to 'X' rather than in what 'Y' did:

a The escaped convict was arrested two days later.

b Several trees were struck by lightning in last night's storm.

(Lightning struck several trees in last night's storm.)

In a, the passive is used because we are interested in what happened to the escaped convict; and the agent is omitted, not, as in earlier examples, because it is a vague or indefinite noun, but because it is self-evident from the context.

In b, the passive form is to be preferred to the active, even though the agent is neither vague nor self-evident, again because we are more interested in what happened to the trees than in what the lightning did. In this particular case, moreover, we would hesitate to imply volition on the part of the lightning by making it the subject of a sentence in the active.

- [5] Some ideas, however, may be expressed naturally and effectively in either the active or the passive form:

a France beat England in yesterday's rugby international.

b England was beaten by France in yesterday's rugby international.

In such cases, our choice will depend on what we regard as the 'focus of interest' in the sentence.

Passive sentences without 'agents'

- 92 Rewrite the sentences in the passive, omitting the words in brackets.

- 1 (Everyone) knows this fact very well.
- 2 (They) opened the theatre only last month.
- 3 (People) will soon forget it.
- 4 (You) must write the answers in ink.
- 5 (Someone) has taken two of my books.
- 6 (We) have already filled the vacancy.
- 7 What should (one) do in such cases?
- 8 Did (they) say anything interesting?
- 9 Did (no one) ever make the situation clear to you?
- 10 (One) should keep milk in a refrigerator.
- 11 I don't think (anyone) can do it.

- 12 (They) would undoubtedly have killed him if he hadn't promised to co-operate.
- 13 (You) must finish the work by seven o'clock.
- 14 (They) are now manufacturing this type of computer in many European countries.
- 15 (No one) could possibly have known the secret.
- 16 Has (someone) made all the necessary arrangements?
- 17 Fortunately, (no one) had said anything about it.
- 18 (We) will execute all orders promptly.
- 19 (The police) kept the man in custody.
- 20 Does (someone) clean all the rooms regularly?

Passive sentences with and without 'agents'

- 93 Complete the sentences with a passive construction, using the verbs given and in the form suggested. (NB. The term 'infinitive' includes the infinitive without 'to'.)
- 1 Much of London (destroy) by fire in the seventeenth century. (Past simple)
 - 2 The man who (bite) by a snake (give) a serum. (Past perfect, past simple)
 - 3 A leader should be a man who can (respect). (Infinitive)
 - 4 Many slums (demolish) to make way for new buildings. (Present progressive)
 - 5 The police (instruct) to take firm action against hooligans. (Present perfect)
 - 6 He (save) from bankruptcy by the kindness of a friend. (Past simple)
 - 7 A cease-fire (expect) (declare) later this week. (Present simple, Infinitive)
 - 8 A great deal of research (do) into the possible causes of cancer. (Present progressive)
 - 9 The worker claimed that he (victimize) by his employers. (Past progressive)
 - 10 The tenant (evict) for not paying his rent. (Past simple)
 - 11 It (think) that the Government would do something to help. (Past perfect)
 - 12 Three hundred new houses (build) by the end of next year. (Future perfect)
 - 13 Because of a strike, work on the building had to (discontinue). (Infinitive)
 - 14 The witness strongly objected to (cross-examine). (Gerund)
 - 15 (Threaten) by a blackmailer, he immediately informed the police. (Perfect participle)

- 16 I'm not accustomed to (treat) in that way. (Gerund)
 17 The passengers ought (inform) that the train (withdraw) from service. (Perfect infinitive, Past perfect)
 18 Customers (ask) to ensure that they (give) the correct change before leaving the shop, as mistakes cannot afterwards (rectify). (Present simple, Present perfect, Infinitive)
 19 Was he very upset at (not offer) the job? (Gerund)
 20 The man was sent to prison for six months, (find) guilty of fraud. (Perfect participle)

Prepositions in passive sentences

Students will have seen, from examples in the previous exercise, that sentences in the passive form frequently contain no reference to the 'agent'. The verb in the passive may, however, like active verb forms, be followed by a variety of prepositional constructions. The following exercise will give practice in using different prepositions after verbs in the passive.

- 94 Complete the sentences with a passive construction, using the verbs given and in the form suggested, and adding a suitable preposition, e.g.
 The new proposals will be discussed at our next meeting.
 The new proposals will be discussed at our next meeting.
 1 A surcharge of 10 per cent (add) . . . patrons' bills to cover gratuities to hotel staff. (Present simple)
 2 Surplus grain (send) . . . the stricken area and (distribute) . . . the starving population. (Past simple)
 3 A meeting (arrange) . . . the Commonwealth Prime Ministers. (Present perfect)
 4 He said that he (involve) . . . an accident. (Past perfect)
 5 He wanted nothing except (leave) . . . peace. (Infinitive)
 6 Don't you think a solicitor should (consult) . . . this question? (Perfect infinitive)
 7 These tablets should (keep) . . . of the reach of children. (Infinitive)
 8 The full impact of the strike (not feel) . . . next week, by which time present stocks (exhaust). (Future, Future perfect)
 9 The two cottages now (convert) . . . one house. (Present perfect)
 10 The results of the examination (not know) . . . two months. (Future)
 11 No one had supposed that the motion would (defeat) . . . such a large majority. (Infinitive)
 12 The bridge has had (close) . . . repairs. (Infinitive)
 13 All lights must (switch off) . . . 11 p.m. (Infinitive)
 14 The goods should (handle) . . . greater care. (Perfect infinitive)
 15 You (meet) . . . the airport. (Future)

Phrasal and prepositional verbs in the passive

Some common verbs may be used in combination with adverbs to form 'phrasal verbs' with idiomatic meanings: e.g. put off = postpone. Students should take care to retain the particle with such verbs in a passive construction:

- a They will have to put off the meeting till later in the week. (Active)
 b The meeting will have to be put off till later in the week. (Passive)
 The same applies to verbs followed by a preposition:
 a We insist on punctuality in this office. (Active) b Punctuality is insisted on in this office. (Passive)

Phrasal and prepositional verbs (Situations)

95 Answer the questions, using a passive form of the verbs in brackets, together with a suitable adverbial particle (off, on, in, out, up, down, etc.), e.g.

- What generally happens to houses that are unfit to live in? (pull)
 They are generally pulled down.
 1 What must be done with a bad tooth? (pull)
 2 What has to be done with dirty crockery and cutlery at the end of a meal? (wash)
 3 What should happen if mistakes appear in a student's work? (point)
 4 What might happen if you crossed a busy road without looking? (knock)
 5 What would happen to a lighted candle if there were a sudden gust of wind? (blow)
 6 What may happen to a man who has committed his first offence? (let)
 7 What often happens if negotiations look like being unsuccessful? (break)
 8 What happens to traffic in a traffic jam? (hold)
 9 What happens to workers if they become redundant? (lay)
 10 What is done with spoken evidence given to a policeman? (take) 11 What must be done if a plan or an idea proves unworkable? (give) 12 A notice has disappeared from a noticeboard. What must have happened? (take) 13 I dropped a £10 note in the street, and can't find it. What could have happened to it? (pick) 14 No one can attend a meeting on that date. What could be done to solve the problem? (put)

Active > Passive transforms

96 Rewrite the sentences using the passive form of the verbs in italics.

- 1 They gave up the search after three hours.
- 2 They ought to have pointed out to me at the very beginning.
- 3 No one brought up that question at the meeting.
- 4 Someone should look into the matter.
- 5 It was clear that the parents had brought the child up well.
- 6 We had to put off our visit until later.
- 7 I was shocked to hear that someone had broken into your house.
- 8 Don't speak until someone speaks to you.
- 9 His bank manager turned down his request for a loan.
- 10 You must account for every penny you spent.
- 11 Someone hasn't stuck this stamp on very firmly.
- 12 Events will bear out the truth of what I'm saying.
- 13 An official held us up at the Customs for half an hour.
- 14 How can we bring about the desired result?
- 15 He hates people making fun of him. (Passive Gerund)

Passive forms of phrasal and prepositional verbs

- 97 Complete the sentences with a passive construction, using the verbs given, and in a suitable form.
- 1 The new washing machines (turn out) at the rate of fifty a day.
 - 2 When her husband died, she naturally assumed that she (provide for).
 - 3 We've had to move into a hotel while the house we've just bought (do up).
 - 4 The employee was assured of his (take on) again as soon as work was available.
 - 5 Richard always (tell off) for careless mistakes nowadays.
 - 6 The agreement had to (draw up) in the presence of two witnesses.
 - 7 Some Heads of Government now fear that negotiations (break off) before a settlement is reached.
 - 8 The chairman of the board of directors assured shareholders that the matter of the deficiency (look into) by the time the next meeting was held.
 - 9 He felt he (let down) badly by his best friend.
 - 10 The search party had little idea where to start looking, the climber's tracks (blot out) by a recent snowstorm.

Passive transforms of subject + verb + indirect object + direct object

There is one particular construction in the passive that may appear strange to students. In a sentence like the following, there are two objects, one direct and one indirect:

We shall offer a high salary to a really suitable applicant.

If this is expressed in the passive, we tend to make the indirect object the subject of the new sentence:

A really suitable applicant will be offered a high salary.

It is also possible, however, to make the direct object the subject:

A high salary will be offered to a really suitable applicant.

Our choice in such a case depends on the focus of interest: do we want to talk about what is done or to whom it is done.

Active > Passive transforms

98 Rewrite the sentences in the passive, making the words in italics the subject of the sentence or clause in which they appear.

- 1 They gave the oldest councillor the freedom of the city.
- 2 They denied access to the secret documents to all but a few.
- 3 Someone showed the child how to use the telephone.
- 4 They declared him 'persona non grata' and allowed him only forty-eight hours to leave the country. (2)
- 5 They gave him artificial respiration.
- 6 Why didn't they offer him the job?
- 7 Didn't they promise you a rise in salary at the beginning of the year?
- 8 Someone left him a legacy of £10,000.
- 9 When he looked at the stamps, he found they had sold him forgeries.
- 10 What did they pay you for doing the job?
- 11 Someone should tell him never to do that again.
- 12 They asked you to meet me here at 11 o'clock, not half-past.
- 13 Will someone send me the details?
- 14 We shall send you the goods as soon as they are available.
- 15 Someone must teach that boy a lesson!

Situations

- 99 Answer the questions, using a passive construction, e.g. What might a man be recommended if he became ill through overwork?
He might be recommended a long holiday.

- 1 What should someone be given when he's hysterical?
- 2 Wages or a salary—which is a teacher paid?
- 3 In a cross-examination, who is asked what by whom?
- 4 If you wrote to a school for information, what might you be sent?
- 5 What is a patient given before an operation?
- 6 What would you most resent being told?
- 7 What opportunity would you like to be offered?
- 8 How much is a Member of Parliament paid in your country? (a nurse? a secretary? a bus driver? etc.)
- 9 What would you need to be lent if you were hard up?
- 10 What foreign languages were you taught at school?

Passive transforms of subject + verb + 'that' clause

Another type of sentence that has two possible forms in the passive is that consisting of Subject + Verb (say, think, feel, expect, etc.) + Noun Clause Object:

- a They say that he knows some very influential people.
- b People felt that the social workers were doing valuable work.
- c Everyone thought that the Government had shown scant regard for public opinion.

The ideas expressed in these sentences would, for reasons of style, generally be presented in the passive. One possible construction is that where the sentence is introduced by the impersonal it:

- a It is said that he knows some very influential people.
- b It was felt that the social workers were doing valuable work.
- c It was thought that the Government had shown scant regard for public opinion.

But in many cases an alternative construction is possible: the subject of the noun clause may be made the subject of the whole sentence in the passive. A special characteristic of this construction is that the verb in the noun clause takes the infinitive form:

- a He is said to know some very influential people.
- b The social workers were felt to be doing valuable work.
- c The Government was thought to have shown scant regard for public opinion.

Note: Sentences b and c can, of course, be directly related to corresponding sentences in the active, using the infinitive:

- b People felt the social workers to be doing valuable work.
- c Everyone thought the Government to have shown scant regard for public opinion.

There are two points to note here, however:

- [1] In the active sentences, a construction with a 'that' clause is commoner than the infinitive, whereas in the passive the infinitive is preferred where it is structurally possible.

[2] The infinitive construction in the passive does not necessarily represent a transformation of a corresponding infinitive in the active. We do not say *They say him to know some influential people¹, because this construction is not available to the verb say.

The form of the infinitive depends on whether or not the time reference of the verb in the noun clause is the same as that of the verb in the introductory (main) clause. If the time reference is the same, use the 'present' infinitive:

- | | | |
|---------------------------------|--|-------------------------------|
| It is said that he knows | | some very influential people. |
| = He is said to know | | |
| It was said that he knew | | |
| = He was said to know | | |

If the verb in the noun clause has a time reference anterior to that of the verb in the main clause, use the 'perfect' infinitive:

- | | | |
|---|--|-----------------|
| It is thought that he acted | | very foolishly. |
| = He is thought to have acted | | |
| It was thought that he had acted | | |
| = He was thought to have acted | | |

Passive transforms using the infinitive

100 Rewrite the sentences in an alternative passive form, beginning your sentences with the words in italics.

- 1 It is said that he is an honest, hard-working man.
- 2 It is considered that this surgeon is a brilliant practitioner.
- 3 It is now thought that some redundancies in the Company are inevitable.
- 4 It was proved that the statements he had made were false.
- 5 It was understood that the delegation was keen to meet the British Prime Minister.
- 6 It is believed that the Chancellor is thinking of imposing new taxes to raise extra revenue.
- 7 It is expected that the electricity supply industry will be running into surplus capacity by next year.
- 8 It is reported that several Japanese manufacturers are planning to set up plants overseas.
- 9 It is expected that the brewers will raise the price of beer in the near future.
- 10 It was claimed that the drug produced no undesirable side-effects.
- 11 It is said that the police acted with great restraint, despite provocation.
- 12 It was alleged that the Prime Minister had misled the House.

¹ See -ing forms, infinitives, and 'that' clauses, p. 135ff.

- 13 It is believed that the Government has had second thoughts on this problem.
- 14 It was believed that the explosion had been caused by a mine.
- 15 It is presumed that the ship's radio equipment was put out of action during the fire.
- 16 It is thought that the driver had both legs broken in the crash.

have or get + noun + past participle¹

1 I had got my car serviced.

2 He had his arm broken while playing rugby.

3 He was got knocked down by a car.

Have and get are often used with the past participle to express a passive meaning. In sentence 1, have and get suggest that 'I' arranged for my car to be serviced. Sentence 2 describes what happened to the subject; there is no suggestion, of course, that 'he' arranged for his arm to be broken, while in sentence 3 get is simply an alternative to was. Get is also often used in a reflexive way:

4 Wait a minute! I'm just getting dressed.

- 101 Rewrite the sentences using a form of have or get with the past participle of a suitable verb, making any other necessary changes.
- 1 You should arrange to install central heating before winter comes. (have)
 - 2 He is arranging for an artist to paint his wife's portrait. (have)
 - 3 They were made man and wife in 1980. (get)
 - 4 Five years later, they were no longer man and wife. (get)
 - 5 Drive carefully if you don't want to risk the police endorsing your licence again. (have)
 - 6 The tree was so diseased that we had to ask someone to cut it down. (have)
 - 7 The authorities are encouraging mothers to arrange for the vaccination of their children. (get)
 - 8 Someone has written all the answers in this book. (have) This book . . .
 - 9 She made an appointment with the optician for an examination of her eyes. (have)
 - 10 Nobody would ever have beaten the champion if he had retired after his last fight. (get) The champion . . .

¹ See pages 157-8 for the use of have + infinitive or present participle.

Advanced exercises in conversion

Active > Passive transforms

- 102 Rewrite in the passive the sentences or clauses containing a verb in italics.
- 1 The fact that the new scheme raised such a storm of disapproval means that no one can have explained it properly to the public.
 - 2 His father warned him not to let others lead him astray.
 - 3 The chairman of the committee complained that they were taking up too much time in discussing trivialities.
 - 4 People put down the boy's rudeness to his parents' having spoiled him.
 - 5 Not until later did they discover that someone had stolen the picture.
 - 6 Never before had they sent anyone to prison for that particular crime.
 - 7 They could make the law effective only in this way. ('Only in this way . . .')
 - 8 People said that no one could reach any agreement on this question.
 - 9 The army put down the rebellion and declared martial law.
 - 10 He wanted them to treat the information as confidential.
 - 11 Had they told me that someone was to bring up the subject of finance at the next meeting, I wouldn't have mentioned it.
 - 12 He dislikes his fellow-workers thinking him a fool.
 - 13 The public having ignored him for many years, the writer suddenly became famous. ('After . . .')
 - 14 Should someone prove beyond doubt that an accident caused the fire, the police will, naturally, release the man they are at present holding on suspicion of arson.
 - 15 On their informing him that the police wanted him, the man realized that his accomplice had betrayed him.

Passive > Active transforms

- 103 Rewrite in the active the sentences or clauses containing a verb in italics. Where the agent is not stated, a suitable subject for the sentence or clause should be inferred from the context.
- 1 The fire was finally got under control, but not before extensive damage had been caused.
 - 2 Don't let yourself be depressed by your failure.
 - 3 In view of the widespread concern that is felt by the community at the plan for a main road to be built through the village, it has been decided by the local Council that a special inquiry should be held.

- 4 The house had been broken into, and two thousand pounds' worth of jewellery had been stolen.
- 5 Only after it had been subjected to searching laboratory tests by the scientists was the new vaccine put on the market by the Company.
- 6 The plan hadn't been at all well thought out by the leader.
- 7 It ought to have been made quite clear to the shareholders before the annual meeting was held that they would not be allowed to vote for a new Board by proxy.
- 8 Your lawyer's advice should have been obtained before any decision was made by you for the matter to be taken further.
- 9 He needn't have been caused so much distress by being told by the army authorities that his brother had died in action, as it was later discovered that a mistake had been made as to the missing man's identity.
- 10 Information about the source from which the startling news had been obtained was withheld by the reporter.

Relative clauses

Defining relative clauses

If you look up the words conductor or liar in the Oxford Advanced Learner's Dictionary, you will find the following explanations (the words in parenthesis are not given in the dictionary, nor are italics used):

- (A) conductor (is a) person who collects fares on a bus or tram.
- (A) doctor (is a) person who has been trained in medical science.
- (A) liar (is a) person who habitually tells lies.

If we omit the words in italics, we learn only that a conductor is a person, a doctor is a person, and a liar is a person, and we would clearly regard such explanations as unsatisfactory. The 'persons' are defined, or distinguished from each other (and from any others one could think of), by the relative clauses in italics: the relative clauses are defining.

The definition of conductor is no longer simply 'a person', but 'a person who collects fares on a bus or tram'. The relative clause is an essential part of the whole definition, and cannot be omitted if the sentence as a whole is to make useful sense. Similarly, it would be impossible to answer the following question without the defining relative clause in italics:

What do we call a person who habitually tells lies?

The answer is, of course:

A person who habitually tells lies is called a liar.

Again, the answer would be incomplete without the defining relative clause in italics. The subject of the sentence is no longer simply 'a person', but 'a person who habitually tells lies'.

All these examples show that the defining relative clauses provide an indispensable definition of the word 'person' (called the antecedent—the word to which the relative clause relates). They are not separated from the antecedent by commas in writing, nor by a pause in speech. This is a basic feature of all defining relative clauses.

Definitions

- 104 Give your own definitions of the following words, using the same structure as in the example.

A liar is a person who habitually tells lies.

an atheist	a barber	a spokesman	a stockbroker
an actor	a newsagent	an eyewitness	a greengrocer
a journalist	an MP	a lawyer	a teetotaler

- 105 Answer the questions, using the same structure as in the example.
A person who has been trained in medical science is called a doctor.

What do we call—

- a person who steals things?
- a person who makes beer?
- a person who makes clothes?
- a person who prepares technical plans and drawings?
- a person who sets examinations?
- a person who owns shares in a company?
- a person who is skilled in foreign languages?
- a person who goes to the theatre regularly?
- a person who manages a public house?
- a person who rides a bicycle?
- a person who is nominated for an office or position?
- a person who receives treatment in a hospital?
- a person who writes plays?
- a person who has the right to sit in the House of Lords?
- a person who writes about plays, films, concerts, etc., for a newspaper?

that, who, which in defining clauses

The relative pronoun that is used only in defining clauses,¹ and can refer to persons or things. Who (for persons) and which (for things) may, of course, be used instead:

¹ It is advisable that students should treat this as a 'rule', although they will sometimes find that used in non-defining clauses in modern written English.

I dislike women that/who chatter incessantly.

Old age is a problem that/which should concern us all.

Students will find it instructive to note examples of usage in modern written English, in order to see what pattern of choice emerges in such clauses (i.e. that or who, that or which?).

Referring to persons, that or who are equally appropriate if the antecedent is a vague or generalized noun or pronoun:

He's the sort of man that/who will do anything to help people in trouble.

I need someone that/who can do the work quickly.

If, however, the antecedent is more definite or particularized, who is a far more likely choice:

The aunt who came to see us last week is my father's sister.

With antecedents denoting things, the choice of that or which seems more a matter of individual taste; but there are a few cases where that is preferred to which (introducing, of course, defining relative clauses):

(a) When the antecedent is an indefinite pronoun:

The relief agencies have promised to do all that lies in their power to bring food to the starving population.

(b) When the antecedent is qualified by a superlative:

This is the funniest film that has ever come from Hollywood.

(c) When the antecedent is qualified by an ordinal number:

The first statement that was issued by the press attaché at the Palace gave very few details.

(d) When the antecedent is the complement of 'to be':

It's a book that will be very popular.

Omitting the relative pronoun

The problem of choosing the appropriate relative pronoun in defining relative clauses very often doesn't arise:

The library didn't have the book (that or which) I wanted.

The relative clause tells us which book the library didn't have; it defines the antecedent book; it is a defining relative clause. We may analyse the relative clause thus:

OBJECT	SUBJECT	VERB
that or which	I	wanted

It is a distinctive characteristic of defining relative clauses that the relative pronoun may be omitted, without any change of meaning in the sentence as a whole, when it is not the subject of the relative clause. It not only may be omitted, it very often is, particularly in spoken English:

The library didn't have the book I wanted.

The same is true of *whom*¹ in a defining relative clause—it is very often omitted:

Was the man you spoke to just now a friend of yours?

Such clauses are called 'contact clauses', and are very common in both speech and writing, as students will soon realize if they examine the constructions (that!) they themselves use. Students will, in fact, have very little difficulty in using relative pronouns correctly in speech. Non-defining clauses (see page 122) hardly ever occur in the spoken language; they tend to sound formal and unnatural.

When relative clauses occur in the spoken language, they are nearly all defining clauses, and in many of these the relative pronoun may be omitted.

Defining clauses

106 Join the sentences by changing the second sentence of each pair into a defining relative clause. Use contact clauses (i.e. omit the relative pronoun) if the relative pronoun is not the subject of its clause. The antecedents are printed in italics, e.g.

The aims are very laudable. The society is pursuing these aims.

The aims the society is pursuing are very laudable.

- 1 The pipeline has been severed. It carries the town's water supplies.
- 2 The exhibition was not very interesting. My friend took me to see it.
- 3 One of the chief things is to save money, manpower, and time. A computer can do this thing.
- 4 Immigration is an issue. This issue raises strong emotions.
- 5 Paintings by Renoir realized record prices in the sale. The sale took place at Sotheby's in London yesterday.
- 6 There is evidence that many men were in fact willing to accept the Company's revised pay offer. These men went on strike.
- 7 The pools winner used a system. This system, he said, had won him several small amounts over the years.
- 8 The gales caused widespread damage. They swept across southern England last night.
- 9 British shipyards are now quoting prices. These prices compare favourably with foreign competitors.
- 10 Is the offer still open? You made the offer last week.

¹ If the pronoun is expressed in speech, whom is often used instead of whom in such relative clauses, except when preceded by a preposition.

- 11 Only by exporting enough can we pay for the goods. We buy these goods from abroad.
- 12 Members of the local sub-aqua club came across a wreck. It had lain on the sea-bed for over 200 years.
- 13 The problem today is to build houses at a price. Young couples can afford to pay this price.
- 14 I know the very person. He will do the job quickly.
- 15 In some areas of Britain, unemployment is a fact of life. People have grown accustomed to facing this fact.

107 Add relative clauses defining the words in italics, using contact clauses where appropriate.

- The Council has decided to ask every tenant to move to a smaller house or a flat.
- The Council has decided to ask every tenant who has a house bigger than he needs to move to a smaller house or a flat.
- He's the sort of person.
- He's the sort of person that must always be doing something new.
- There was nothing.
- There was nothing I could do to help. (Contact clause)

- 1 Any man should be sent to prison.
- 2 Laws should be repealed.
- 3 The yacht arrived first.
- 4 The house has been demolished.
- 5 Would you like to see the photographs?
- 6 He's the most intelligent man.
- 7 He will do anything.
- 8 The man was her uncle.
- 9 That's the third telephone call.
- 10 Nothing is ever a success.
- 11 He enjoys talking to anyone.
- 12 I always feel confidence in someone.

108 Instructions as for 107.

- 1 Students generally like a teacher.
- 2 Teachers generally like students.
- 3 Is that all the work?
- 4 The sort of food is not the same as Continental food.
- 5 Children like aunts and uncles.
- 6 Men dislike women.
- 7 Women dislike men.
- 8 The excuse was unacceptable.

- 9 I am sure there isn't anyone among the audience here tonight.
- 10 My father is a man.
- 11 I detest people.
- 12 Switzerland is a country.

109 Complete the sentences, incorporating contact clauses.

- The equipment the climbers . . .
- The equipment the climbers took with them proved unsuitable. . . . the tennis club my friend . . .
- I'd like to join the tennis club my friend belongs to.

Note that this exercise requires the completion of both the main clause and the relative clause.

- 1 The shoes you . . .
- 2 . . . the book you . . .
- 3 The holiday we . . .
- 4 The teacher the students . . .
- 5 Every meal my wife . . .
- 6 The house my friends . . .
- 7 . . . the clothes the English . . . ?
- 8 . . . every word the speaker . . .
- 9 . . . the medicine the doctor . . .
- 10 The goods the customer . . .

110 Instructions as for 109.

- 1 . . . every school he . . .
- 2 The question the student . . .
- 3 . . . the advice your lawyer . . . ?
- 4 The three men the police . . .
- 5 . . . anything I . . . ?
- 6 . . . the plans the architect . . .
- 7 . . . the Mr Smith you . . . ?
- 8 . . . the girl my brother . . .
- 9 The plan we . . .
- 10 . . . the London I . . .

See also exercises 177 and 179 (non-finite clauses).

Non-defining relative clauses

The Victoria Line, which was opened in March 1969, was London's first complete new tube for 60 years.

- [1] If we omit the relative clause (in italics), we are left with the statement 'The Victoria Line was London's first complete new tube for 60 years'. The relative clause gives additional information about the antecedent (Victoria Line), but does not define it: the 'Line' in question is already sufficiently defined by 'Victoria'.

The relative clause is in this case called non-defining (or parenthetical), and is enclosed by commas. Whether we include the clause or not, the meaning of the main clause remains exactly the same. In fact, the main clause and relative clause could (though with less economy) be presented as two separate statements:

The Victoria Line was London's first complete new tube for 60 years. It was opened in March 1969.

The relative clause could even be represented by an independent clause in parenthesis. In this case, it is clearly seen as incidental information, mentioned 'by the way':

The Victoria Line (it was opened in March 1969) was London's first complete new tube for 60 years.

- [2] The omission or insertion of commas may represent a difference in meaning between two otherwise identical sentences:

- a They have two children who are still at school. (Defining) b They have two children, who are still at school. (Non-defining)

The absence of a comma after children in a implies that they have other children besides the two at school.

They have two children who are still at school and (e.g.) one who goes out to work.

Sentence b, on the other hand, implies that they have only two children, both of school age.

- [3] A further point of contrast between defining and non-defining clauses is that the relative pronoun cannot be omitted in non-defining clauses, even if it is not the subject of its clause:

- a The Victoria Line, which was opened in 1969, was London's first complete new tube for 60 years. (which = subject)
 b The Victoria Line, which the Queen opened in 1969, was London's first complete new tube for 60 years. (which = object)

Students will find many examples in modern written English where commas are omitted before non-defining relative clauses. The writer's meaning may be perfectly unambiguous without the use of commas, or there may be stylistic reasons for omitting them. Nevertheless, students are advised to follow the 'rules' of punctuation illustrated in the above examples, since observation of these patterns is less likely to lead to confusion.

Non-defining clauses

- 111 Join the sentences, using which or who in non-defining relative clauses, and inserting the appropriate punctuation, e.g.
- His latest play has been a great success. It was well reviewed by the critics.
 His latest play, which was well reviewed by the critics, has been a great success.
- 1 This industrial dispute has now been settled. It disrupted production at six Midlands factories while it lasted.
 - 2 The Prime Minister's reshuffle means that the Cabinet will be reduced to twenty. It now has twenty-two members.
 - 3 Some London policemen were sent to America on a goodwill visit. They are well known for their politeness and helpfulness.
 - 4 Three acres of land go with this estate. The estate is situated in one of the most beautiful parts of rural England.
 - 5 Covent Garden's latest production of Don Giovanni looks like being a huge success. It opened at the Royal Opera House last night.
 - 6 The new official guide to London contains a wealth of information for visitors. It will appear in the bookshops next week.
 - 7 His first speech was better than his second. The first speech was broadcast. He gave the second before an audience.
 - 8 Foreign visitors often find that English weather is not so bad as they had supposed. They often associate it with fog and rain. It sometimes makes them dread coming to England.
 - 9 The Houses of Parliament were begun in 1840 and completed in 1857. They cost £3,000,000 to build.
 - 10 The British Broadcasting Corporation launched the world's first public television service in 1936. As the British Broadcasting Company, it had begun sound broadcasting in 1922.

Non-defining clauses sometimes have an explanatory function: they may suggest an adverbial idea, implying the reason or cause of the facts presented in the main clause:

The manufacturers soon stopped marketing the drug, which was found to have serious side-effects. (i.e. because it was found to have serious side-effects)

- 112 Rewrite the sentences, substituting a non-defining relative clause for the adverbial clauses in italics, e.g.

In 1930 the Company moved from its home in West Street, since this was now too small for its ever-increasing volume of business.

In 1930 the Company moved from its home in West Street, which was now too small for its ever-increasing volume of business.

- 1 Few people could follow the speaker, since he spoke extremely quickly.
- 2 His doctor advised him to change to an outdoor job, as this would be much better for his health.
- 3 Many teachers are enthusiastic about overhead projectors, since they are more flexible in use than the traditional blackboard.
- 4 The airline has grounded all planes of this type, since they have been the subject of several recent accidents and near-accidents.
- 5 The MP was disowned by his constituency party, having failed to support the party line in Parliament on numerous occasions.
- 6 When our car needs servicing, I always take it to our local garage, because it gives better and quicker service than some of the larger garages in town.
- 7 We didn't like his manner, since to our way of thinking it was rather offhand.
- 8 This new car will be very popular with family motorists, since it seats five people in comfort and takes a mountain of luggage.
- 9 More and more information is now being stored on microfilm, since this is a very effective means of compressing a large amount of information into a small space.
- 10 The shop readily agreed to exchange the goods, since they were obviously substandard.

113 Add non-defining clauses relating to the words in italics, using which, who, or whom. Insert the appropriate punctuation, e.g.

The Foreign Minister held a short press conference at the airport.
The Foreign Minister, who was besieged by reporters when his plane landed, held a short press conference at the airport.

- 1 His latest book is about his adventures in Africa.
- 2 The Royal Shakespeare Company is world famous.
- 3 British Leyland's latest sports car should boost British exports.
- 4 His father has offered him a partnership.
- 5 The new highway code should make for greater safety for all road-users.
- 6 The missing woman's bicycle has been found in the river.
- 7 The Company didn't reply to his letter of application.
- 8 The Boat Race takes place annually from Putney to Mortlake on the Thames.
- 9 Last night's meeting broke up in disorder.
- 10 Spring flowers are a delight to the eye.

114 Instructions as for 113.

- 1 We hope to attract investors to our new savings scheme.
- 2 The cliffs of Dover are a startling white.
- 3 Joseph Conrad wrote all his books in English.

- 4 The University of Cambridge comprises more than twenty colleges.
- 5 The defending lawyer made a great impression on the jury.
- 6 It is now known that water does not exist on the moon.
- 7 Fleet Street is situated in the heart of London.
- 8 Last year's spring tides caused much damage to property.
- 9 Foreigners often take some time to get used to the English breakfast.
- 10 This year's harvest has been disappointing.

whose

Whose is the only possessive form of relative pronoun in English, and is used to refer to both persons and things. It is nearly always preferred to the prepositional construction of whom (when, of course, this indicates possession), and is also often preferred to which (again, when this indicates possession):

- a The man whose coat had been stolen immediately reported the theft. (Defining) (Not 'The man the coat of whom had been stolen...')
- b The damaged ship, whose crew has now been taken off, was listing dangerously when last seen. (Non-defining)
(Rather than 'The damaged ship, the crew of which has now been taken off...')

115 Join the sentences by changing the second sentence of each pair into a defining or non-defining relative clause. The structure of your relative clause should reflect the structure of the original sentence.

- The headmaster spoke to the boys. Their work was below standard.
The headmaster spoke to the boys whose work was below standard. (Defining)
- We came within sight of Everest. Its summit has attracted so many climbers.
We came within sight of Everest, whose summit has attracted so many climbers. (Non-defining)
- We came within sight of Everest. The summit of Everest has attracted so many climbers.
We came within sight of Everest, the summit of which has attracted so many climbers. (Non-defining)

- 1 Bertrand Russell died in 1970. His philosophical writings made a profound impact on philosophers all over the world.
- 2 The US President is unlikely to seek a second term of office. His administration has been under constant fire during the last eighteen months.

- 3 Very few people understood his lecture. The subject of his lecture was very obscure.
- 4 The car driver was sent to prison for six months. The entire blame for the accident rested on his shoulders.
- 5 Lord Nelson was famous for his naval exploits. A column was erected in his memory in Trafalgar Square in London.
- 6 'I have pleasure in introducing to you the man. Without his generosity your society would cease to exist.'
- 7 'Sir—Mr Jack Smith should check his facts more carefully. His letter was published in your columns yesterday.'
- 8 The fire started on the first floor of the hospital. Many of its patients are elderly and infirm.
- 9 The latest model of this car gives much more passenger room. Its exterior dimensions remain unchanged.
- 10 We would not advise buying shares in this Company. Its results last year were worse even than forecast, and its long-term recovery must remain a matter of doubt.
- 11 I interviewed several of the men. Their contracts had been terminated by the company at short notice.
- 12 Many back-benchers are finding it difficult to support the Government. They have considerable misgivings over some of the Government's policies.

Prepositional relative clauses

Defining clauses with prepositions

When the relative pronoun (expressed or understood) is the object of a preposition is a defining relative clause, the preposition is often placed at the end of the clause. A preposition cannot, in any case, be placed before the relative pronoun that:

- a Is this the book (that/which) you asked me for? (for which you asked me?)
- b This is the person (*that/whom*¹) I was telling you about. (about whom I was telling you)
- c The police learned that the man (*that/whom*¹) they were looking for had been seen boarding a train at Euston. (the man for whom they were looking)

It is very unlikely that the alternative forms (in brackets) would be used in sentences a and b. The sentences would sound forced and unnatural. The alternative form is, however, possible in c, though it results in great formality of style.

¹ See footnote on page 119.

Two of the factors determining the placing of prepositions are:

- (a) Is the sentence spoken or written? If spoken, the preposition is much more likely to come at the end of its clause. At the same time, this makes it possible to omit the relative pronoun (see a and b above).
 - (b) Is the style formal or informal? If informal, the preposition is likely to come at the end of its clause, even in written English (see example c above).
- There are, however, two other considerations, which concern the way in which the preposition functions:
- (c) Verb + preposition combinations such as take after (= resemble) and put up with (= tolerate) represent new 'words' whose meanings are independent of their constituent elements. The two elements (or three) are then inseparable, and the preposition must always follow the verb:
The person (*that/whom*¹) he takes after is his mother.
This is something (that/which) I refuse to put up with.
 - (d) The preposition may, on the other hand, represent part of a prepositional noun phrase, and be entirely independent of the verb in its clause. In this case, the preposition always precedes the relative pronoun:
He signed an agreement. Under this agreement he would be entitled to a commission on sales.
= He signed an agreement under which he would be entitled to a commission on sales.

Non-defining clauses with prepositions

In a non-defining relative clause, it is almost a general rule for the preposition to come before the relative pronoun:

- The new hospital, in which the Queen has taken a great personal interest, will be officially opened in March.
The headmaster, with whom the parents had discussed their son's future, advised the boy to take up engineering.
One important exception is the verb + preposition combinations mentioned above:

No one puts any faith in the Government's promises, which they have frequently gone back on in the past.

¹ See footnote on page 119.

Defining clauses with prepositions

- 116 Join the sentences by changing the second sentence of each pair into a defining relative clause.
- Is this the book? You asked me for it.
Is this the book you asked me for?
- If you die before the policy matures, your wife receives the benefits. You yourself would have been entitled to these benefits.
If you die before the policy matures, your wife receives the benefits to which you yourself would have been entitled.
- 1 I don't find the person a very congenial companion. I'm sharing a flat with him.
 - 2 Here's the address. You should write to this address.
 - 3 I can assure you that David is a man. You can absolutely depend on him.
 - 4 I can't remember the name of the person. I gave the money to him.
 - 5 This is a job. You can take your time over it, because I'm not in any particular hurry.
 - 6 The teacher said that two of the pupils had suddenly disappeared. He was responsible for them.
 - 7 Some foreign businessmen thought that British exports should increase after devaluation. I spoke to these businessmen recently.
 - 8 The language teachers' association provides a medium. Through this medium ideas can be shared and discussed.
 - 9 The men's decision to return to work provides a breathing space. Both men and management can think again during this breathing space.
 - 10 They came to a plateau. Around the plateau stood a circle of high mountains.
 - 11 The Minister formulated a basis. The talks could start on this basis.
 - 12 The two sides have agreed to have further talks on a pay and productivity structure. Under this pay and productivity structure the men would be paid at an hourly rate.
 - 13 The scientist produced a working model. Reliable tests could be conducted on this model.
 - 14 Coronary thrombosis is a disease. High sugar consumption is believed to play a part in this disease.
- 117 Complete the sentences, incorporating contact clauses with an end-preposition. Some sentences require the completion of both the relative clause and the main clause, e.g.

The place ... has a terrible train service.

The place we've just moved to has a terrible train service.

- 1 ... the cupboard the wine glasses ... ?
- 2 ... the material the curtains ... ?
- 3 ... the book this quotation ... ?
- 4 ... the cup this saucer ... ?
- 5 ... the name of the programme we're ... ?
- 6 These aren't the books I ... ?
- 7 Is there nobody here I ... ?
- 8 ... the house her daughter ... ?
- 9 ... the name of the school you ... ?
- 10 The situation we ... was very dangerous.

Non-defining clauses with prepositions

118 Join the sentences, using non-defining clauses with a prepositional construction, e.g.

The new tunnel under the Thames will divert a great deal of traffic from the worst congested crossing-points. The line of this tunnel has yet to be finally determined.

The new tunnel under the Thames, the line of which has yet to be finally determined, will divert a great deal of traffic from the worst congested crossing-points.

- 1 The eighty-nine passengers all escaped without serious injury. Four of the passengers were British.
- 2 The country now has 300 power stations. All of them are part of a national network.
- 3 The speaker posed four highly important questions. The answers to these questions proved very illuminating.
- 4 The UN proposed the establishment of an international peace-keeping force. The composition and power of this force would be a matter for agreement among UN members.
- 5 The plans for the new by-pass have now been approved by the Local Authority. By means of this by-pass, heavy congestion in the city centre will be considerably relieved.
- 6 The Labour Party's latest manifesto contains many new proposals. The more radical of these proposals will hardly please those on the right of the party.
- 7 'I should like to pay tribute to our loyal and hard-working staff. Without their unremitting support it would not have been possible to produce last year's spectacular rise in profits.'

- 8 The Government intends to introduce a new Bill on taxation. The study of its provisions will be the work of experts on both sides of the House.
- 9 The Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament attracted some very influential supporters. Some leading politicians are among these supporters.
- 10 For electoral purposes, the United Kingdom is divided into constituencies. Each of them returns one member to Parliament.

Co-ordinate relative clauses

As we have already seen (page 122), it is possible for non-defining clauses to be represented by separate sentences, though often with less economy or neatness of style. Non-defining clauses often have a more obvious co-ordinating function when they follow, rather than interrupt, the main clause—some of the relative clauses in the last exercise could well be written as separate sentences. The co-ordinating function of non-defining clauses can be seen most clearly in sentences like the following:

- a He's not on the telephone, which makes it difficult to get in touch with him.
- b As I had lost John's new address, I wrote to his father, who will, presumably, let me know where John is now living.

In both these sentences, we could replace which or who by and this or and he. In sentence a, moreover, which does not relate to a noun antecedent, but refers back to the whole of the preceding clause:

He's not on the telephone. This (= the fact that he's not on the telephone) makes it difficult to get in touch with him.

This use of non-defining clauses is common in both the spoken language and the written. A prepositional construction is, however, more formal and more appropriate to the written language:

He invested his money in several different companies, by which means (= and by this means) he hoped to reduce the natural hazards of investment.

- 119 Join the sentences by changing the second sentence of each pair into a co-ordinate relative clause. In nos. 11–15 a prepositional construction is required, as in the second example below, e.g.

At £9,000 this car is a little expensive. This is bound to affect its sales in Britain.

At £9,000 this car is a little expensive, which is bound to affect its sales in Britain.

It appears that the driver was asked to produce his licence.

At this, he became angry and excited.

It appears that the driver was asked to produce his licence, at which he became angry and excited.

- 1 He decided not to complete his university course. This was a great disappointment to his parents.
- 2 We've just installed central heating. This should make a tremendous difference to the house next winter.
- 3 John was ill in bed. This explains why he didn't turn up last night.
- 4 He blamed me for everything. I thought this very unfair.
- 5 I gave the message to your secretary. She was supposed to pass it on to you.
- 6 Few people attended last night's meeting. This was a pity, since several important matters were decided on.
- 7 My car's got to go in for repair. This means I'll have to take the train to work for the next few days.
- 8 He showed the contract to his lawyer. His lawyer advised him not to sign it in its present form.
- 9 Several people thought the speaker had dealt with the subject very thoroughly. This was hardly the impression I got.
- 10 He has given in his resignation. This was the best thing he could do in the circumstances.
- 11 The driver had no insurance and no current licence. In addition to this, he had crossed two sets of red traffic lights immediately before being stopped.
- 12 The singer returned to give yet another encore. The audience burst into even wilder applause at this.
- 13 He lost two games early in the tournament. Despite this, however, he managed to carry off the championship.
- 14 The Company's newly-acquired subsidiaries will begin to contribute significantly to profits next year. Some allowance for this must be made when considering the long-term prospects.
- 15 The police discovered the thieves' hide-out two days later. By this time, however, the thieves had disappeared.

Cleft sentences

- 1 John solved the problem.
- 2 I need your help, not your sympathy.
- 3 It gets really cold only in the winter.

English has a grammatical mechanism for focussing on words we wish to emphasize: we begin the sentence with It, and 'point' to the words:

1a It was John who/that solved the problem.

2a It's your help (that) I need, not your sympathy.

3a It's only in the winter that it gets really cold.

Each sentence is now divided (cleft) to form two clauses, the second being very similar in appearance to a defining relative clause. Either who or that can be used to refer to a person, but in all other cases we use that, even when referring to adverbial phrases as in 3a.

We can also emphasize words (but not nouns denoting persons) by using a noun clause introduced by what:

- 2a What I need is your help, not your sympathy.¹
 or Your help is what I need, not your sympathy.

120 Rewrite the sentences so as to emphasize the words in italics, using It is or It was as in the examples above.

- 1 We need quality, not quantity.
- 2 The Government now needs a new sense of purpose.
- 3 An inquest revealed that poisonous mushrooms had caused his death.
- 4 I didn't realize the value of education until after I left school.
- 5 You learn a foreign language only by constant practice.
- 6 Two persistent journalists uncovered the scandal.
- 7 He takes after his mother rather than his father.
- 8 Cheap rented accommodation is now desperately needed in London and other large cities.
- 9 Cheap rented accommodation is now desperately needed in London and other large cities.
- 10 The trouble started when the police arrived.
- 11 He doesn't pass his exams because he doesn't work hard enough.
- 12 I telephoned you in order to warn you about what was happening.

where, when, why, and as

[1] Where and when may function as relative adverbs, introducing defining or non-defining relative clauses in the same way as which and who:

- a I should like to retire to the town where (= in which) I spent my youth. (Defining) Wine-producers say they can't remember a time when (= at which) the grape harvest was worse than this year's. (Defining) b The tourists visited the Royal Mint, where (= in which place) English coin is produced. (Non-defining)
 People are still talking about the historic events of two years ago, when (at which time) man took his first walk in space. (Non-defining) c He was taken to the police station, where (= and there) he proceeded to make a full confession. (Co-ordinate)
 She showed no signs of emotion till she reached home, when (= and then) she broke down completely. (Co-ordinate)

[2] Why as a relative adverb introduces only defining clauses:

You haven't given me one good reason why (= for which) I should agree to help you.

¹ See exercise 123, nos. 8 and 10.

[3] As may introduce a defining relative clause, commonly after the same or such:

They went to the same hotel as we always stay at.

(Compare: They went to the hotel that we always stay at.)

The student wasn't working hard enough, and such work as he had done was very poor.

(Compare: . . . and the work that he had done . . .)

As may also introduce a non-defining (co-ordinate) clause. Such clauses differ from all other relative clauses, however, in that they can precede the main clause, as well as interrupting or following it:

As he later admitted, it was a stupid thing to do.

It was, as he later admitted, a stupid thing to do.

It was a stupid thing to do, as he later admitted.

121 Replace the words in italics by when, where, why, or (Nos. 12-15) a construction with as.

- 1 The days in which you could travel without a passport are a thing of the past.
- 2 In 1842, Charles Dickens went to America, in which country he advocated international copyright and the abolition of slavery.
- 3 There are times at which everyone needs to be alone.
- 4 Have you ever been in a situation in which you know the other person is right yet you can't agree with him?
- 5 He remembered several occasions in the past on which he had experienced a similar feeling.
- 6 Shakespeare arrived in London about 1586, and there, some time later, he became a member of the Lord Chamberlain's company of players.
- 7 I can't think of any reason for which you should take all the blame for what happened.
- 8 The car showed its true qualities on Continental roads, on which it was possible to drive up to 500 miles a day without undue strain.
- 9 This Company has now introduced a policy under which premiums are related to the age of the driver.
- 10 The whole family wants to emigrate to a country in which there is more scope for individual enterprise.
- 11 The fire brigade arrived two hours after the alarm was first raised, and then it was too late to save much of the building.
- 12 If he doesn't want to join us (and this may well be the case) we can always ask someone else to make up a foursome.
- 13 John's a very lonely person, and the particular friends that he has tend to be rather odd characters.
- 14 You have exactly the problem with your new car that we had when we first bought ours.
- 15 We had completely misjudged the situation, which fact we later discovered.

what

Although what (in one of its uses) is classified as a relative pronoun, it is unhelpful to foreign students to associate it with the relative pronouns we have used so far. The most important difference to note about the use of what is that it never relates back to an antecedent. We cannot say:

- *He gave her everything what she wanted.
- *My neighbour had his radio on loud, what made it difficult to concentrate.

What is equivalent in meaning to the thing(s) which or something which, and includes both antecedent and relative pronoun in its meaning. It introduces a noun clause, not an adjectival or co-ordinate (relative) clause:

- a* He got the thing which he wanted.
 - b* He got what he wanted.
- In sentence b, what replaces both the thing and which in sentence a, and introduces a noun clause, object of the verb got.

122 Replace the words in italics by what.

- 1 The thing that the speaker said next was lost in the general uproar.
- 2 Why don't you explain the idea that you have in mind?
- 3 The teacher tested the students to see if they remembered the things which they had learned.
- 4 The thing that you're asking me to do is out of the question.
- 5 He's something that's known as a 'bellyacher'—he's always complaining about something.
- 6 What a nuisance! That's just the thing which I didn't want to happen.
- 7 The thing that amazes me is where he gets all his energy from.
- 8 Would this be the thing that you're looking for?
- 9 Mind the things that you say to him; he's very sensitive!
- 10 The leader of the expedition marked out something that seemed to be the best route.

123 Complete the sentences with a noun clause introduced by what.

- I can't imagine . . .
I can't imagine what induced him to do such a thing.
(Noun clause, object)
- . . . is more important than what you say.
What you do is more important than what you say.
(Noun clause, subject)
- 1 No one could understand . . .
 - 2 Were you surprised at . . . ?
 - 3 He was lucky enough to sell his car for exactly . . .
 - 4 I'd rather you didn't say anything about . . .
 - 5 Don't you think you ought to apologize for . . . ?

- 6 I think he should have told me . . .
- 7 Will you think over . . . ?
- 8 . . . is where he gets all his money from.
- 9 It's a pity you weren't at the meeting to hear . . .
- 10 . . . was the fact that she passed her examination despite her absence from school.

Collective nouns as antecedents

English people as well as foreign students are often doubtful about which relative pronoun to use after words like these:

association	body	class	club	committee
company	government	group	society	team

When we use these words, we may consider them either as denoting an entity or as denoting a number of individuals, and we treat the words as singular or plural accordingly. If, for example, we are thinking of a committee as a whole, we treat it as a thing (singular) and use which; if we are thinking of it as comprising a number of people, we treat it as personal (plural) and use who.

The choice of pronoun depends on which particular idea is intended, the single entity or the group of individuals, but students must be careful to be consistent, and should ensure that any other pronouns that occur in the sentence are singular or plural in agreement with the relative pronoun:

- a* Our Association, which has consistently pressed for greater employment opportunities for the disabled, will publish its proposals in the near future.
- b* England's team, who are now superbly fit, will be doing their best next week to revenge themselves for last year's defeat.

Verb patterns with -ing forms, infinitives, and 'that' clausesIntroduction

Both the gerund (verb + ing) and the infinitive can function as nouns standing alone, or they can operate as verbs in non-finite noun clauses.¹

- [1] The gerund and the infinitive can function as nouns. On the whole, the gerund is more readily identifiable with a noun than the infinitive is.

¹ For an explanation of this term, see page 264 in the Appendix.

- [1.1] The gerund may stand alone as the subject of a verb:

Reading is his favourite pastime.

The infinitive is not often used in this way (but see 2.1c).

- [1.2] Both may stand alone as the object of a verb:

a I've finished working.

b I want to leave.

- [1.3] Both may function as the complement of to be:

a My worst vice is smoking.

b Her first impulse was to scream.

- [1.4] Only the gerund, however, can be used as the object of a preposition:

He insisted on coming.

Only the gerund may be qualified by adjectives:

This book makes good light reading.

Only the gerund can be used with an article and can have a plural form:

The findings of the court have now been made public.

I can't keep track of his comings and goings.

- [2] The gerund and the infinitive can operate as verbs in non-finite noun clauses.

- [2.1] They may be followed by a direct or an indirect object:

a Closing the factory means putting people out of work. (direct object)

b He hates speaking to strangers. (indirect object)

c To ease credit restrictions at this stage would be unwise. (direct object)

d The manager wants to speak to you. (indirect object)

Note that in c, the infinitive is used in the initial position when it is followed by an object (or an adverb, or both), i.e. when it operates as a verb in a non-finite noun clause. This is fairly common in written English, but in spoken English it is much more usual to find a construction with 'anticipatory' it:

It would do no good at all to explain again.

(To explain again would do no good at all.)

- [2.2] They may be qualified by adverbs:

a A teacher of English must avoid speaking too quickly.

b He wants to leave immediately.

- [2.3] They also have 'perfect' and passive forms:

a The soldier was accused of having betrayed his country. (perfect)

b He pretended to have forgotten the man's name. (perfect)

c No one likes being thought a fool. (passive)

d He doesn't want to be told the truth. (passive)

e He resented having been criticized by the manager. (perfect passive)

f He claimed to have been badly treated. (perfect passive)

- [3] In some of the above examples, a 'that' clause could be used after the main verb in place of the gerund or the infinitive:

*a Closing the factory means putting people out of work.
that people will lose their jobs.*

*b He pretended to have forgotten the man's name.
that he had forgotten the man's name.*

One of the main problems is, in fact, that of learning which form (-ing form, infinitive, or 'that' clause) should be used after another verb. On the whole, one can learn to associate a verb with its particular pattern (or patterns) only through practice. Verbs that are similar in meaning do not necessarily follow the same pattern:

a I advised him to see a doctor.

b I suggested that he should see a doctor.

Classification

The exercises that follow are aimed principally at giving practice in the use of the -ing forms (gerund and participle), infinitives and 'that' clauses after another verb, regardless of whether or not all the forms could be classified in some way as 'nouns'.¹

Students should be encouraged to note examples they find of sentences illustrating the different verbs used in their associated patterns. In the course of the exercises, check-lists of verbs are given for guidance and reference. The verbs have been assigned to the following main groups:

- 1 verbs followed by the gerund (some may also be followed by a 'that' clause):

He avoided making the same mistake again.

He admitted having made the same mistake again.

He admitted (that) he had made the same mistake again.

- 2a verbs followed by an infinitive without a preceding noun (some may also be followed by a 'that' clause):

He refused to give me his support.

He swore to have his revenge.

He swore (that) he would have his revenge.

- 2b verbs followed by a noun + infinitive (some may also be followed by a 'that' clause):

We invited her to stay with us.

I reminded her to come on time.

I reminded her that she must come on time.

¹ Infinitives of purpose are, however, excluded.

2c verbs followed by an infinitive, with or without a preceding noun (some may also be followed by a 'that' clause):

I asked to see the photograph.
I asked him to show me the photograph.
I asked that no one else should be told.

3 verbs followed by the gerund or an infinitive (some may also be followed by a 'that' clause):

He remembered to give her the message.
He remembered giving her the message.
He remembered that he had already given her the message.

Any differences in meaning between such sentences are discussed in the notes accompanying the exercises.

4 verbs followed by a noun and a 'present' participle or (in the active) an infinitive without 'to' (some may also be followed by a 'that' clause):

I saw him doing something very stupid.
I saw him do something very stupid.
I saw that he was doing something very stupid.

5 verbs followed by either a 'that' clause, or by a noun + to be or to have:
I thought (that) he was a very sensible person.
I thought him to be a very sensible person.

There are a few verbs which appear in more than one list, but each time with a different meaning. These particular verbs have different patterns associated with the different meanings. For example, mean (= entail) appears in Group 1, and is followed by the gerund:

If we go to the evening performance, it will mean getting a baby-sitter.
Mean (= intend) appears in Group 2c, and is followed by an infinitive, with or without a preceding noun:

I didn't mean (you) to tell him till later.

Moreover, some of the verbs which are followed by a 'that' clause as an alternative to the gerund or infinitive may have a different meaning in the alternative construction:

She didn't fancy going out alone (fancy = like the idea of)

I fancy that he's in for a disappointment. (fancy = imagine)

Students are advised to consult Oxford Advanced Learner's Dictionary for detailed explanation and examples.

Gerunds after prepositions, prepositional verbs, and phrasal verbs

The gerund is always used when a verb follows a a preposition, b a prepositional verb, or c a phrasal verb (verb + adverbial particle):

- a* There was no hope of finding any survivors from the crash.
b I apologized for disturbing him.
c I gave up playing football when I left school.

124 Complete the sentences, using gerunds, e.g.

I wish you'd do something to help, instead of . . .
I wish you'd do something to help, instead of standing there giving advice.

- 1 There are many difficulties involved in . . .
- 2 You must be tired of . . .
- 3 The boy was severely reprimanded for . . .
- 4 The public were warned of the dangers of . . .
- 5 He doesn't take any interest in . . .
- 6 You seem to be very fond of . . .
- 7 The soldier was court-martialled for . . .
- 8 Who is responsible for . . . ?
- 9 You ought to think about . . ., instead of . . .
- 10 This new scheme goes a long way towards . . .
- 11 I would never think of . . .
- 12 They saw no reason for not . . .

125 Instructions as for 124.

- 1 My doctor advised me to give up . . .
- 2 We had to put off . . .
- 3 That company specializes in . . .
- 4 The judge was accused of not . . .
- 5 Many people get a great deal of satisfaction from . . .
- 6 I told him not to bother about . . .
- 7 The teacher decided against . . .
- 8 On . . ., he took off his hat.
- 9 We asked a solicitor for advice before . . .
- 10 By . . ., he ran the risk of . . .
- 11 After . . ., the customer left the shop without . . .
- 12 By . . ., the student improved his chances of . . .

126 For each of the following sentences, write another sentence as similar as possible in meaning, using the verb in brackets together with a preposition and a gerund, e.g.

You should put most effort into improving your pronunciation. (concentrate)

You should concentrate on improving your pronunciation.

- 1 The customer said that the cashier had tried to overcharge her. (accuse)
- 2 Many people pass their driving test only at the second attempt. (succeed)
- 3 Concert-goers are asked not to smoke in the auditorium. (refrain)
- 4 The solicitor talked his client out of taking legal action. (dissuade)
- 5 If a customer gets poor service, you can't say it's wrong of him to make a fuss. (blame)
- 6 The hijackers wouldn't let the passengers leave the plane. (prevent)
- 7 The student said he was sorry that he had missed the previous lesson. (apologize)
- 8 Visitors to the zoo are not allowed to feed the animals. (prohibit)
- 9 Despite my obvious lack of interest, the party bore said he had to tell me the rest of his story. (insist)
- 10 The police think that the owner of the store started the fire himself. (suspect)

to + gerund or infinitive

The word to presents a problem: is it a 'true' preposition, or is it part of an infinitive? We can discover the function of to in any particular sentence by trying to put a noun after it. If a noun is possible, the gerund form of a verb must be used:

I'm looking forward to my holiday. (Noun) going on holiday. (Gerund)

It would be impossible to put a noun after to in the following sentence; only the infinitive of a verb will fit:

I should like to: see you next Thursday.

This test enables us to distinguish two particularly confusing verb phrases, used to and to be (or get) used to. Used to + infinitive refers to habitual action in the past, and used to cannot be followed by a noun (or a gerund):

When I was in England, I used to eat a big breakfast.

In the phrase to be (or get) used to there are three elements: the verb to be (or to get), a past participle functioning as an adjective, used (= accustomed), and a preposition to. The phrase is parallel in structure to, e.g., to be interested in, and it is possible to put a noun after to:

I'm used to his curious ways.

If a verb follows to be used to, therefore, the gerund form must be used: I'm used to hearing about the odd things he does.

To be used to suggests a state of familiarity through a repetition of the activity or occurrence; it does not state the existence of a habit as such. To get used to suggests the process of gaining familiarity. Note also that used to is a fixed idiom and is not used in any other tense, whereas the verbal element in to be (or get) used to (i.e. the verb to be or to get) can be used in any appropriate tense.

to + gerund

127 Complete the sentences, using the gerund of a suitable verb. To functions as a preposition in every case. Note that the 'perfect' form is required in some sentences.

- 1 The Prime Minister said he was looking forward to . . . the US President.
- 2 He should be accustomed by now to . . . English food.
- 3 The policeman couldn't swear to . . . the accused man at the scene of the crime.
- 4 Do you think your father would object to our . . .
- 5 He said he wasn't used to . . . in public.
- 6 Having almost run out of money, we were reduced to . . . in a cheap hotel.
- 7 He tried to limit himself to . . . ten cigarettes a day.
- 8 Manufacturers were asked to devote all their energies to . . . exports.
- 9 We shan't be going. My wife doesn't feel up to . . . so far.
- 10 The committee could see no alternative to . . . the plan in its original form.

to + gerund or infinitive

128 Decide whether to is functioning as a preposition or as part of an infinitive, and then complete the sentences with the gerund or the infinitive of the verbs in brackets.

- 1 The speaker said he would confine himself to (try) to (answer) four questions.
- 2 By selling council houses, we are able to devote more money to (build) fresh properties.
- 3 Hard work is the key to (pass) examinations.
- 4 The idea of a laboratory permanently in space is moving rapidly nearer to (become) a reality.
- 5 Having suggested the scheme myself, I now feel committed to (try) to (make) it work.

- 6 I think that is what he said, but I can't swear to (have) heard him correctly.
- 7 He used to (dislike) London, but he now seems resigned to (live) there.
- 8 Jones came very close to (win) a gold medal for Britain in the Olympics.
- 9 It might be better to (try) to (discuss) it in his own language, as he isn't used to (speak) English.
- 10 Most educationalists agree that no teacher's duties should be limited solely to (teach).
- 11 Unreliable delivery dates are one of the most important obstacles to (increase) our exports.
- 12 Since the introduction of new services, many businessmen have taken to (travel) by train for journeys between 100–200 miles.

Group 1: verbs followed by the gerund

The gerund is used after these verbs. The verbs in italics may also be followed by a clause introduced by that.

acknowledge ¹	fancy ¹	propose (suggest)
admit ¹	favour	recall
advocate	finish	recollect
anticipate	foresee	repent
appreciate	forgive	report avoid	grudge	resent
celebrate	imagine ¹	resist
consider (think about)	include	resume contemplate	involve	risk
defer	justify	stop ²
delay	keep (persist in)	suffer
deny	mean (entail)	suggest ³
detest	mention	tolerate dislike	mind (object to)	understand ¹ dispute	miss	can't help (have no control over)
doubt	necessitate	can't endure endanger	pardon	can't stand
enjoy	postpone	It's no good entail	practise	It's no use envisage	prevent	It's (not) worth escape	prohibit excuse

Notes:

- 1 Like the verbs in Group 5, these verbs may also be followed by a noun + to be or to have:

The scientist admitted that the results of his experiments were disappointing.

The scientist admitted the results of his experiments to be disappointing.

- ² The gerund after stop indicates the cessation of an activity:

He stopped smoking on his doctor's advice.
(i.e. He didn't smoke any more)

Stop may also be followed by an infinitive—an infinitive of purpose:

He stopped to smoke a cigarette.

The infinitive indicates that he stopped (whatever he was doing) in order to smoke a cigarette: He stopped eating (in order) to smoke a cigarette.

- ³ Suggest raises special problems when followed by a 'that' clause (see page 40). The 'full' construction is:

a I suggest (that) he should see a specialist immediately.

However, the conjunction that is often omitted, and so is should (which in any case simply reinforces the idea of recommendation implied in the word suggest):

b I suggest he see a specialist immediately.

The dependent verb may then be 'regularized':

c I suggest he sees a specialist immediately.

Hence in the past tense we find:

a I suggested he should see a specialist immediately.

b I suggested he see a specialist immediately.

c I suggested he saw a specialist immediately.

Verb + gerund

129 Complete the sentences with the gerund of a suitable verb.

- The newspaper's financial editor advised his readers not to buy speculative shares unless they were prepared to risk . . . their money.
- This room will look very cheerful once you've finished . . . it.
- I wish you wouldn't keep . . . me what I already know all too well.
- It is difficult to see how the company can avoid . . . another loss this year.
- It was so ridiculous that I couldn't resist . . . outright.
- The secretary asked if I would mind . . . for a few minutes.
- The way to learn a language is to practise . . . it as often as possible.
- Everyone said how much they had enjoyed . . . to the speech.
- When you've finished the book, you can tell me if it's worth . . .
- He was very lucky to escape . . . (passive) to prison.
- You should stop . . . about the examination.
- She was so upset that she couldn't help . . .

- 13 The job will entail your . . . to different parts of the country, often at short notice.
- 14 The teacher said that he wouldn't tolerate my . . . late every day.
- 15 The question is so trivial, it hardly justifies our . . . up any more time discussing it.

Nouns and pronouns before gerunds

In sentences 1–13 in the above exercise, the subject of the main verb is also the subject of the gerund. But compare these two sentences:

- a* I don't mind saying I was wrong.
b I don't mind you (or your?) saying I was wrong.

In sentence a, I is the subject of both don't mind and saying; while in sentence b, there are different subjects, I and you for the two verbs mind and say respectively. We then have to decide which form of personal pronoun to use before the gerund, the object form or the possessive—you saying or your saying.¹

We feel the necessity for a possessive form more particularly when the gerund is the subject of the main verb:

Your calling on us just at this time is most inconvenient.

When the gerund is the object of the main verb, however, we often use the object form of a personal pronoun, more especially in the spoken language:

Do you mind me coming as well?

The object form of a personal pronoun or other noun is always preferred where the use of a possessive would entail an awkward (or, in spoken English, misleading) construction:

I remember him and his sister coming to London.
 (Not his and his sister's)

With other pronouns, only one form may be available:

I don't envisage there being any real disagreement.

¹ In this example, and in those that follow, the gerund is operating as a verb in a non-finite noun clause. Where the gerund has a purely noun-like function, only the possessive form is possible:

The police are to be congratulated on their handling of the affair.

The problem of choice does not arise in analogous constructions with infinitives, where only the object form of a pronoun (or other noun) is possible:

- a* I'd like to stay here.
b I'd like you to stay here.

The possessive form also tends not to be used with common nouns (or even proper nouns) before the gerund:

- I object to the car being left there. (Not the car's*)
 I appreciated John helping me. (Rather than John's)

The use of the possessive form is, therefore, found mainly with personal pronouns, and then principally in the written language. There are, however, occasions when the possessive seems to be the preferred form in both written and spoken English, and students can become familiar with these only through practice.

Verb + (noun or pronoun) + gerund

130 Replace the words in italics by a gerund construction. The object or possessive form of a pronoun or noun will be required before the gerund in some cases, e.g.

I didn't recall that he had said any such thing.
 I didn't recall him (or his) saying (or having said) any such thing.

- 1 He didn't even acknowledge that he had received the invitation.
- 2 The witness reported that he had seen a dark saloon car parked outside the bank at the time of the robbery.
- 3 The accused admitted that he had received the stolen goods.
- 4 The headmaster suggested that I should try the examination again the following year.
- 5 I don't recollect that I actually promised to help you.
- 6 A group of MPs has advocated that the Government should set up a special commission of inquiry.
- 7 Do you anticipate that there will be any real problem in getting support?
- 8 Surely he won't deny that he was there on that occasion?
- 9 No one doubted that he was sincere in his beliefs.
- 10 I can't imagine that he would ever agree to such a proposition.

131 Complete the sentences, using a gerund construction.

- 1 The public authorities should prohibit . . .
- 2 I strongly resent you . . .
- 3 It would be unwise to defer . . .
- 4 It's no good . . . You know how he detests . . .
- 5 If he mentions . . ., I shan't be able to resist . . .
- 6 Forgive my . . ., but don't you miss . . . now that you're living in England?
- 7 Fancy . . . here today!
- 8 Will the new job involve you . . .?
- 9 Why don't you stop . . . if you so dislike . . .?

- 10 I can't imagine his ever ...
 11 The magistrate stated that the court appreciated the man's ...
 12 My wife suggested ... for a holiday, but I favoured ... instead.
 13 I see no harm in your ...
 14 I doubt whether the landlord will insist on our ...
 15 How can we be sure of his ...?

Verbs followed by the infinitive

It is necessary first to distinguish two important patterns:

- i* I offered to help. (subject + verb + infinitive)
ii I invited him to come. (subject + verb + noun + infinitive)

We can then establish three groups of verbs:

- 2a those that follow only pattern i;
 2b those that follow only pattern ii;
 2c those that can follow either pattern i or pattern ii.

Group 2a: verbs followed by the infinitive without preceding noun

The infinitive without a preceding noun is used after these verbs. The verbs in italics may also be followed by a clause introduced by that.

afford	get (reach the stage of)	promise	propose (intend)
agree	guarantee	propose (turn out)	prove (turn out) aim	happen ¹	refuse	resolve appear ¹	hasten	seek	seem ¹
arrange	have (be obliged)	strive	swear bother	hesitate	learn (how to)	tend care	hope	long	threaten chance ¹	learn (how to)	manage	trouble
claim	long	offer	undertake condescend	manage	prepare	volunteer consent	offer	presume (take the liberty)	vow
decide	prepare	pretend
demand	presume (take the liberty)	proceed
determine	pretend	profess endeavour	proceed
fail	profess

Note:

- ¹ These verbs may be followed by a 'that' clause only when they have the subject it:

It appeared that no one had taken the problem seriously.

Subject + verb + infinitive

- 132 Replace the words in italics by an infinitive construction.
- The police hope that they will solve the crime soon.
 - The defeated champion swore that he would have his revenge.
 - He claimed that he was an expert in such matters.
 - The accused pretended that he didn't understand the lawyer's question.
 - The chairman threatened that he would resign if his policies were not adopted.
 - The student resolved that he would do better next time.
 - I vowed that I would never follow his advice again.
 - No teacher would profess that he knows all the answers.
 - The management promised that they would look into the workers' grievances.
 - They couldn't, however, guarantee that they would meet all the men's demands.

133 Complete the sentences, using an infinitive construction.

- The question is whether anyone will volunteer ...
- Surely you would never consent ...?
- Our reporter has just telephoned to say that rescue teams will tomorrow endeavour ...
- As soon as the volcano first showed signs of activity, the entire population of the village prepared ...
- You needn't bother ... I've already arranged ...
- It's many years since I went to my home town. I'm longing ...
- I hesitated ... , since I didn't know him very well.
- It tends ... in winter in the north of England.
- A rather officious policeman demanded ...
- The idea proved ... very unpopular.

Composition exercise

- 134 Write sentences based on the material given. You should vary the subject of your sentences (do not use only pronouns), as well as the tense of the main verbs, e.g.

arrange/meet/the following day

The two sides arranged to meet for further talks the following day.

- afford/waste/time
- appear/understand
- decide/work/in future

- 4 fail/complete/on time
- 5 hasten/apologize for
- 6 manage/avoid/accident
- 7 offer/repair/damage
- 8 refuse/listen to
- 9 proceed/make/long speech about
- 10 undertake/finish/within six months

Group 2b: verbs followed by a noun + infinitive

A noun + infinitive is used after these verbs. The verbs in italics may also be followed by a clause introduced by that.

accustom	entice	order ¹ aid	entitle	persuade ²
appoint	entreat ¹	press assist	force ⁴	prompt cause	get (= 'causative') ⁵	provoke challenge	impel	remind ²
command ¹	explore ¹	require ¹ commission	incite	stimulate compel ¹	induce	summon defy	inspire	teach (how to) ³
direct ¹	instruct ²	tell (instruct, order)
drive	invite	tempt
empower	lead	trust ¹
enable	leave (put responsibility on)	warn ³
encourage	oblige ⁴

Notes:

- 1 We do not put a noun between these verbs and a 'that' clause:
The commander ordered his troops to lay down their arms.
The commander ordered that his troops should lay down their arms.
Note that the use of should is a common feature in such clauses after these verbs. (See Exercise 22.)
- 2 We always put a noun between these verbs and a 'that' clause:
He persuaded me to change my mind.
He persuaded me that his plan was preferable.
Students often confuse the patterns associated with persuade and convince. Only persuade can be followed by a noun + infinitive construction, but both verbs can be followed by a 'that' clause:
He persuaded | me that his plan was preferable.

- 3 A noun is optional between these verbs and a 'that' clause:
The Chancellor warned unions not to press for higher wages.
The Chancellor warned unions that higher wages would mean higher prices.
The Chancellor warned that higher wages would mean higher prices.
Make is roughly synonymous with these verbs, but is followed (a) in the active, by a noun + infinitive without to:
He made me do all the work again.
(b) in the passive, by an infinitive with to:
I was made to do all the work again.
See Exercises 144, 145.
5 Get may also be followed by an object + past participle, to express a passive meaning (see p. 114):
We'll have to get someone to repair the door. (Active) = We'll have to get the door repaired. (Passive)
'Causative' have is synonymous with get, but is followed by a noun + the infinitive without to (see group 4):
Before you buy the house, you should get a surveyor to look over it.
Before you buy the house, you should have a surveyor look over it.

Subject + verb + noun + infinitive

135 Complete the sentences with the infinitive of a suitable verb.

- 1 A season ticket entitles the holder . . . as many journeys as he wishes within the stated period.
- 2 Parents should tell their children . . . great care when crossing busy roads.
- 3 The speaker challenged his opponent . . . his views openly.
- 4 Having voted the chairman off the board only one week earlier, they then invited him . . . it.
- 5 I can't think what induced him . . . such a thing.
- 6 His conscience compelled him . . . his guilt.
- 7 The Company has commissioned a team of efficiency experts . . . organization and methods.
- 8 It was thought that a small group of troublemakers were inciting the workers . . .
- 9 The leader of the expedition inspired everyone . . . his example.
- 10 Bad weather prompted us . . . our holiday.

136 Rewrite the sentences in reported speech, using a noun + infinitive construction with the verbs suggested in brackets.

- 1 'You are to appear before the magistrate at 10 a.m. on Thursday,' the letter said. (summon)
- 2 'Do not bathe when the red flag is flying,' the notice said. (warn)
- 3 His wife left him a note saying 'Don't forget to lock the door.' (remind)
- 4 'Passengers should check in at the airport thirty minutes before take-off,' stated a notice at the air terminal. (instruct)
- 5 'I do hope you'll have another drink before you go,' said my old friend. (press)
- 6 'Pay attention to what you're doing,' said the teacher. (tell)
- 7 'Please don't tell my husband,' she said to her friend. (implore)
- 8 'Would you like to join me for dinner?' I said to the new member. (invite)
- 9 'I would take a more optimistic view of the matter, if I were you,' my friend told me. (encourage)
- 10 'Make your way to Waterloo Station, and wait under the main clock,' the letter said. (direct)

137 Complete the sentences, using an infinitive construction.

- 1 What could have provoked him . . . ?
- 2 The manager appointed an assistant . . .
- 3 Who taught you . . . ?
- 4 He ordered the cab-driver . . .
- 5 The realities of the situation forced us . . .
- 6 No one could understand what led him . . .
- 7 Cancellation of the flight obliged many passengers . . .
- 8 Everyone went home immediately after the party, leaving me . . .
- 9 While I was filling up with petrol, I got the mechanic . . .
- 10 Seeing my friend's holiday brochures tempted me . . .
- 11 His great wealth enabled him . . .
- 12 The news of his failure caused the student . . .

Group 2c: verbs followed by the infinitive, with or without preceding noun

The infinitive, with or without a preceding noun, is used after these verbs. The verbs in italics may also be followed by a clause introduced by that.

ask ¹	desire ¹	mean (intend) ¹
beg ¹	elect	request ¹
choose	expect ¹	want
dare ²	help ³	wish ¹

Notes:

- 1 We do not put a noun between these verbs and a 'that' clause.
- 2 If no noun is used after dare, two patterns are possible:
 - (a) the infinitive with to:
He dared to call me a fool to my face.
 - (b) the infinitive without to (more especially in negative and interrogative sentences). In this case, dare patterns like an auxiliary verb, the negative being formed by the addition of not (n't), and the interrogative by simple inversion of subject and verb:
He daren't tell me what happened.
Dare you mention it to him?
- 3 Help may be followed by the infinitive with or without to:
Everyone helped (me) (to) clean the place up.
There is, of course a difference between the uses of help in the following sentences:
I can't help to clean the place up. (= I can't give assistance)
I can't help falling asleep. (= I can't prevent myself from falling asleep) (See Group 1).

The need to make such a distinction arises only after can't/couldn't.

Subject + verb + (noun) + infinitive

138 Write sentences based on the given facts, beginning your answers as suggested. Some sentences require a noun before the infinitive.

- 1 Young Smith will be leading the sales mission to America. The manager thinks he's the best man for the job. (The manager has chosen . . .)
- 2 I hope you didn't tell anyone. It was supposed to be a secret. (I didn't mean . . .)
- 3 An invitation to dinner from the Robinsons? What's come over them? (I didn't expect . . .)
- 4 I shall never finish all this work by myself. (Will you help . . . ?)
- 5 The manager is very firm about punctuality. (He expects . . .)
- 6 John is terribly inefficient these days. I doubt whether he'll keep his job much longer. (The firm will probably ask . . .)
- 7 I'd like some information, and you're the very person to give it to me. (I want . . .)
- 8 The police are interested in two particular men. An interview with them would be very helpful at this stage. (The police wish . . .)
- 9 The man was given two alternatives: a small fine or a term of imprisonment. He refused to pay the fine. (The man elected . . .)
- 10 I'm sure he didn't realize you'd be so unhappy about it. (He didn't mean . . .)

Group 3: verbs followed by the gerund or the infinitive

The gerund or infinitive may be used after these verbs. The letters a, b and c indicate which infinitive pattern is possible (see pages 137 and 146). The verbs in italics may also be followed by a clause introduced by that.

advise b	fear a	omit a allow ¹ b	forbear a	permit ¹ b attempt a	forbid b	plan a authorize b	forget a	prefer c begin a	go on a	recommend b
can't bear c	hate c	regret a cease a	intend c	remember a continue a	like c	require b decline a	loathe c	start a deserve a	love c	try a disdain a	need c	urge b
dread a	neglect a	venture a

Note:

- ¹ Let is roughly synonymous with these verbs, but is used only in the active, and is followed only by a noun + infinitive without to (never by an -ing form):

My neighbour let me borrow his car.

(See Exercise 144.)

While all these verbs may be followed by a gerund or an infinitive this is simply an observation of what is grammatically possible. In some cases, the choice of form may not matter very much, while in others it may create important differences in meaning.

- [1] After some verbs (and after particular forms of these verbs), the choice may be determined by considerations of style rather than of meaning:

It's just starting to rain. (Not starting raining)

But the choice may also rest on the nature of the dependent verb itself.

There is some correspondence between the infinitive and a 'simple' verb form, and between the gerund and a 'progressive' verb form. Some verbs are rarely used in the progressive form (see page 71), and the gerund could hardly replace the infinitive in the following sentence:

He began to realize that he had made a mistake.

- [2] With many of the verbs expressing feelings or attitudes (like, love, prefer, hate, loathe, dread, can't bear), the distinction between gerund and infinitive corresponds to the distinction general versus particular:

I like looking round antique shops.

In such sentences, the infinitive is possible, but is a less likely choice than the gerund. Like is very similar in this context to enjoy (Group 1).

If the verb refers to a specific action at a specific time, the infinitive is always used:

I'd like to visit you in your new house when you've settled in.

In this sentence, moreover, like corresponds more closely to the idea of desire, preference, or choice. This may help to explain why dislike is always followed by the gerund, while don't like may be followed by the gerund or an infinitive in the same way as like. Dislike is associated more exclusively with the idea of repugnance (the opposite of enjoyment):

I dislike asking him for favours. (i.e. I don't enjoy asking)

Don't like, on the other hand, operates as the negative of like in both its uses:

a I don't like looking round antique shops.

b I wouldn't like to disturb him if he's working.
(Not 'I would dislike...')

Prefer raises an additional problem. The normal construction is 'to prefer one thing to another' (not 'than another'):

I prefer cigars to cigarettes.

I prefer riding to walking.

We cannot say: *I prefer to ride to to walk.

Nor do we say: *I prefer to ride to walking.

When we need to complete such a construction as 'I should prefer to stay at home...', where it is not possible to follow with a gerund or an infinitive, we usually complete the sentence with rather than, as follows:

I should prefer to stay at home rather than go out in this weather.

Alternatively, we can use the idiomatic phrase 'I'd rather':

I'd rather stay at home than go out in this weather.¹

- [3] After the verbs remember, forget, regret, the gerund refers to an action or event earlier in time than that of the main verb:

He remembered giving (or having given) her the message.

= He remembered that he had given her the message at some earlier time.

This may be compared with the use of recall and recollect in Group 1 (page 142).

I regret saying (or having said) that you were mistaken.

= I regret that I said (at some earlier time) that you were mistaken.

The infinitive after these verbs refers to an action or event occurring at the same time as that of the main verb, or later:

He remembered to give her the message. (He called to mind what had to be done, and then did it)

Don't forget to phone me tomorrow! (I trust you will call to mind what is to be done, and then do it)

I regret to say that you were mistaken. (I am sorry that I must now tell you that you were mistaken)

¹ Note that 'I'd rather' is followed by the infinitive without to in this sentence. See also page 95.

[4] Unlike phrasal verbs in general, go on may be followed by the gerund or an infinitive. The gerund after go on indicates that an existing state of affairs continues:

He went on asking, although I had asked him to stop.

The infinitive indicates a new, or the next, activity in a chain of activities:

Having mentioned the main problem, he went on to talk of other, less important matters.

[5] The verb try is in a category of its own. If our hostess at a tea party says 'Try some of my home-made cake', she is clearly inviting us to eat some, and perhaps to give her our opinion of it; she is not inviting us to see whether or not we can eat it. Similarly, if we use try + gerund, we are not referring to the possibility or impossibility of performing the action, but to the result or experience of performing it:

Have you ever tried driving in London? I have, and it's not very pleasant.

The question here is 'Have you actually had the experience of driving in London? If so, you'll know what it's like.'

Try + infinitive relates to the idea of possibility:

You should try to answer all the questions.

= See whether or not you can answer all the questions.¹

[6] The gerund after need and deserve (and want, Group 2c) is equivalent in meaning to a passive infinitive:

My pen needs filling (= to be filled)

The fire wants making up (= to be made up)

The point deserved mentioning (= to be mentioned)

Gerund or infinitive

139 Dame Mary Warnock, teaching at Oxford and also working in London, is about to take over as Mistress of Girton College, Cambridge, and talks about the sort of person she is. Complete the extract with the gerund or infinitive (with or without to) of the verbs in brackets.

'I enjoy challenges. I like the idea of (have) a new job in the year I'm 60. I hate (not have) something on the go. I prefer (be asked) (do) things rather than (think) them up for myself, but I would hate (get up) in the morning and feel there was no purpose to my life.

'Normally I get up at 7.30. I don't like (stay) in bed much. It is no treat (be told) I needn't (get up) until later. I like (go) through my ¹ An alternative construction is try and + infinitive without 'to':

Try and answer all the questions.

Note, however, that this alternative is possible only after the form try:

I'll try and come early. He'll try and do it tomorrow.

But not *I/He tried and did it.

post first thing. If I don't read my letters over breakfast I tend (lose) them. I sort of cart them round the house and don't quite know where they are and that can be fatal, so I try (have) a systematic routine first thing.

'I still divide my time between London and Oxford. On an Oxford day I start (teach) at nine. I have (fit) my teaching into two days so the earlier I can persuade anyone (come) the better. I remember (think) nine o'clock was outrageously early for a tutorial when I was an undergraduate, and some of my students (do) too. But on the whole they're quite good.'

(from the Sunday Times, 16 December 1984)

140 Complete the sentences with the gerund or the infinitive of the verbs in brackets, using the correct form of any pronouns that are included.

- 1 If the Government's policy is to succeed, they must try (keep) prices in check.
- 2 The shareholders all think they know what should be done, but the board still needs (convince).
- 3 Let's invite him. I'm sure he would love (come).
- 4 Someone in the office had made a mistake, and the firm regretted (cause) the customer inconvenience.
- 5 We plan (take) our holidays abroad this year.
- 6 The teacher doesn't permit (smoke) during the lessons.
- 7 I vaguely remember (he, say) something like that.
- 8 Come over here! I'd like (you, see) this.
- 9 I always try (be) punctual, but I don't always succeed.
- 10 It's a tricky problem. I recommend (you, consult) an expert.
- 11 He'd prefer (you, go) to his place, if that's convenient.
- 12 A membership card authorizes (the holder, use) the club's facilities for a period of twelve months.
- 13 For the second time this year, Miss Black will attempt (swim) the Channel in less than five hours.
- 14 Children should start (learn) a foreign language at primary school.
- 15 The film was so terrifying that she could hardly bear (watch) it.
- 16 The new committee member did not venture (speak) at his first meeting.
- 17 They began (drive) at six in the morning, and were still on the road ten hours later.
- 18 The union leaders urged (their members, think) again before (decide) (strike).
- 19 He remembered (pass) on most of the information, but omitted (mention) one or two of the most important facts.
- 20 The reporters asked many questions which the freed men declined (answer).

141 Rewrite the sentences, replacing the words in italics by a gerund or infinitive construction.

- 1 He preferred that I should say nothing about it at present.
- 2 She couldn't bear that he should think of her in that way.
- 3 He was surprised to find the door open. He distinctly remembered that he had locked it before going to bed.
- 4 The speaker making the radio appeal urged that his listeners should give generously to a deserving cause.
- 5 The publishers withdrew the offending passages in the book, and publicly regretted that they had caused anyone embarrassment.
- 6 The law requires that all cars should be regularly tested for safety and efficiency.
- 7 His lawyer advised him that he should drop the case, since it was unlikely to succeed.
- 8 His doctor recommended that he should try taking sleeping pills for a while.

142 Complete the sentences, using a gerund or an infinitive construction.

- 1 Do you remember . . . last night?
- 2 Did you remember . . . last night?
- 3 Our teacher didn't think we needed . . .
- 4 I think the piano needs . . .
- 5 Perhaps you would prefer not . . .
- 6 Does he prefer . . . to . . . ?
- 7 I trust you won't forget . . .
- 8 Do your parents allow you . . . ?
- 9 A truthful person hates . . .
- 10 His father has a fearsome temper. I'd hate . . .
- 11 Having discussed the first item on the agenda at great length, the committee went on . . .
- 12 I can't understand why he goes on . . . ; if he hates . . .
- 13 You should try . . . I'm sure you'd find it much easier.
- 14 He may not have succeeded, but at least he tried . . .

Group 4: verbs followed by a noun + present participle or infinitive without to

These verbs are followed by an object and a 'present' participle or an infinitive without to. The verbs in italics may also be followed by a clause introduced by that.

feel	notice	observe	perceive	sense	watch
-------------	---------------	----------------	-----------------	--------------	--------------

These verbs are commonly called 'verbs of perception'. We can compare the use of the infinitive after these verbs with the use of a 'simple' verb form, and the present participle with a 'progressive' form:

I saw him enter the shop. (I saw the whole action—he opened the door, went in, and disappeared)

I saw him entering the shop. (This action was in progress when I saw him) In the following example, only the participle makes good sense, in terms of the Company's survival:

The Company saw its market disappearing, and took immediate steps to develop new products.

After these verbs in the passive, we use the infinitive with to or the present participle:

The man was seen to board a train at Euston.

The man was last seen boarding a train at Euston.

- [1] Catch, spot, find, discover, and smell are also associated in meaning with the above group. None, however, is followed by an infinitive. All may be followed by an object and a present participle:

The teacher caught the pupil cheating.

The search party found (spotted, discovered) the climbers clinging to a rock face.

He smelt the meat cooking.

- [1.1] Spot, find, and discover may be followed by an object + past participle:

The police found the money hidden in a disused garage.

They may also be followed by a 'that' clause, or by an object + to be or to have. In this case, the verbs suggest the discovery of a fact rather than an act, an intellectual awareness rather than a physical perception:

Scientists found that the theory was correct.

Scientists found the theory to be correct.

- [1.2] Smell may also be followed by a 'that' clause:

You could smell that someone had been smoking a cigar.

- [2] Leave and keep (someone in a certain situation or condition) share some of the characteristics of find and discover. They can be followed by an object + a present or past participle:

He left me sitting in the restaurant alone.

He kept me waiting.

He left his bicycle propped against a wall.

He kept the dog chained up.

- [3] 'Causative' have shares the grammatical characteristics of many of the above verbs, though it is not related to them in meaning. It is followed by a noun and:

(a) the infinitive without to:

I'll have the electrician check everything while he's here.

(b) the present participle:

The doctor will soon have you walking again.

(c) the past participle¹:

We have our central heating boiler serviced every six months.

Subject + verb + noun + participle or infinitive

143 Complete the sentences, using suitable constructions from those illustrated above.

- 1 Did anyone see you . . . ?
- 2 I hope your friend didn't hear you . . .
- 3 A huge crowd watched the firemen . . .
- 4 We could feel the sun . . .
- 5 'Don't worry!' said the doctor. 'I'll soon have you . . .'
- 6 You must have been very late last night. I didn't even hear you . . .
- 7 The pickpocket was observed . . .
- 8 High on the mountain, he could perceive three small figures . . .
- 9 I searched the desk, and discovered the letter . . .
- 10 The woman caught her husband . . .
- 11 Leave the car with me. I'll have it . . .
- 12 I was asked if I had noticed anyone . . .
- 13 When his leg was examined, it was found . . .
- 14 Where's my umbrella? I thought I left it . . .
- 15 Although the station was crowded, I soon spotted my friend . . .
- 16 The assistant kept the customer . . .
- 17 The iron's far too hot! Can't you smell the material . . . ?
- 18 I hope they won't keep us . . .
- 19 They found the survivors . . .
- 20 We all suddenly sensed danger . . .

make and let

These two verbs are followed by an object + infinitive without to:

He made me do all the work again.

My neighbour let me borrow his car.

144 Complete the sentences, using an infinitive construction (without to).

- 1 I've no wish to make him . . . if he doesn't want to.
- 2 It's no good. The car's broken down and I can't make it . . .
- 3 My brother refuses to let problems . . .
- 4 If the job hasn't been done properly, you should make the workman . . .

¹ See exercise 101, page 114.

- 5 Do you think it's wise to let your children . . . ?
- 6 Since the car was being driven erratically, the police made the driver . . .
- 7 We shouldn't let one small setback . . .
- 8 You'd better let your doctor . . .
- 9 Many unions seem unable to do anything to make their members . . .
- 10 When he told me the whole story, it made me . . .

Only make is used in the passive, and in this case is followed by an infinitive with 'to':

I was made to do all the work again.

make in the passive (Situations)

145 Answer the questions, using a passive construction with make.

When you were a child, what were you made to do—

- 1 just before going to bed?
- 2 as soon as you got up in the morning?
- 3 before you ate your meals?
- 4 after you had eaten your meals?
- 5 on Sunday mornings?
- 6 if you were rude to someone?
- 7 when you were given presents?
- 8 if your room was untidy?
- 9 whenever you felt ill?
- 10 if your work at school was bad?

Group 5: verbs followed by a 'that' clause

These verbs are followed by a clause introduced by that. They may also be followed by an object (very often it) + to be or to have.

allow (admit)	feel (think)	reckon assume	guess	recognize believe	hear (be informed)	report
calculate	hold (maintain the opinion)	reveal confess	indicate	see (realize) confirm	know	sense (be aware of) consider (be of the opinion)	learn (be informed, discover)	show declare	maintain	state
demonstrate	presume (assume)	suppose disclose	prove (show conclusively)	suspect estimate		think

Subject + verb + 'that' clause

- 146 Rewrite the sentences, substituting a 'that' clause for the words in italics. (NB. Students should regard their answers as the more usual construction, and the infinitive construction as a stylistic variant.)
- The police believed their informant to be reliable.
 - Our correspondent reports the situation to be now under control.
 - The Meteorological Office stated it to be unusual for Britain to experience such a prolonged spell of fine, dry weather.
 - Many British people consider it to be cruel to use live animals in laboratory experiments.
 - Everyone assumed what he said to be based on fact.
 - Pressed by shareholders for further details, the chairman confessed it to be likely that profits would show a further fall.
 - On the other hand, he maintained his long-term optimism to be justified.
 - The public clearly suspect the Government to be hiding the full truth about what happened.
 - The climbers reckoned the ascent to have taken nearly five and a half hours.
 - The witness later disclosed his evidence to have been perjured.
 - Researchers have now proved earlier theories to have been incorrect.
 - The man was accused of receiving goods, knowing them to have been stolen.

Subject + verb + noun + to be

- 147 Replace the words in italics by an object + infinitive construction, as in the examples.
- Our correspondent understands that it is impossible for tourists to enter the country at present.
- Our correspondent understands it to be impossible for tourists to enter the country at present.
- The manufacturers themselves now acknowledge that their market predictions were somewhat over-optimistic.
- The manufacturers themselves now acknowledge their market predictions to have been somewhat over-optimistic.
- Note that we use the present infinitive if the time reference of the two clauses is the same (example a), and the perfect infinitive if the verb in the noun clause refers to an earlier time than the verb in the main clause (example b). See also notes on page 113.

- 1 The Court declared that the book was obscene.

- Teachers have found that the overhead projector is invaluable as a teaching aid.
- The majority of critics thought that the film was highly original.
- Many of the audience considered that the speaker had overstated his case.
- Evidence showed that the man's alibi was a complete fabrication.
- The architect's clients had assumed that the construction of such a building was impracticable, whereas the architect himself believed that it was perfectly feasible.
- At a very early age, Paderewski revealed that he was a master of the keyboard.
- Everyone knew that he was a man of integrity.
- Detectives investigating the robbery discovered that £20,000 worth of precious stones were missing.
- Although most people once thought that it was impossible, several climbers have now scaled the north face of the Eiger in winter.

Participles and gerunds

Introduction

[1] We have seen that gerunds either (1) function as nouns standing alone, or (2) operate as verbs in non-finite noun clauses:¹

- 1 Thank goodness the hammering has stopped!
- 2 Closing the factory means putting people out of work.

Participles either (1) function as verbal adjectives, or (2) operate as verbs in non-finite clauses¹ (very commonly the equivalent of adjectival or adverbial clauses):

- 1a Two men were trapped in the blazing house.
- 1b After last night's gales, some roads are blocked by fallen trees.
- 2a The thieves took two mail-bags containing registered letters. (adjectival clause—compare: 'that contained registered letters')
- 2b Having received their final medical check, the astronauts boarded their spacecraft. (adverbial clause of time—compare: 'When they had received their final medical check')
- 2c Given time, he'll make a first-class tennis player. (adverbial clause of condition—compare: 'provided [that] he is given time')

In some cases, the participial clause is the equivalent of a coordinate clause:

- 3 Parts of an aircraft fell on to a Somerset village today, narrowly missing a group of children. (Compare: '... and narrowly missed a group of children')

¹ For an explanation of this term, see Notes on Clauses in the Appendix.

Although basically there are only two participles, the 'present' participle and the 'past' participle, these two may be used in combination to make three other forms, all five forms being illustrated below:

Participles

Choosing his words with care, the speaker suggested that the Government was mistaken in its attitude. (Present Participle)

Seen in this light, the matter is not as serious as people generally suppose. (Past Participle)

Having picked the team to meet India in the final test match, the selectors now have to wait till Tuesday to discover whether or not their choice was wise. (Perfect Participle)

He wasn't asked to take on the chairmanship of the society, being considered insufficiently popular with all members. (Passive Present Participle)

Having been told that bad weather was on the way, the climbers decided to put off their attempt on the Eiger until the following week. (Passive Perfect Participle)

Gerunds

Choosing the prettiest girl in the competition proved very difficult. (Subject)

No equivalent form

He regretted having picked Jones as captain of the team. (Object)

He felt very flattered at being considered the best man to take on the chairmanship of the society. (Object of a preposition)

He denied having been told to service the engine before take-off. (Object)

- [2] In each of the above sentences with participles, we can see that the participle is related to a noun (the subject of the main clause), and students should avoid what is called a misrelated participle:

Standing in the middle of the crowd, the sense of frustration and anger could be plainly felt.

Here, the participle is related to the sense of frustration and anger, which, clearly, could not be standing in the middle of the crowd. What the writer intended was:

Standing in the middle of the crowd, I could plainly feel the sense of frustration and anger.

- [3] An unrelated participle is, however, found in the following circumstances: (a) with certain verbs, when the subject of the participle is felt to be the indefinite pronoun one:

Judging from recent events, the Government appears to be gaining in popularity. (= If one judges; if one may judge)

He did quite well, taking everything into consideration. (= When/If one takes)

- (b) in certain stereotyped phrases:

Strictly speaking, the Isle of Man is not part of the United Kingdom.

- (c) When the participle has the force of a preposition:

Regarding the question of absenteeism, a sense of responsibility seems to have been lacking in some workers. (= With regard to)

- [4] Sometimes the participial clause contains its own subject, in which case the construction is called absolute:

The holidays being over, we must now get down to some hard work.

England is experiencing its hardest winter for years, some areas having lain under six feet of snow for nearly two months.

- [5] Non-finite clauses, like finite clauses, may be introduced by conjunctions:

a While flying over the Channel, the pilot saw what he thought to be a meteorite.

b If taken literally, the sentence is nonsensical.

- [6] Where the non-finite clauses are adverbial (as they are in the two sentences above), the two clauses in each sentence may be reversible:

a The pilot saw what he thought to be a meteorite while flying over the Channel.

b The sentence is nonsensical if taken literally.

It would not be possible to reverse the order of the clauses in sentence a if the conjunction while were omitted, without changing the meaning:

Flying over the Channel, the pilot saw what he thought to be a meteorite. (i.e., the pilot was flying)

The pilot saw what he thought to be a meteorite flying over the Channel. (i.e. the meteorite was flying)

Nor is it possible to reverse the order of clauses in the following sentence, where the non-finite clause is adjectival:

The class later discussed several points arising from the lecture.

(* Arising from the lecture, the class later discussed several points.)

Non-finite clauses using participles

- 148 Replace the finite clauses in italics by non-finite clauses, using participles, and making any necessary changes in word order, e.g.

When he heard a noise, he went outside to see what was happening.

Hearing a noise, he went outside to see what was happening.

When he had listened to the speaker for five minutes, he got up and left.

Having listened to the speaker for five minutes, he got up and left.

Notes:

- [1] We use the 'present' participle in the non-finite clause if the time reference of the verb is the same as that in the main clause (example a); we use the 'perfect' participle if the verb in the non-finite clause refers to an earlier time than the verb in the main clause (example b). See also pages 113 and 160 for notes on similar characteristics in the use of infinitives in non-finite clauses.

- [2] In Nos. 4 and 7, the participial clause replaces an adjectival clause, in the first case being non-defining and so used with commas, and in the second being defining and so used without commas. Participial clauses will be found a useful alternative to constructions using relative pronouns in the later exercises in synthesis. See also Exercises 177, 178 in Section Two.
- 1 As he had witnessed the crime, he was expected to give evidence in court.
 - 2 When the editor learned that his newspaper had been taken over by a rival publisher, he resigned from his position.
 - 3 I declined his offer of a loan and said that I didn't like owing people money.
 - 4 The demonstrator, who protested violently, was led away by the police.
 - 5 When I visit a strange city, I like to have a guide-book with me.
 - 6 Although the motion received general support from the House, it was not carried until it had been considerably amended.
 - 7 Motorists who intend to take their cars with them to the Continent are advised to make early reservations.
 - 8 It strikes me that he is an intelligent man. ('He . . .')
 - 9 Now that I have heard your side of the question, I am more inclined to agree with you.
 - 10 As he had been warned that bad weather lay ahead, the ship's captain changed course.
 - 11 If one may judge by what the critics say, this new play is worth seeing. (Unrelated participle)
 - 12 Now that spring has come, we may perhaps look forward to better weather. (Absolute construction)
- 149 Join the pairs or groups of sentences, using participles, and making any necessary changes in word order, e.g.
- The employers issued an ultimatum. They threatened all workers with dismissal if they didn't return to work by the following Monday.
- The employers issued an ultimatum, threatening all workers with dismissal if they didn't return to work by the following Monday.
- Note:* In many of the sentences, the participial clause is the equivalent of an adverbial clause of reason, and words or phrases like therefore or as a result should be omitted. Participial clauses can, of course, also have a temporal function, and in some cases both implications are intended:
- Having finished the painting*, he gave a sigh of relief.
When he had finished the painting, he gave a sigh of relief.
As he had finished the painting, he gave a sigh of relief.

- 1 I was interested to see what would happen. I therefore stayed till the end of the meeting.
 - 2 I found I had wasted my time going to the sale. The best bargains had already been snapped up earlier in the day.
 - 3 The rescue party decided that it would be hopeless to carry out a search while the fog persisted. They put off their rescue bid until the next day.
 - 4 He was brought up in the belief that pleasures were sinful. As a result, he now leads an ascetic life.
 - 5 The children had a week's holiday. The school had been closed because of an influenza epidemic.
 - 6 One can allow for the fact that the orchestra was under-rehearsed. Even so, last night's concert was extremely disappointing.
 - 7 He was very angry when his car broke down. He had had it serviced only a week before.
 - 8 No one was surprised at the change in Bank Rate. It had already been confidently expected by investors.
 - 9 The man lost interest in his work. He had been passed over in favour of an outsider when a senior position became vacant.
 - 10 We decided not to visit Oxford. It was then the time of the summer vacation. There were few students in residence.
 - 11 He had to put off buying a house. The bank was unable to lend him any money at that time.
 - 12 The police found the small boy. He was wandering about the docks. He was, apparently, looking for somewhere to spend the night.
- 150 Complete the sentences with participial clauses introduced by the verbs in italics, using the form suggested and retaining the punctuation given.
- Jones put up a good fight in the first few rounds of the contest, . . . (punch, present participle)
 Jones put up a good fight in the first few rounds of the contest, punching his opponent hard and accurately.
 . . . , the chairman assured shareholders that profits would show a distinct improvement the following year. (repeat, present participle)
Repeating what he had said earlier, the chairman assured shareholders that profits would show a distinct improvement the following year.
- 1 The accused was led out of the court, still firmly . . . (maintain, present participle)
 - 2 . . . , I think my advice could be of help. (have, perfect participle)
 - 3 They found the treasure . . . (hide, past participle)
 - 4 While . . . , the workmen unearthed the remains of a Roman villa. (dig, present participle)

- 5 Motorists should take extra care when ... (drive, present participle)
- 6 ... , they decided not to spend their holiday in England. (tell, passive perfect participle)
- 7 I last saw him ... (go, present participle)
- 8 One can now hardly see this beautiful church, high buildings ... (erect, passive perfect participle; absolute construction)
- 9 The newspaper has now published an apology ... (state, present participle)
- 10 The gamekeeper caught a man ... (shoot, present participle)
- 11 ... , you cannot go back on your word. (promise, perfect participle)
- 12 The platform was crowded with people ... (move, present participle)

151 Complete the sentences, retaining the punctuation given, and paying special attention to relating the correct nouns to the participles.

- Having overheard part of their conversation, ...
 Having overheard part of their conversation, I thought it best to remain hidden until after they had left.
 ... , being reluctant to commit himself to a long contract.
 He turned down the job he was offered, being reluctant to commit himself to a long contract.
- 1 Having gone into the question of how much the holiday would cost, ...
- 2 Having been forbidden to read the book, ...
- 3 If not treated with the respect he feels due to him, ...
- 4 ... , having been struck by the beauty of its buildings on a previous visit.
- 5 Bearing in mind the fact that he has never done anything wrong before, ...
- 6 When seen in this light, ...
- 7 ... , having decided that he had little chance of winning the competition.
- 8 ... , creating fear and terror among the population.
- 9 I haven't yet ... raised in your last letter. (Past participle related to the object)
- 10 Convinced that his luck must eventually turn if he persisted long enough, ...
- 11 ... , fully intending to pay it back the following Friday, when I received my week's wages.
- 12 Generally speaking, ... (Unrelated participle)

Participles and gerunds in non-finite clauses

- 152 Complete the sentences, using clause a as a participial clause, and clause b as a gerundial clause (i.e. a non-finite noun clause), subject of the sentence.
- a Deciding not to go any further that day, ...
 hotel. (Deciding is related to the subject we)
- b Deciding on where to spend one's holidays ...
 Deciding on where to spend one's holidays can be a difficult matter. (Deciding is the subject of can be)

Note that the participial clause is immediately followed by the subject of the sentence, and is separated from it by a comma. The gerundial clause is itself the subject of the sentence, and is immediately followed by a verb.

- 1a Looking hard at the prisoner, ...
- b Looking at pictures in art-galleries ...
- 2a Reading between the lines, ...
- b Reading aloud ...
- 3a Trying desperately to reach the chalet before nightfall, ...
- b Trying to teach backward children ...
- 4a Swimming strongly and confidently, ...
- b Swimming in the sea ...
- 5a While digging the foundations of the house, ...
- b Digging in the garden in hot weather ...
- 6a Driving round the difficult Le Mans circuit with superb skill, ...
- b Driving at night ...
- 7a While doing his homework, ...
- b His always doing things in a hurry ...
- 8a Finding himself short of petrol, ...
- b Finding the best way of doing things ...
- 9a While tuning up his violin, ...
- b Tuning pianos ...
- 10a Calling on a friend late one night, ...
- b Your calling on us just at this time ...

General review: gerunds, infinitives, and participles

- 153 Rewrite the sentences, using the verbs in brackets in the gerund, participle, or infinitive form. Note where alternatives are possible.
- 1 After (get) (know) him better, I regretted (judge) him unfairly.
- 2 The man the police found (act) suspiciously in the shop doorway was charged with (loiter) with intent.

- 3 I can't bear the thought of (you, go) home without someone (accompany) you.
- 4 'A job worth (do) is worth (do) well.'
- 5 I should prefer (go) to the cinema rather than (sit) here (listen) to the radio.
- 6 Don't stand there (do) nothing.
- 7 He tried (explain) himself in German but found that no one seemed to understand.
- 8 Man: This mixer doesn't work. Woman (sarcastically): Try (switch) it on properly.
- 9 Surely you recollect (he, say) that he would let (I, borrow) his car if I didn't mind (pay) for the petrol?
- 10 You know I hate (disappoint) you, but much as I would like (go) out this evening, I have to finish (decorate) this room.
- 11 I would advise (you, wait) before (decide) (accept) his offer.
- 12 At present the new child is very shy of (join) in with the others, but very soon I expect (have) (he, show) more confidence.

154 Instructions as for 153.

- 1 If I catch (you, cheat) again, I shall make you (stay) in after school (do) some extra work.
- 2 It's no use (blame) him really. You know he had no choice but (do) as he was told.
- 3 She can't bear (be left) alone in the dark, (be) accustomed as a child to (have) a light on all night.
- 4 He does nothing but (complain) when he is asked (do) anything that means (put) himself out.
- 5 People should sometimes stop (think) before (speak) their minds.
- 6 Surely you remember (lend) him the money? I hope, at least, that he won't forget (pay) you back, for he has a habit of (forget) things he doesn't want (remember).
- 7 The fire needs (make up). Would you mind (attend) to it?
- 8 I can well understand (you, be) unwilling (rely) on him after (he, let) you down on a previous occasion.
- 9 I'm looking forward to (have) a few days to myself while the rest of the family are away.
- 10 Like many other people, I dislike (have) someone (look) over my shoulder (read) my newspaper. I find it difficult (prevent) myself from (say) something sarcastic.

The position of adverbs

Inversion of subject and verb after initial negative adverbs

An adverb, or an adverbial phrase or clause, may in some cases be taken out of its normal position and placed at the beginning of a sentence or clause for emphasis. If this construction is used with negative adverbs or adverbs of degree, the subject and verb of the sentence or clause to which the adverb relates must be inverted (using do if necessary):

- a One should on no account drink and drive.
On no account should one drink and drive. (Emphatic)
 He little realizes what problems he creates for others.
- b Little does he realize what problems he creates for others. (Emphatic)
- c The winner was so exhausted that he collapsed soon after finishing the race.
So exhausted was the winner that he collapsed soon after finishing the race. (Emphatic)

Naturally, there can be no inversion when an adverb of this type is one of a group of words qualifying the subject:

Not only the professionals but also the amateurs will benefit from the new training facilities.

This may be compared with:

The professionals not only demanded new training facilities; they also proposed a revision of membership fees.

In this sentence, not only modifies the verb demanded, and the sentence may be reconstructed:

Not only did the professionals demand new training facilities; they also proposed a revision of membership fees.

155 Rewrite the sentences, placing the adverbs or adverbial phrases in italics at the beginning of their sentence or clause, and making the necessary inversions.

- 1 He had no sooner put down the receiver with a great sigh of relief than the telephone rang again.
- 2 The thieves little realized that the police had already thrown a cordon round the bank, and that all means of escape had been cut off.
- 3 The doctor told his patient that he should on no account return to work until he had made a complete recovery.
- 4 I wouldn't doubt his integrity for one moment. ('Not for . . .')
- 5 The whole truth didn't become known until many years later. ('Not until . . .')
- 6 The smoke was so dense that even breathing-apparatus proved ineffective against it.

- 7 His fear of failing the examination was such that he resorted to cheating.
- 8 We have rarely seen such public interest as is being shown in the appeal for funds to save the cathedral.
- 9 Their hopes had been raised to such a pitch that they were almost bound to be disappointed.
- 10 Such a situation should never again be allowed to arise.
- 11 The pilot agreed to land the plane only when the hijackers threatened to shoot some of the passengers.
- 12 A lasting peace will be established in the area only if both sides accept the agreement.

Some negative adverbs, or adverbial phrases and clauses, may be introduced by It is or It was and still retain their emphatic force when placed at the beginning of their sentence. In this case, however, no inversion of subject and verb is necessary (see Cleft sentences, page 132). We thus find that there are two possible ways of reconstructing a sentence like the following, the alternative b being the emphatic form commonly found in the spoken language:

I didn't realize how ill he was until I visited him.

a Not until I visited him did I realize how ill he was. (Emphatic)

b It was not until I visited him that I realized how ill he was. (Emphatic)

- 156 Rewrite the sentences, placing the adverbs or adverbial phrases in italics at the beginning of their sentence or clause, and making inversions in those sentences that require it.

- 1 The back of this radio should under no circumstances be removed unless the set has first been disconnected at the mains.
- 2 He has, no doubt, good reason for thinking as he does.¹
- 3 Such a major operation has proved completely successful in very few cases.²
- 4 It has been found that, in a few cases, people can have this disease and not be aware of it.
- 5 He mentioned it to me only yesterday. ('It was . . .')
- 6 He wouldn't answer the questions of the reporters, and he wouldn't pose for a photograph. ('. . . the reporters, nor . . .')
- 7 Students have, on one or two occasions, been known to fall asleep during his lectures.
- 8 The police admitted that they had seldom had to deal with such a baffling case.

¹ No doubt is a sentence adverb, i.e. it modifies the sentence as a whole, and does not relate to a particular verb.

² Few carries a negative implication; a few is positive.

- 9 The driver admitted that he was not only not insured, but he didn't have a driving licence either.
 - 10 The two countries first began talks about signing a treaty as long as four years ago. ('It was . . .')
 - 11 The talks didn't appear to have much chance of success until quite recently, however.
 - 12 There is now substantial agreement on all but a few issues.
- 157 For each of the following sentences, write another sentence as similar as possible in meaning, beginning with the word(s) in brackets, e.g.
- He wouldn't accept my suggestion until I pointed out the alternatives. (only)
Only when I pointed out the alternatives would he accept my suggestion.
- 1 Remote villages don't have a regular bus service any more. (no longer)
 - 2 It's unusual for the temperature to fall below freezing in the south of the country. (seldom)
 - 3 It was the first time he had ever been in such a predicament. (never)
 - 4 You won't succeed unless you work hard. (only)
 - 5 It started raining as soon as we stepped outside the door. (no sooner)
 - 6 I wouldn't have agreed to such an arrangement under any circumstances. (under no circumstances)
 - 7 You don't care very much about the problems he's facing. (little)
 - 8 The scientist had never been in a position to pass vital information to the enemy. (at no time)
 - 9 I had only just got inside the room when everyone started asking me questions. (hardly)
 - 10 The twins were very alike, and few people could tell them apart. (so)
- 158 Complete the sentence-openings, using inversions where necessary.
- 1 The teacher explained the point a second time, but not even then . . .
 - 2 So complicated . . . that . . .
 - 3 Only three men . . .
 - 4 The customer complained that no sooner . . . than . . .
 - 5 Neither the driver nor his passengers . . .
 - 6 Neither on this occasion nor on the previous one . . .
 - 7 Only after a great deal of discussion . . .
 - 8 It was only after a great deal of discussion . . .

Adverb position and meaning

159 In each of the sentences, there are at least two possible positions for the adverbs given. Write each sentence twice, placing the adverbs so as to suggest two distinctly different meanings. Show the difference between your two versions by explaining each one or by paraphrase, e.g.

Differential rates of pay cause friction among workers. (generally) a Differential rates of pay generally cause friction among workers.

= Differential rates of pay do, in most cases where applied, cause friction among workers.

b Differential rates of pay cause friction among workers generally.

= Differential rates of pay cause friction among workers as a whole.

- 1 He expressed his thanks. (naturally)
- 2 The teacher thought the student was not intelligent. (obviously)
- 3 There were a few passengers on the bus on weekdays. (only)
- 4 The speaker had not argued his case at all. (clearly)
- 5 Some club members were horrified at the suggestion of small changes. (even)
- 6 I remember his being able to play football. (well)
- 7 The rescue party managed to take ten of the crew off the ship before it sank. (just)
- 8 I don't want to put myself under an obligation to him by asking a favour. (particularly)
- 9 I think he will find he has been rash in investing his money in those shares. (rather)
- 10 Frank has decided to spend a few days in Austria on his way to Switzerland. (also)

160 Instructions as for 159

- 1 When I mentioned the money involved, he undertook to do the work. (promptly)
- 2 He appreciated that my idea was a good one, but he still wasn't willing to lend me his support. (quite)
- 3 Do you think you'll have enough money at the end of the month to take a short holiday? (still)
- 4 I should ask him what he meant by his statement. (personally)
- 5 Have you made up your mind about what you want to do when you leave school? (really)
- 6 He had the grace to admit that he was partly in the wrong. (at least)

- 7 He will explain quite clearly what he intends to do. (in future)
- 8 The student overheard the teacher saying that his last piece of homework was better. (distinctly)
- 9 A spokesman for the bus company pointed out that buses couldn't run on Sundays because of the unwillingness of the staff to work overtime. (normally)
- 10 As the solicitor said, the money had been divided among the brothers and sisters of the dead man, who had no children. (rightly)

Reported speech¹Introduction

Exercises in reported speech should not be treated as mere practice in mental gymnastics, although the process of encoding spoken utterances and decoding reports may involve a number of complex operations which can become automatic only through practice. These can be summarized as follows:

- [1] The reporter is generally someone other than the original speaker. Equally, the receiver of the report is likely to be different from the person who received the original message. Using the correct pronouns to reflect these changes is a matter of common sense.
- [2] Reports are often given in a different place from where the original words were spoken, and at a later time. In any reports introduced by a reporting verb in the past tense, the original tenses will often need to be changed accordingly. (Tense changes are not automatic, however, especially when dealing with conditionals—see page 103, and exercises 90, 91.) It may also be necessary to change adverbs of time or place, so that words like today, tomorrow, here, mean the same at the time and place of the report as in the original utterance:
 - 'I'll meet you here at the same time tomorrow.'
 - = He said he'd meet me there at the same time the following day.

- [3] Reporting questions nearly always involves a change in sentence structure: the original question becomes embedded in a statement, and the verb forms are no longer interrogative, nor is a question mark used at the end of the reporting sentence:
 - 'Where do you live'? = He wanted to know where I lived.
 - 'How old are you'? = He asked me how old I was.
 - 'Are you English'? = He wanted to know if I was English.
 - 'Do you know the way'? = I asked him if he knew the way.

¹ See also the following exercises: 11 (can, could, may, might), 19 (shall), 26 (must, mustn't, have to), 28 (needn't, not need to, not have to), 65 (Present perfect), 69 (Past perfect).

In questions where no interrogative verb form is needed in direct speech, no change in word order is necessary (or possible) in reported speech:

'Who has borrowed my pen?' = He wanted to know who had borrowed his pen.

- [4] Orders, requests and advice are generally reported by using an infinitive construction (see exercise 136):

'Be careful!' = We warned him to be careful.

'I wouldn't tell anyone if I were you.' = He advised me not to tell anyone. Note that the word suggest cannot be followed by an infinitive (see pages 142–3):

'Why don't you take a rest?' = I suggested he should take a rest.

Similarly, say is never followed by an infinitive:

'Please go away!' = He asked me to go away.
not *He said me to go away.

- [5] Say is most commonly followed immediately by a 'that' clause, although that is frequently omitted:

'I'm feeling hungry.' = He said (that) he was feeling hungry.

Tell must be followed by a noun denoting the person spoken to:

'I'm feeling hungry.' = He told me he was feeling hungry.
not *He told that he was feeling hungry.
not *He said me he was feeling hungry.

Many important reporting verbs, together with their associated sentence patterns, are listed in the section Verb Patterns (pages 135–160).

- [6] It is possible to report people's verbal reactions without giving the precise words used:

He expressed considerable surprise at the news.
He confirmed his interest in the project.

Words like expressed and confirmed are never used as the reporting verbs in direct speech, but are useful in reporting the factual or emotional content of what has been said.

- [7] Some verbs used in direct speech cannot be used in reported speech, and have to be expressed with said and an appropriate adverb of manner indicating the way in which something was said. In other cases the tone or emotional content of the original can be preserved in the reported version only by the use of said, again with an appropriate adverb of manner (see exercises 169, 171).

- [8] Exercises giving practice in dealing with longer stretches of dialogue are really essays first in comprehension and then in guided composition and flexibility of expression. It is most important to preserve the spirit of the original, and this consideration should come before a strict adherence to the form.

Tense changes in reported speech

- 161 A friend of yours at work sees you during the day and complains about her work. Report this to another friend a few days later. Begin your report as suggested at the end of the text.
- 'I'm fed up. We're stock-taking in our department and it's terrible. I've been working for six hours non-stop, and I can't do any more. It wouldn't seem so bad if it was raining—I hate having to work so hard when it's fine outside. It was just the same yesterday. I started at nine in the morning, and by five in the afternoon I was dropping on my feet. I asked my boss if I could leave at half-past five as I'd worked late the day before, but he said I had to get the work finished. I shall be thankful when it's all over.'
- Mary stopped me at work the other day. She was really fed up. . . .

Questions in reported speech

- 162 You went to a party last week, where you were introduced to several people you had never met before. In conversation with a friend, you now talk about the party and report the various questions that different people asked you during the course of the evening.

- 1 'Who did you come to the party with?'
- 2 'Did you come with a friend?'
- 3 'Why aren't you drinking?'
- 4 'Would you like something to drink?'
- 5 'Where do you live?'
- 6 'Do you know many people here?'
- 7 'When did you arrive?'
- 8 'What do you do for a living?'
- 9 'Did you see that marvellous documentary on TV last night?'
- 10 'Have you been watching the latest TV serial?'
- 11 'How do you like your coffee—black or white?'
- 12 'What time is it?'
- 13 'What's your 'phone number?'
- 14 'Can I give you a ring tomorrow?'
- 15 'How will you get back home?'

Composition

- 163 Imagine you had an interview for a job yesterday and you are now telling a friend about it. Report what questions you were asked and what your answers were.

Consumer report

164 Give the actual comments made to researchers for the Consumers' Association magazine Which?:

We collected opinions about sleeping quilts from some 1,200 members. Members owning quilts liked them chiefly for the ease of making the bed, for their warmth, and for their light weight. The two biggest grumbles were that sleeping quilts sometimes tended to slip off the bed, and were sometimes too warm or too cold.

Most members who hadn't got quilts said that they were happy with the blankets they already had, or liked to be tucked in firmly at night (not possible with quilts), or thought that quilts were too expensive.

(from Which? magazine, October 1980)

Various reporting verbs

165 Replace the word said in the sentences by one of the words at the head of the exercise. Use each word once only.

suggested	agreed	muttered	exclaimed insisted	whispered	boasted	admitted
shouted	claimed	objected	protested

- 1 'I can speak six languages fluently,' he said.
- 2 'Let's go to the cinema this evening,' he said.
- 3 'Stop that noise in the classroom,' said the teacher.
- 4 'That car you are driving is my property,' the man said.
- 5 'Yes, I broke the windows with my catapult,' the boy said.
- 6 'You can't take me to prison. I know my rights,' the man said.
- 7 'I shall always love you,' said his fiancée.
- 8 'We don't have enough money to carry out the plan,' said the treasurer.
- 9 'This teacher doesn't know what he's talking about,' said the student.
- 10 'Well, it is a surprise to meet you here today!' she said.
- 11 'Well, yes; if the weather is bad, we can't go,' he said.
- 12 'If you can't come today, you simply must come tomorrow,' she said.

166 When you have checked your answers to the last exercise, rewrite the sentences in reported speech.

167 Write a statement consistent with the verbs given.

- 1 ... he complained.
- 2 ... he sneered.
- 3 ... he stammered.
- 4 ... he snapped.
- 5 ... he announced.
- 6 ... he explained.
- 7 ... he retorted.
- 8 ... he declared.
- 9 ... he promised.
- 10 ... he groaned.
- 11 ... he conceded.
- 12 ... he gasped.

168 When you have checked your answers to the last exercise, rewrite your sentences in reported speech. If necessary, use said with an appropriate adverb of manner in place of the original verb. If you wish, you can work from the answers suggested in the key.

169 Write a statement consistent with the adverbs given.

- 1 ... he said angrily.
- 2 ... he said pompously.
- 3 ... he said passionately.
- 4 ... he answered sharply.
- 5 ... he said brutally.
- 6 ... he said accusingly.
- 7 ... he said callously.
- 8 ... he said defiantly.
- 9 ... he commented derisively.
- 10 ... he whispered shyly.
- 11 ... he observed sarcastically.
- 12 ... he said sympathetically.
- 13 ... he said patiently.
- 14 ... he said agreeably.
- 15 ... he said complacently.
- 16 ... he said fiercely.

170 Give what you think are the original words represented by the following reports.

- 1 He expressed his gratitude for what I'd done.
- 2 He complimented his wife on the meal she had prepared.
- 3 He expressed great satisfaction with the way things had turned out.
- 4 The doctor inquired after his patient's health.
- 5 I expressed surprise at meeting him there that day.
- 6 The hotel porter offered to carry my cases.
- 7 I advised him to think carefully before making up his mind.
- 8 We were warned not to touch the fence. It was electrified.
- 9 One of the group suggested we all go and have a drink.
- 10 The teacher reprimanded the student for failing to do his homework.
- 11 The motorist remonstrated with the traffic warden at being given a parking ticket.
- 12 He expressed his disappointment at my failure in the test.
- 13 We were given a warm welcome by our host and hostess.
- 14 He offered me a lift in his car.
- 15 I politely declined his invitation.

- 171 Write the sentences in reported speech, using the most suitable reporting verb for each sentence, or using said with an adverb of manner.
- 1 It's up to you to decide, but don't come and ask me for help if you get into difficulties.'
 - 2 'Don't forget to take your passport with you.'
 - 3 'For Heaven's sake stop asking me stupid questions!'
 - 4 'Surely you don't think your friend is serious?'
 - 5 'Do as you're told, and stop arguing!'
 - 6 'What a fool I was not to accept the job! Still, it can't be helped now.'
 - 7 'Here's to the bride and bridegroom.'
 - 8 'Please don't say anything to him, for my sake.'
 - 9 'Shall I post this letter for you?'
 - 10 'I've had just about enough of your insolence. One more word out of you and you'll go to the headmaster.'
 - 11 'Do you mean to say that you've lost the money on horse-racing?'
 - 12 'If you're so clever, why don't you try doing it yourself?'
 - 13 'Of course, I could have won the race easily if I had really tried.'
 - 14 'Go away! Can't you see I'm busy?'
 - 15 'Give me the keys to the safe or you'll regret it.'

Dialogue: reported > direct speech

- 172 Rewrite the sentences in direct speech. Note that in these examples there is an implied dialogue, and that the reported version is, in some cases, very much a paraphrase of the original. Students should reconstruct the dialogues in their most likely original form, e.g.
- Tony accepted without reservation my suggestion that we should try to get local support for the new theatre company.
- 'I would suggest, Tony, that we try to get local support for the new theatre company.'
- 'Yes, I absolutely agree.'
- 1 When I asked his advice about taking the job, he seemed indifferent as to whether I accepted it or not.
 - 2 When questioned by the master about the disappearance of a bicycle from the school cycle sheds two days before, the boy flatly denied having had anything to do with it.
 - 3 Peter's request to his employer to have the next day off met with a blunt refusal.

- 4 He asked me to lend him five pounds, which I agreed to do, somewhat reluctantly, on condition that he paid me back the following week.
- 5 Michael rang up Jean at the last moment, apologizing profusely for being unable to go to dinner with her that evening. Despite his apology, Jean was very put out, and said that he might have let her know earlier; she wouldn't have needed to make such elaborate preparations.
- 6 I was taken completely by surprise, and in fact could hardly believe Margaret was serious when she told me she was going to leave England early the following year to take up a job abroad.
- 7 When the lady protested at being told to open her suitcase for inspection, the Customs Official firmly but politely pointed out that she must do as she was asked.
- 8 After the accident, the bus driver accused the motorist of not looking where he was going; to which the latter retorted that if the other hadn't been driving so fast, he himself would have had a chance of stopping in time.

Reporting conversations from a particular point of view

- 173 Report the following interview as if you were the doctor.

The doctor waited. The clock ticked. I stared at the fire.

'Jake doesn't want any more children,' I said.

'Do you like children, Mrs Armitage?'

'How can I answer such a question?'

'Do you think it would be wrong not to like children?'

'I don't know. Yes. Yes, I think so.'

'Why?'

'Because children don't do you any harm.'

'Not directly, perhaps. But indirectly ...'

'Perhaps you don't have any,' I said.

'Oh, yes. Three. Two boys and a girl.'

'How old are they?'

'Sixteen, fourteen and ten.'

'And do you like them?'

'Most of the time.'

'Well, then. That's my answer. I like them most of the time.'

(from The Pumpkin Eater by Penelope Mortimer)

174 Imagine you are Gordon, and report this conversation to another friend one day after the event.

'What's under there?' I asked, seeing the bulge at Claud's waistline. He pulled up his sweater and showed me two thin but very large white cotton sacks which were bound neat and tight around his belly. 'To carry the stuff,' he said darkly.

'I see.'

'Let's go,' he said.

'I still think we ought to take the car.'

'It's too risky. They'll see it parked.'

'But it's over three miles up to that wood.'

'Yes,' he said. 'And I suppose you realize we can get six months in the clink if they catch us.'

'You never told me that.'

'Didn't I?'

'I'm not coming,' I said. 'It's not worth it.'

'The walk will do you good, Gordon. Come on.'

(from The Champion of the World by Roald Dahl)

Converting reports into direct speech

175 Rewrite the passage in direct speech

When the woman returned, Mr Boggis introduced himself and straight away asked if she would like to sell her chairs.

Dear me, she said. But why on earth should she want to sell her chairs?

No reason at all, except that he might be willing to give her a pretty nice price.

And how much would he give? They were definitely not for sale, but just out of curiosity, just for fun, you know, how much would he give?

Thirty-five pounds.

How much?

Thirty-five pounds.

Dear me, thirty-five pounds. Well, well, that was very interesting. She'd always thought they were valuable. They were very old. They were very comfortable too. She couldn't possibly do without them, not possibly. No, they were not for sale but thank you very much all the same.

They weren't so very old, Mr Boggis told her, and they wouldn't be at all easy to sell, but it just happened that he had a client who rather liked that sort of thing. Maybe he could go up another two pounds—call it thirty-seven. How about that?

(from Parson's Pleasure by Roald Dahl)

176 Instructions as for 175

Joan worked in a shop selling tapes and records. One day a middle-aged woman came in, sat on a stool in front of the counter and beamed at Joan. Addressing Joan familiarly, she said she wanted a record—one she had heard on the radio that morning. Joan asked what the record was called. The woman shook her head, and said she didn't remember, though she would know it if she heard it. She suggested that Joan should play her some, and settled herself more comfortably on her stool. Joan pointed out that they had hundreds of records in stock, and that it would take a very long time to play her even a little of each. She asked the lady if she could hum it to her. The woman giggled, and replied that she couldn't sing 'God save the Queen' in tune. They would get into a worse muddle if she started humming. She looked very depressed, but suddenly her face brightened. She had just remembered something, she said; it came from a play in which there was a woman who spoke very badly, but who after a time learned to talk beautifully. Joan asked if it would be from My Fair Lady. The woman exclaimed that that was it. She wished Joan had thought of it earlier instead of wasting time asking silly questions. She supposed Joan was new to the job.

Section two

Sentence structure and synthesis¹Adjectival clauses²*Participles in non-finite adjectival clauses

177 Replace the finite clauses in italics (defining relative clauses) by non-finite clauses, using the present or past participle. Do not add any punctuation, since the function of the clauses will remain defining (see note on page 266 of the Appendix).

The thieves took two mail bags that contained registered letters.

The thieves took two mail bags containing registered letters.

I couldn't understand the instructions that were given in the manual.

I couldn't understand the instructions given in the manual.

- 1 Motorists who intend to take their cars with them to the Continent are advised to make early reservations.
- 2 I haven't yet had an opportunity to think over the proposals that were made at the last meeting.
- 3 Three armed men crossed the river that marks the frontier.
- 4 Any control of incomes that is imposed by a government and that is not negotiated by unions and employers is bound to create discontent.
- 5 Investors receive annually all the interest that has been credited to their account during the year.
- 6 Companies that already use computers have found that the number of staff that is needed for stock-control can be substantially reduced.
- 7 All aliens who are already living in this country have been asked to register with the police.
- 8 We can deliver within three days any articles that are ordered from stock.
- 9 The school has now moved to new premises which overlook the Thames.
- 10 Reports that are now reaching London suggest that the number of casualties that has been caused by the earthquake may exceed two hundred.

¹ For explanatory notes, see the Appendix.

² Students should have already completed Exercises 104–123 (on relative clauses) before starting these exercises.

178 Join the pairs of sentences in each of two ways: a change the second sentence into a non-defining clause with a finite verb, using which or who; and b change the second sentence into a non-defining clause with a non-finite verb, using the present or past participle.

The British Ambassador to Paris said that the destinies of France and Britain were indissolubly linked. He made his first public speech as ambassador yesterday.

a The British Ambassador to Paris, who made his first public speech as ambassador yesterday, said that the destinies of France and Britain were indissolubly linked.

b The British Ambassador to Paris, making his first public speech as ambassador yesterday, said that the destinies . . .

The firm's latest product has already captured a significant share of the market. It was launched only six months ago.

a The firm's latest product, which was launched only six months ago, has already captured a significant share of the market.

b The firm's latest product, launched only six months ago, has already captured a significant share of the market.

(Note that both the finite and non-finite clauses are non-defining in function, and so are enclosed by commas.)

1 The National Motor Show attracts enormous numbers of visitors. It is held every year in the autumn.

2 The present house stands on the site of a much earlier building. It still bears the same number.

3 The unfortunate newsreader looked very confused when his autocue failed. He was making his first appearance on television.

4 This new hostel will be opened next month. It accommodates 200 students.

5 The new freightliner trains carry forty-two containers. The trains are made up of twenty-one container wagons.

6 The invasion was completed within a matter of days. It was carefully planned and skillfully executed.

7 Our new houses should satisfy the most discriminating purchaser. They are built to the highest standards and range in price from £80,000-£180,000.

8 Typhoon 'Ida' left a trail of destruction in its wake. It swept the country from coast to coast.

9 Britain's building societies will soon be obliged to raise their rates of interest to investors and borrowers. They are at present struggling hard to attract more money.

10 The damaged ship is in danger of breaking up in heavy seas. It is carrying a cargo of dangerous chemicals and is at present caught on rocks.

Infinitives in non-finite adjectival clauses

179 Replace the finite clauses in italics by non-finite clauses, using the infinitive. Do not change the punctuation, e.g.

This is a point which we should bear in mind.

This is a point to bear in mind.

- 1 Measures that will restrain home demand have already been considered by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.
- 2 There are more than fifty proposals that will be discussed at the conference.
- 3 The new regulations on the lead content in petrol are giving motor manufacturers plenty that they must think about.
- 4 There are many difficulties that must be surmounted before any agreement can be reached.
- 5 Our company builds houses that suit many different types of purchasers.
- 6 Before our cars leave the factory, there is an exhaustive series of tests that must be passed.
- 7 There is still a long way that we must go before we reach our sales targets.
- 8 British trains have communication cords, which may be operated only in an emergency.
- 9 The chemist gave her the tablets, which were to be taken three times daily.
- 10 A significant point that has emerged from the survey is that large numbers of people living in Council houses would like the opportunity to become house owners.

Finite and non-finite adjectival clauses

180 Complete the sentences with an adjectival clause, using the punctuation given. State whether your clauses are finite or non-finite in structure. (Note: Ensure that your clauses are not coordinating in function—see under Relative Clauses, page 130, and paragraph 2.4 of the Appendix.)

- 1 The house . . . has at last been sold.
- 2 We spent our holiday in the town . . .
- 3 The housing problem, . . . , is now almost solved.
- 4 He recalled the time when . . .
- 5 I wanted to buy a car . . .
- 6 Do you remember the name of the place . . . ?
- 7 What did he do with the money . . . ?
- 8 He is the sort of man . . .
- 9 This letter is from my brother, . . .

- 10 English scenery has a beauty . . .
- 11 He did his medical training at a hospital . . .
- 12 I am prepared to agree to anything . . .
- 13 Something . . . quite startled me.
- 14 I remembered the reason . . .
- 15 Perhaps you could tell me the name of the shop . . .
- 16 That's the first time . . .
- 17 These rare books, . . . , were sold for a record price.
- 18 Perhaps you didn't know that it was my son . . .
- 19 I can't really believe his story, . . .
- 20 We returned by the same train . . .
- 21 I am sure there is no one here but . . .
- 22 Beethoven is one of the greatest composers . . .
- 23 His father, . . . , said he intended to retire shortly.
- 24 We were advised to buy the larger dictionary, . . .
- 25 In 1953, a British expedition succeeded in climbing Everest, . . .

Co-ordinate relative clauses

181 Complete the sentences with co-ordinate clauses, using which, who, whom, when, or where. (Note: relative pronouns and relative adverbs with a co-ordinating function are not descriptive, but continuative, i.e. they may be replaced by and this, and he, and there, and then, etc.)

- 1 That evening we went to the cinema, . . .
- 2 He had intended to buy the goods before seeing them, . . .
- 3 I had almost given up expecting him, . . .
- 4 The Queen was, after all, unable to attend the charity concert, . . .
- 5 The father left his business to his son, . . .
- 6 The campers moved on without extinguishing their fire, . . .
- 7 The man dived fully clothed into the river to save the boy, . . .
- 8 We were beginning to think that our view from the mountainside would be obscured by cloud, . . .
- 9 Last year we spent our holiday in Austria, . . .
- 10 I gave the message to Peter, . . .
- 11 In some cinemas, smoking is prohibited, . . .
- 12 Last night we went to the opera at Covent Garden, . . .
- 13 The letter I received was in fact intended for John, to . . .
- 14 The contractors have now sent a satisfactory estimate for building the school, on the basis of . . .
- 15 He missed a lot of work through his absence from school, to make up for . . .

¹ Used as a relative pronoun, but is equivalent to that . . . not, e.g. There wasn't one boy in the class but knew (= that didn't know) exactly what the teacher was referring to.

Adverbial clauses¹

Below is a list of the principal conjunctions used to introduce the different types of adverbial clauses, but it is important to remember that some conjunctions have several meanings, and the type of clause they introduce can be determined only by an examination of the function of the clause. The uses of the conjunction as illustrate this point:

- 1 He did his work as his employer had instructed. (Adverbial clause of manner)
- 2 He can't speak English as well as he writes it. (Adverbial clause of comparison)
- 3 He decided to spend his holiday in Austria, as he had never been there before. (Adverbial clause of reason)
- 4 As he was posting the letter, he suddenly realized that he hadn't put a stamp on the envelope. (Adverbial clause of time)
- 5 You've made the same mistake as you made before. (Adjectival clause)
- 6 A welfare state does not necessarily make everyone happier, as some people are now beginning to realize. (Co-ordinate clause)

Conjunctions used to introduce adverbial clauses

Time	when, whenever, while, as, since, after, before, until, as soon as, once, now (that), the moment (that)
Place	where, wherever
Manner	as, as if
Comparison	as, than, the + comparative
Reason or Cause	because, as, since
Purpose	so that, in order that, for fear that, lest, (in order to, so as to, non-finite clauses)
Result	so that, so + adjective + that (result clauses associated with degree), such . . . that Condition	if, unless, whether, provided that, supposing, on condition that, as (or so) long as
Concession	although, though, even though, even if, while, whatever, wherever, whenever, no matter

Note: Many of the sentences in these exercises could be completed equally well with an adverbial phrase or, in some cases, a single adverb. Students should remember that the group of words they add must contain a verb in order to constitute a clause. Here is a sentence completed in four possible ways, c or d being of the type required in the following exercises:

- Apparently, he tried to telephone me . . . (Time) a Apparently, he tried to telephone me yesterday. (Adverb of time)

¹ See also Conditional Sentences, page 88, Participles and Gerunds, page 161, and Exercises 23 (clauses of purpose with should), 44 and 64 (tenses in time clauses), and 68 (non-finite/finite clauses of time and reason).

- b* Apparently, he tried to telephone me the evening before last. (Adverbial phrase of time)
c Apparently, he tried to telephone me as soon as he received my letter. (Finite adverbial clause of time) d Apparently, he tried to telephone me after receiving my letter. (Non-finite adverbial clause of time)

Adverbial clauses (finite and non-finite)

182 Complete the sentences with finite or non-finite adverbial clauses of the type indicated. State whether your clauses are finite or non-finite.

- 1 He speaks English much better. . . . (Comparison)
- 2 They decided to climb the mountain. . . . (Time)
- 3 We left the car. . . . (Place)
- 4 The United Nations Organization was formed. . . . (Purpose)
- 5 The book was so boring. . . . (Result)
- 6 We went swimming. . . . (Concession)
- 7 I should be delighted. . . . (Condition)
- 8 . . . , I didn't have time to come. (Reason)
- 9 He arranged to come early. . . . (Purpose)
- 10 a As . . . , that won't be necessary. (Reason)
b As . . . , I met someone I hadn't seen for years. (Time)
c He did the job as . . . (Comparison)

183 Instructions as for 182

- 1 You should meet me. . . . (Place)
- 2 . . . , they live very simply. (Concession)
- 3 We arranged to hire a coach. . . . (Purpose)
- 4 We booked rooms at the hotel lest. . . . (Purpose)
- 5 The men were told that they would be dismissed. . . . (Condition)
- 6 Examination candidates are known by a number, and not by name. . . . (Purpose)
- 7 . . . , I shall expect to see you more often. (Time)
- 8 . . . , I have now changed my mind. (Concession)
- 9 . . . , the more I like him. (Comparison)
- 10 Provided that . . . , you will be allowed to join the Society. (Condition)

184 Instructions as for 182

- 1 Such was his anxiety. . . . (Result)
- 2 Whatever . . . , it's best to take his advice. (Concession)
- 3 We lit a fire before. . . . so that. . . . when. . . . (Time, Purpose, Time)
- 4 However. . . . , he shouldn't have been so rude to his host (Concession)
- 5 The English have to pay taxes to the Government, whether. . . . (Concession)
- 6 Patrons arriving late at the opera house will not be admitted. . . . (Time)
- 7 The meeting became so disorderly. . . . (Result)
- 8 Much as. . . . , I couldn't lend him the money because. . . . (Concession, Reason)
- 9 No matter. . . . , I couldn't persuade him to change his mind. (Concession)
- 10 So enthusiastic were the audience that not until. . . . would they. . . . (Time, Result)

185 Finish each of the sentences so that it means exactly the same as the sentence printed before it, e.g.

He got into bed and immediately fell fast asleep. The moment. . . .

The moment he got into bed he fell fast asleep.

- 1 There are bound to be problems whether you adopt the one plan or the other. Whichever. . . .
- 2 After the beginning of the opera, latecomers had to wait before taking their seats. Once. . . .
- 3 We didn't complain to the waiter about the food because we didn't want to embarrass our friends. We. . . . so as. . . .
- 4 You will be able to relax soon if we get there as quickly as possible. The quicker. . . .
- 5 We invited our friends for dinner during their stay in the district. While. . . .
- 6 His stammer was so bad that he decided to undergo special therapy. He suffered from. . . .
- 7 The only way for us to stay safe was to keep close to the guide. As long. . . .
- 8 We must hurry or we won't catch the train. Unless. . . .
- 9 I expected the test to be easier than that. The test wasn't. . . .
- 10 He'll find out what's happened and he'll immediately insist on a full explanation. The moment. . . .

therefore, nevertheless, however

These adverbials enable us to establish a link between ideas:

- 1 He didn't earn a great deal. Therefore his wife./His wife therefore decided to take a job./His wife decided to take the job therefore. (Reason)
- 2 The team didn't really expect to win. Nevertheless they were./They were nevertheless disappointed at their heavy defeat./They were disappointed at their heavy defeat nevertheless. (Concession)
- 3 The sea was very rough. However we made the crossing./We made the crossing, however, without being seasick./We made the crossing without being seasick however. (Concession)

Although these words link ideas, careful writers do not normally use them to join sentences—they are not conjunctions. The above examples show alternative positions for the adverbs; such alternatives would not exist for conjunctions.

One way of joining the sentences is simply to put a semi-colon after and, win, and rough. Alternatively, the sentences in 1 could be joined by and, and those in 2 by but:

- 1a He didn't earn a great deal, and therefore his wife/and his wife therefore decided to take a job.
- 2a The team didn't really expect to win, but nevertheless they were disappointed at their heavy defeat/but they were disappointed at their heavy defeat nevertheless.

These are less formal in style than the original sentences.

However is used as a conjunction when it means *no matter how*¹, or when it comes before an adjective or adverb to mean no matter to what extent/degree:

- 4 However you feel about him, try to be polite.
- 5 However hard he tried, he couldn't force the door open.

The difference between this use of however and its use in 3 above is shown in the following:

He threw his full weight against the door. However hard he tried, however, he couldn't force the door open. (= But however hard he tried)
However introduces a clause of concession in 4 and 5, and in 5 we could say, with a slightly different emphasis:

- 5a Although he tried very hard, he couldn't force the door open.

But we cannot say:

- *However he tried very hard, he couldn't force the door open.

¹ This use may be compared with whichever, whatever, wherever, whenever, whenever (= no matter which, what, who, where, when).

Adverbial clauses of reason or concession

186 Replace the sentences or co-ordinate clauses in italics by subordinate adverbial clauses of reason or concession, as appropriate, using the conjunctions because, as, since, although, even though, or while, and making any necessary omissions.

He didn't understand, so he asked the teacher to explain.
As he didn't understand, he asked the teacher to explain.

It was raining hard. Nevertheless, the two captains decided that the pitch was playable.

Although it was raining hard, the two captains decided that the pitch was playable.

1 The colour didn't suit her, so my wife decided not to buy the dress.

2 He had overslept. As a result, he was late for work.

3 I didn't have any stamps. Therefore I couldn't post the letter.

4 The course cost a lot of money. Even so, I decided to take it.

5 We left rather late. We arrived on time, however.

6 She likes England very much. She's looking forward to going home, nevertheless.

7 I agreed to follow his advice, but I did so with some misgivings.

8 I had promised to visit him so I felt obliged to go.

9 His doctor had given him strict instructions to stay in bed. Despite this, he went in to work.

10 He won't listen to me, so you'd better try talking to him yourself.

187 Finish each of these sentences in such a way that it means exactly the same as the sentence printed before it.

1 The robbery took place in broad daylight, but there seem to have been no eye-witnesses. Although ...

2 The speaker finished his speech although he was constantly interrupted. Despite ...

3 It may look difficult, but it's easy once you have the knack. However ...

4 Although I shouted very loudly, I couldn't make myself heard above the din. No matter ...

5 The plan may be ingenious, but it will never work in practice. Ingenious ...

6 His apology may be utterly sincere. However, I don't think it will be accepted. However ...

7 I can't help admiring his honesty, though I totally disagree with his point of view. Much as ...

8 We tried very hard, but we couldn't talk him out of his crazy scheme. Try ...

Adverbial clauses (finite or non-finite)

- 188 Complete the sentences with adverbial clauses, using in turn each of the conjunctions given. State the function of the clause(s) you have added, and say whether your clauses are finite or non-finite.

We decided to take our raincoats with us so that ...	because ...

after ...	in case ...
although ...	if ...

189 Instructions as for 188

As ...	everyone taking part in the play had to be word perfect.
Although ...
If ...
Before ...
When ...
As soon as ...

190 Instructions as for 188

They intended to visit the Scottish Highlands

while ...
even if ...
before ...
after ...
however ...
unless ...

191 Instructions as for 188

Whatever ...	please don't tell him what I said.
If ...
Since ...
Much as ...
Although ...
Whether ...
Lest ...

192 Instructions as for 188

You had better repeat your instructions carefully

so that ...
in case ...
if ...
unless ...
before ...
while ...

193 Instructions as for 188

Even though ...	you ought to have given him some advice
As ...	when ...
When ...	before ...
Whether ...	in case ...
	so that ...

Noun clauses¹

Finite noun clauses

- 194 Join the sentences, using noun clauses, and giving alternative constructions where indicated, e.g.

He was taking a risk. He fully realized this.
He fully realized that he was taking a risk.

- The sun sometimes shines in England. He seems surprised to discover this.
- There is to be tougher action against drinking and driving. Most people welcome the fact.
- He hadn't telephoned his girl friend. His girl friend later understood why.
- Your bank manager won't lend you money without security. Don't run away with the idea that he will.
- The law student was destined for a brilliant career at the bar. This was clear to everyone. (a It was ...; b That ...)
- He didn't even apologize. This made me really angry. (a The fact ...; b What ...)
- The boy should be sent to a boarding school. This was the parents' view. (a It ...; b The parents' view ...)
- Children nowadays get too much pocket money. This is my opinion. (a It ...; b My opinion ...)
- He says one thing in private. He does another thing in public. The two things are inconsistent with each other. (What ...)
- He manages to reconcile the two things. I just don't know how he does it. (a I ...; b How ...)

¹ See also Verb patterns with -ing forms, infinitives, and 'that' clauses, page 135, Reported Speech, page 173, and Exercises 22, 24 (noun clauses with should), 122, and 123 (what in noun clauses).

195 Rewrite the sentences, substituting a finite noun clause for the non-finite clauses in italics, e.g.

His now knowing the secret creates a rather difficult situation.
The fact that he now knows the secret creates a rather difficult situation.

- 1 The teacher insisted on the students' arriving punctually for their lessons.
- 2 Being ignorant of the law is not accepted as an excuse for breaking the law.
- 3 I am surprised at your thinking London a dull place to live in.
- 4 A conceited man often cannot understand the reasons for people disliking him.
- 5 Your having accepted this job means your having to travel much further to work.
- 6 I refused to believe his having told me the truth.
- 7 The child's criminal tendencies were put down to the fact of his coming from a broken home.
- 8 He insisted on my checking again to see that the train left at 5.30, despite my having already assured him that it did.
- 9 Before buying this painting, you should make sure of its being genuine.
- 10 On entering the hotel, we immediately realized the reason for its being so popular with tourists.

Infinitives in noun clauses

196 Rewrite the sentences, substituting a non-finite clause for the finite noun clauses in italics, using the infinitive, e.g.

The whole family made the decision that they would emigrate.
The whole family made the decision to emigrate.

- 1 The chairman put forward a plan that they should take over other companies engaged in complementary activities.
- 2 Several insurance companies have now reluctantly made the decision that they should withdraw from the American market.
- 3 I now regret having made a promise that I would join in the scheme.
- 4 Most people would support a proposal that licensing hours in Britain should be extended.
- 5 A suggestion that they should postpone further discussion pending investigations was accepted by a majority of three to one.
- 6 Six companies have signed an agreement that they should share the costs of research and development.
- 7 What our team seems to lack at the moment is the determination that it will win.
- 8 How often have I made a resolution that I will give up smoking!

- 9 The employers have at last expressed a desire that they should re-open talks with the unions.
- 10 The Ministry's inspector rejected the scheme that the road should be made part of a one-way system.

Noun clauses as subject

- 197 Reconstruct the sentences so that the finite or non-finite noun clauses come at the beginning, starting with the words in italics.
- 1 It soon became obvious that the conversation was upsetting him.
 - 2 It was due to luck rather than judgement that the driver succeeded in avoiding an accident.
 - 3 It remains a mystery what the thieves did with all the money.
 - 4 It wasn't at all easy for the audience to follow what the speaker said.
 - 5 It wasn't at all easy for the audience to follow what the speaker said.
 - 6 It wasn't at all easy for the audience to follow what the speaker said.
 - 7 It's easy, with the benefit of hindsight, to see how things went wrong.
 - 8 It makes me feel guilty, watching you working so hard.
 - 9 It's very inconsiderate of them to have asked you to give up your one free evening.
 - 10 It's a little difficult to judge whether he really meant what he said.
 - 11 It wasn't made clear at the time why we were to meet again so soon.
 - 12 It was a matter of disagreement how the Company should promote the new product.
 - 13 It isn't yet known where the pilot finally managed to land.
 - 14 It hasn't yet been discovered precisely who originated the plan.
 - 15 It is difficult to estimate at this stage how much the scheme would cost.

Appositional noun clauses

In the next three exercises, special care should be taken with appositional noun clauses, which are always introduced by that, following the noun to which the clause stands in apposition (see paragraphs 3.3 and 3.4 of the Appendix). Appositional noun clauses are very often found with the noun fact:

The fact that he didn't turn up shows that he was never really serious about coming.

But appositional noun clauses may be used with a wide range of nouns, as these exercises will show, and students should be clear about the distinction between adjectival clauses introduced by that and noun clauses in apposition:

- a He hotly denied the rumour that (or which) was then being circulated.
- b He hotly denied the rumour that he had been visited by the police in connection with the recent crime.

The 'that' clause in sentence a defines which rumour he denied, though it does not tell us what the rumour was. It is an adjectival clause, and could equally well be introduced by the alternative relative pronoun, which. The 'that' clause in sentence b tells us what the rumour was; it is the rumour, expressed in other words. In this case, it is impossible to replace that with which, since that is functioning as a conjunction, and not as a relative pronoun.

Noun clauses (finite and non-finite)

198 Complete the sentences with a finite or non-finite noun clause, and state the function of the clause you have added.

- 1 He said that he ...
- 2 The fact ... is now generally known.
- 3 What ... is of direct concern to the country.
- 4 He rarely succeeds in achieving what ...
- 5 I wanted to discover how ...
- 6 The man told the police where ...
- 7 What ... is less important than what you do.
- 8 I asked the waiter if ...
- 9 The writer deplored the fact ...
- 10 It is clear that ...
- 11 It was generally agreed that ...
- 12 If that is what ..., why don't you ask him?

199 Instructions as for 198

- 1 Deciding on ... can be very difficult.
- 2 We were all shocked by ...
- 3 His argument is that ...
- 4 That ... was clear from his subsequent remarks.
- 5 May I infer, from what ..., that ...? (two noun clauses)
- 6 Your idea that ... will probably prove very unpopular.
- 7 Shareholders left the meeting with the feeling that ...
- 8 No one seemed to know when ...
- 9 A view widely held by experts was that ...
- 10 I was of the opinion that ...
- 11 It is a common failing to put off doing ...
- 12 Is it true that ...?

200 Instructions as for 198

- 1 Having learned that ..., he left the country.
- 2 Don't run away with the idea that ...
- 3 I was under the impression that ...

- 4 It seems that ...
- 5 I now remember why ...
- 6 Repeating ..., the accused maintained his alibi that ... (two noun clauses)
- 7 He put forward the startling proposal that ...
- 8 That ... is almost inconceivable.
- 9 What was even more surprising was the fact ...
- 10 Exactly how ... will never be known.
- 11 The experts couldn't agree as to which ...
- 12 Pointing out that ..., the manufacturers said they could give no assurance that ... (two noun clauses)

Non-finite clauses (adjectival, adverbial and noun)

201 Replace the finite clauses in italics with non-finite clauses, using the non-finite forms suggested, and making any other necessary changes. (NB. -ing = present participle or gerund, -ed = past participle, inf = infinitive.)

- 1 Would anyone who wishes to attend the meeting please notify the Secretary? (-ing)
- 2 We left the meeting, since there was obviously no point in staying. (-ing)
- 3 If the situation is looked at in this way, it doesn't seem so desperate. (-ed)
- 4 We left early so that we should arrive in good time. (inf.)
- 5 Children under the age of fourteen are not allowed into the cinema unless they are accompanied by an adult. (-ed)
- 6 I remember that he once offered to help us if ever we were in trouble. (-ing)
- 7 Until the disaster, everyone had believed that the ship was unsinkable. (inf.)
- 8 We had to leave quietly so that we shouldn't disturb other people. (inf.)
- 9 Since we didn't have any time to spare, we couldn't visit all the places we would have liked to. (-ing)
- 10 As we had never been to the city before, we bought a guidebook at the first stationer's we came to. (-ing)
- 11 There are still many difficulties that must be surmounted. (inf.)
- 12 The public official who had been involved in the scandal agreed that he should offer his resignation. (two clauses: -ed/inf.)
- 13 Whether it was restored in the nineteenth century or not, the painting was unanimously attributed to Tiepolo. (-ed)
- 14 We're very disappointed now that we hear that you can't come. (inf.)
- 15 The instructions were written in such bad English that they were positively misleading. (inf.)

Synthesis

It is inadvisable for students to embark on these exercises until they have completed the exercises on sentence structure (Exercises 177–201). Earlier practice in techniques relevant to synthesis will be found in Section One, Exercises 106–121 (using relative clauses) and Exercises 148–151 (using participial constructions).

202 Combine each group of sentences to form not more than two complex sentences. Students may make any necessary changes in the disposition of material and in the wording, but must not change the sense of the original. Skeleton structures have been suggested for many of the sentences to indicate possible approaches to the synthesis, but students should feel free to adopt their own approach.

- 1 No one was watching. The thief first made sure of this. He climbed up a drainpipe. He climbed up to a window on the first floor. He succeeded in entering the house through the window. He was not observed.
Having first . . . , the thief . . . to a first-floor . . . , through which . . . unobserved.
- 2 I had the opportunity of spending my holiday at sea. I had no experience of sailing. Nevertheless, I decided to take the opportunity. Some friends of mine invited me to join them. They were very keen yachtsmen. They wanted to sail round the British Isles.
Despite . . . , I decided . . . when some friends . . . , who . . . and who . . . , invited . . .
- 3 A man may be pronounced guilty only by twelve of his fellow citizens. They must be left free to make their decision. They must be left to do so without influence from the judge. He may, however, direct them as to points of law. This is the jury system. It is an outstanding characteristic of British judicial procedure.
An outstanding . . . is . . . , under which a man . . .

203 Instructions as for 202

- 1 The English queue up for public transport. They do so in an orderly way. Visitors from the Continent are surprised at this. They innocently join the front of the queue. They do this when they first arrive in England. Angry glares are given them. They cannot understand this.
Visitors . . . at the . . . in which . . . , and they . . . when, on first . . . , they innocently . . .

2 Money or plate may be found hidden anywhere in Britain. It may have no owner. It is then called 'treasure-trove'. It is legally the property of the Crown. The finder must hand over his 'trove' to the authorities. He is, however, in practice given its full value in return. If money . . . no owner, it . . . Crown. Although the finder . . .

3 The bubonic plague raged in England during the Middle Ages. The name given to it was 'The Black Death'. It carried off thousands of the population. In some cases, it exterminated whole towns and villages.

'The Black Death' . . . , carrying . . . and . . . exterminating . . .

204 Instructions as for 202

- 1 Fleet Street was once famous for its coffee houses. Men used to meet there. They were prominent in the literary world. It is now synonymous with journalism and English national newspapers. It takes its name from the Fleet Stream. This used to run from Hampstead. It ran down into the Thames at Blackfriars. Fleet Street, once . . . where men . . . and now . . . , takes . . .
- 2 Guy Fawkes was the leader of a band of conspirators. They intended to blow up the Houses of Parliament. They intended to do this while the King and his Ministers were in session. Guy Fawkes's memory is perpetuated. There are firework displays. These are held on November 5th each year.
Guy Fawkes, whose memory . . . each year, was . . .
- 3 I returned to the city. I had been born there. I had been absent for many years. Many of its narrow streets had been demolished. So had their picturesque houses. They had made way for shop-lined thoroughfares. These were modern but undistinguished. I was dismayed to find this.
When . . . , I was dismayed to . . .

205 Instructions as for 202

- 1 The Pilgrim Fathers were a group of English Puritans. They first spent some years in exile in Holland. They did this to escape religious persecution. They later sailed to America in the Mayflower. They established a colony at Plymouth in Massachusetts.
'The South Sea Bubble' was the name given to a great financial crash. It occurred in Britain in 1720. It followed a wave of national speculation. The dimensions of this speculation have since been repeated only once. This was before the great crash on Wall Street, New York. This was in 1929.

- 3 Sir Christopher Wren (1632–1723) had already attained distinction as an astronomer. He was only sixteen then. Nevertheless, later, he seriously took up the study of architecture. This was not till he was nearly thirty. The crowning result of this study was St Paul's Cathedral.

Although . . . , it was not till . . . that . . .

206 Instructions as for 202

- 1 What the English call 'Public Schools' are in fact private or independent schools. Foreigners are frequently surprised to learn this. These schools cater, in the main, for fee-paying pupils. These pupils come from middle and upper-class families. Many of these families have to make great financial sacrifices. They do this in order to send their children to the school of their choice.
- 2 The jury system has disadvantages. This is the opinion of many people. Nevertheless, the disappearance of this system is unthinkable. In the same way, in principle there is a very great deal to be said for making magistrates out of certain persons. These persons are prominent local citizens. This is their chief qualification.
- 3 The headmaster spoke on the dangers of playing on railway tracks. He spoke at length. Even experienced railwaymen could not always hear the approach of an express diesel locomotive. He pointed this out. The headmaster then warned the boys. They would not only be severely punished. They would also risk expulsion from the school. This would be done if any of them persisted in playing near the railway.

Distinguishing between similar sentences

- 207 Show the difference in meaning between the sentences in pairs, either by explaining each sentence or by rewriting the sentences in your own words.

- a The mother said her son was seeing the doctor in the afternoon.
b The mother said her son was to see the doctor in the afternoon.

Explanation

a implies that the mother is telling someone what her son is going to do in the afternoon; b implies that the mother is telling someone what has been arranged for her son to do in the afternoon.

Paraphrase

- a The mother said her son was going (or intended) to see the doctor in the afternoon. b The mother said it had been arranged that her son should see the doctor in the afternoon.

If students choose the latter method of distinguishing between the sentences, they should ensure that their rewritten versions are not simply paraphrases: they must make clear the difference between the original sentences.

- 1a Only the chairman objected to the proposal to build more houses.
b The chairman objected only to the proposal to build more houses.
- 2a Clearly, the man didn't understand the legal document at all.
b The man didn't understand the legal document at all clearly.
- 3a He didn't promise to attend the meeting.
b He promised not to attend the meeting.
- 4a I remember telling him that there was no bus on Sundays.
b I remembered to tell him that there was no bus on Sundays.
- 5a You won't have much money to spend on your holiday.
b You won't have to spend much money on your holiday.
- 6a I haven't seen him this morning. Have you?
b I didn't see him this morning. Did you?
- 7a I was very busy last week.
b I have been very busy for the last week.
- 8a Even he admitted that the tax was unfair.
b He admitted that the tax was even unfair.

208 Instructions as for 207

- 1a The mechanic didn't pretend to know what had gone wrong.
b The mechanic pretended not to know what had gone wrong.
- 2a He couldn't stop saying thank you for all his friend had done.
b He couldn't stop to say thank you for all his friend had done.
- 3a Although I said that I was engaged on the Sunday, he went on asking me to see him that day.
b Although I had said that I was engaged on the Sunday, he went on to ask me to see him that day.
- 4a He recovered from his cold so quickly that he didn't need to visit a doctor.
b He recovered from his cold so quickly that he needn't have visited a doctor.
- 5a Perhaps you can tell me when you see me again?
b Perhaps you could tell me when you will see me again?
- 6a They looked admiringly at a portrait of Holbein.
b They looked admiringly at a portrait of Holbein's.

- 7a He said finally that he hoped to bring the negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion.
b He said that he hoped finally to bring the negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion.
- 8a He was used to getting up early.
b He used to get up early.
- 209 Instructions as for 207
- 1a Why don't you try to hire a video camera?
b Why don't you try hiring a video camera?
- 2a He must have had a new lock put on the door.
b He must have put a new lock on the door.
- 3a She spends a lot of money on clothes.
b She's spending a lot of money on clothes.
- 4a He asked the manager if he would go ahead with the project.
b He asked the manager if he should go ahead with the project.
- 5a I don't particularly want to see him now.
b I particularly don't want to see him now.
- 6a I regret to say that you'll be held responsible.
b I regret saying that you'd be held responsible.
- 7a Did you say nothing because you were afraid to make him angry?
b Did you say nothing because you were afraid of making him angry?
- 8a The manager was told he should have more workers trained on the job.
b The manager was told he should have more trained workers on the job.
c The manager was told he should have trained more workers on the job.

210 Instructions as for 207

- 1a I always meet her at the station.
b I am always meeting her at the station.
- 2a It's raining hard now.
b It's hardly raining now.
- 3a I will send you the goods direct.
b I will send you the goods directly.
- 4a The orator made himself generally unpopular with the crowd.
b The orator generally made himself unpopular with the crowd.
- 5a Naturally, one doesn't expect oranges to grow in England.
b One doesn't expect oranges to grow naturally in England.
- 6a The design of the building was not obviously attractive.
b The design of the building was obviously not attractive.
- 7a The chairman has resigned to make way for a younger man.
b The chairman is resigned to making way for a younger man.
- 8a He's sure to be offered the job.
b He's sure he'll be offered the job.

211 Instructions as for 207

- 1a I enjoy living in London, although I have made a few friends here.
b I enjoy living in London, because I have made a few friends here.
- 2a As we had anticipated, the scheme didn't work out in practice.
b The scheme didn't work out in practice as we had anticipated.
- 3a Approaching the bank, he noticed two suspicious-looking men.
b He noticed two suspicious-looking men approaching the bank.
- 4a I haven't seen him recently. Has he gone on holiday?
b I haven't seen him recently. Has he been on holiday?
- 5a You are now speaking like a teacher.
b You are now speaking as a teacher.
- 6a I have heard nothing of him for a very long time.
b I have heard nothing from him for a very long time.
- 7a The workers, who went on strike, were dismissed.
b The workers who went on strike were dismissed.
- 8a The rescue party said there was slight chance of there being any survivors.
b The rescue party said there was a slight chance of there being some survivors.

212 Instructions as for 207

- 1a She went to the shop only to discover how expensive the dress was.
b She went to the shop, only to discover that the dress was very expensive.
- 2a She drinks tea with breakfast, as is customary in England.
b She drinks tea with breakfast, as it is customary in England.
- 3a The builders can't proceed with the work unless he gives permission.
b The builders can't proceed with the work until he gives permission.
- 4a I'll pay you at the end of the month.
b I'll pay you by the end of the month.
- 5a There was no reason for him to think such a thing.
b There was, for him, no reason for thinking such a thing.
- 6a Isn't he definitely staying in London?
b Is he staying in London indefinitely?
- 7a He wasn't a writer originally.
b He wasn't an original writer.
- 8a I've found myself unable to appreciate a few of the modern paintings I've seen.
b I've found myself unable to appreciate the few modern paintings I've seen.
- 213 Instructions as for 207
- 1a When he comes, please tell him where I am.
b If he comes, please tell him where I am.

- 2a If you told a lie, it was very foolish of you.
b If you told a lie, it would be very foolish of you.
- 3a He won't come to the cinema even if he has nothing else to do.
b He won't come to the cinema, even though he has nothing else to do.
- 4a On checking through the accounts you may discover discrepancies.
b By checking through the accounts you may discover discrepancies.
- 5a He gave a brilliantly illustrated lecture.
b He gave a brilliantly illustrated lecture.
- 6a Did you see him yesterday?
b Didn't you see him yesterday?
- 7a Is there someone in that room?
b Is there anyone in that room?
- 8a There were no fewer than 10,000 people at the meeting.
b There were not fewer than 10,000 people at the meeting.

Ambiguous sentences

214 Each of the sentences may, without any changes in word order or punctuation, be interpreted in two different ways. Explain the two possible meanings. (NB. In some cases, the different meanings would be expressed in spoken English by means of stress or intonation.)

- 1 The work should be completed by the end of the month.
- 2 She burned his last letter, in which he had proposed to her, so that no one could ever discover the truth.
- 3 He might have realized that you were pulling his leg.
- 4 She left me to get on with her work.
- 5 After the marathon race the runners were very tired, if not exhausted.
- 6 Will you call on him and tell him?
- 7 We felt sure they would arrive in time.
- 8 It was not well received by the public because it was a play of ideas.

215 Instructions as for 214

- 1 The Queen is expected to arrive on time for the celebrations.
- 2 I found him a very good lawyer.
- 3 The ambassador did not leave London to take up an appointment in Africa.
- 4 The teacher insisted that his students always arrived early.
- 5 The tourists wanted to visit more interesting places.
- 6 Our visitors should have arrived at the airport by now.
- 7 No one liked the portrait he had painted.
- 8 He decided to retire when he reached the age of sixty.

Punctuation and meaning

- 216 Punctuate each of the sentences in two different ways, putting in the necessary capital letters, and explain the difference in meaning between your two versions.
- 1 the motorist said the bus driver was to blame for the accident
 - 2 i wouldn't advise you to go there for his sake
 - 3 the teacher left his students feeling very depressed
 - 4 this type of education is very expensive indeed but it is well worth every penny spent on it
 - 5 the headmaster said that the boys parents should exercise more control at home
 - 6 the facts the prisoner admitted pointed at him as the guilty person but he protested he was innocent
 - 7 once having lost our way in that remote part of scotland we had to spend the night camping by the road-side
 - 8 the political demonstrators who felt strongly on the subject of racial discrimination were prepared to defy the police
 - 9 cross-channel ferries unable to dock at dover because of gales had to go on to newhaven
 - 10 he won't think he has any reason to thank you for all that you've done

Section three

Vocabulary work

Note: For the work in this section of the book, students should use a monolingual English dictionary for foreign students, and not a translating dictionary (see page 14).

The use of words

217–219 Explain the difference in the meaning or use of the words in italics in the pairs or groups of sentences.

217

- 1a I'll teach you to play tennis.
- b I'll teach you to steal my apples!
- 2a This book was especially written for foreign students.
- b This book is especially useful to foreign students.
- 3a Would you be prepared to help me in this way?
- b Would you please be prepared to leave the hotel at 8 a.m.?
- 4a His room overlooked the park.
- b He overlooked the error as it was my first day at work.
- c He overlooked the error, as he wasn't paying attention.
- 5a He said he wasn't informed of this matter.
- b He said he wasn't informed in these matters.
- 6a I think it wouldn't be wise to mention it to him just now.
- b I think it wouldn't be wise to mention it to him just yet.
- 7a He enjoyed a good education.
- b He enjoyed his lessons at school.
- 8a He said he had been fairly well treated by his captors.
- b He said he had been fairly well treated by his captors.
- 9a After an exhausting search, they found the missing children.
- b After an exhaustive search, they found the missing children.
- 10a Undoubtedly, that is the best method to adopt.
- b No doubt, that is the best method to adopt.

218

- 1a They left at once.
- b They were all talking at once.
- c The building was at once beautiful and functional in design.
- 2a They struck a bargain on how to share the market between them.
- b She bought a bargain in the January sales.

- 3a He maintains a large family.
b He maintains that families should be large.
4a He must be out: no one has answered the door.
b You must do as you are told.
5a On one occasion I remember, the meeting broke up in disorder.
b I don't have occasion to visit London very frequently nowadays.
6a The teacher was driven almost to distraction by the misbehaviour of his pupils.
b The child has so many distractions that he is disinclined to do his homework.
7a One should take full advantage of any opportunity to travel.
b One shouldn't take advantage of the ignorance of others.
8a I hope he appreciates what this means.
b I greatly appreciate what you did for me.
c The value of the shares appreciated considerably in the course of a year.
9a He certainly doesn't believe in ghosts.
b Surely he doesn't believe in ghosts?
10a She didn't buy the dress because it didn't fit her.
b She didn't buy the dress because it didn't suit her.

219

- 1a They didn't recognize Mr Smith as the man they had known ten years before.
b They didn't recognize Mr Smith as their leader.
2a Charles promised to call for me on his way to work.
b Success in life generally calls for hard work.
3a People dislike him because he always boasts about his success.
b The town boasts two cinemas, a theatre, and a swimming-pool.
4a One shouldn't be jealous of the good fortune of others.
b The company is very jealous of its reputation for producing high-quality goods.
5a The Customs official didn't even ask for my passport.
b Driving fast on any icy road is asking for trouble.
6a Altogether, it was a very enjoyable day's outing.
b Altogether, there were thirty people on the outing.
7a The proposals should prove to be in the interest of the public.
b The proposals should prove to be of interest to the public.
8a His friend reproached him for having disclosed the secret.
b His friend reproached him with having disclosed the secret.
9a He told me he was leaving school.
b He told me to leave the room.
10a The teacher asked the student to answer the question.
b The teacher asked the student if he knew the answer.

Words confused or misused

220-229 Use a dictionary to help you choose the correct word to complete each sentence, and then write a second sentence illustrating the use of the other word.

220

- From his manner I (implied, inferred) that he wasn't pleased.
- Train services were badly (effected, affected) by the signals failure.
- Many children leave school apparently (incapable, unable) of writing a letter of application for a job.
- In some streets parking is permitted on (alternate, alternative) weekdays.
- There was a 'Danger' sign at the entrance to the (disused, misused) mine.
- The excuse he gave for his absence was hardly (satisfying, satisfactory).

221

- There had been a (regrettable, regretful) lack of communication between men and management.
- The brakes on the car were found to be (defective, deficient).
- As a student he is still (dependent, dependant) on his parents.
- When he becomes an engineer, he will probably get a job in an (industrial, industrious) area.
- The university sets (exceedingly, excessively) high standards for applicants, as the course is a (popular, populous) one.
- Some might even say the demands of the university are (unreasonable, irrational).

222

- It's almost impossible to (tell, say) the difference between the original and the copy.
- Never walk into the road from behind a (stationery, stationary) vehicle.
- The customer was (unsatisfied, dissatisfied) with the standard of service.
- The new computer can be (adopted, adapted) to the needs of both home and business users.
- (Exhausting, exhaustive) tests have proved that fluoride protects teeth.
- Children must be (conscious, conscientious) in brushing their teeth regularly.

223

- 1 My wallet has been (robbed, stolen)!
- 2 The painting later proved to be a forgery and virtually (invaluable, worthless).
- 3 We have heard a lot about the threat of famine over the (past, passed) few months.
- 4 Cape Horn is (notorious, famous) for its dangerous seas.
- 5 Malnutrition is one of the (principal, principle) causes of disease in the poorer countries of Africa.
- 6 Some artists are very (sensitive, sensible) to criticism.

224

- 1 Please forget what I said just now—I was simply thinking (aloud, loudly).
- 2 'Applicants for the post should have substantial relevant (experience, experiences) in marketing computer software.'
- 3 The United Kingdom (consists, comprises) of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.
- 4 Everyone (agreed, accepted) to be ready to leave at 7.00 a.m.
- 5 This would (overtake, overcome) the problem of the early morning rush hour.
- 6 Sure enough, at 7.00 a.m., we were (all ready, already).

225

- 1 It suddenly started raining (hardly, hard).
- 2 He's already made up his mind. You'll never (persuade, convince) him to change it now.
- 3 He (remembered, reminded) me not to forget my passport.
- 4 The teacher (confidently, confidentially) expects his students to pass the examination.
- 5 (Everyone, every one) of those present agreed with the speaker.
- 6 Wouldn't you like to have the (possibility, opportunity) of meeting the Queen in person?

226

- 1 Our party guests suddenly arrived (altogether, all together).
- 2 (At last, at least), that is the impression we got.
- 3 I woke up late after the party, (beside, besides) which I had a hangover.
- 4 I took a map with me, as I didn't want to (loose, lose) my way on the journey.
- 5 (Presently, actually) I began to feel a little better.
- 6 I arrived at the office (fairly, rather) later than usual.

227

- 1 The law on drinking and driving is quite (explicit, implicit).
- 2 Every driver must be held (responsible to, responsible for) his own actions.
- 3 The (prize, price) you pay for breaking the law may be disqualification from driving.
- 4 An (appreciative, appreciable) number of drivers now take the law seriously.
- 5 If you want to be sure of a safe (travel, journey), don't drink and drive!
- 6 A(n) (uninterested, disinterested) view on the use of the new intoximeter for testing a driver's alcohol level appears in this month's issue of Motoring.

228

- 1 Having found a property we liked, we had to (raise, rise) money quickly.
- 2 The bank (refused, denied) to grant us a loan because we had no security.
- 3 We then approached a solicitor for (advise, advise).
- 4 He said that if we both had a (job, work) we could get a loan from a building society.
- 5 We tried to (borrow, lend) money from friends, but this proved impracticable.
- 6 We were (finally, at last) obliged to abandon the whole idea.

229

- 1 In this new home-study course, the cassette and the book are (complementary, complimentary).
- 2 There is the usual promise of a quick success as a (stimulant, stimulus) to buy the book and start the course.
- 3 A (glance, glimpse) at the contents shows that it covers much familiar ground.
- 4 One (distinct, distinctive) feature, however, is the option of a tutorial service by post.
- 5 The book is likely to appeal to someone doing (job, work) that demands the ability to write well.
- 6 It also obviates the need to (frequent, attend) evening classes.

Comparisons and contrasts

230-233 Explain the similarities and differences in meaning between the words in each pair. Students should answer in complete sentences, and should vary the construction of their answers. The following forms may be found useful:

- a* Both . . . , but while the first . . . , the second . . .
b Both . . . , the first, however, being . . . and the second . . .
c — describes . . . , while/whereas — describes . . .
d — is something that . . . , and — is something that . . .
e Although both . . . , the first . . . and the second . . .
f — differs from — in that . . .
g The difference between — and — is that . . .

230

- | | |
|-------------|------------|
| 1 barrister | solicitor |
| 2 audience | spectators |
| 3 booklet | leaflet |
| 4 index | appendix |
| 5 teacher | professor |
| 6 aroma | odour |

231

- | | |
|--------------|--------------|
| 1 friend | acquaintance |
| 2 hotel | hostel |
| 3 newspaper | magazine |
| 4 prejudice | superstition |
| 5 salary | fees |
| 6 supervisor | surveyor |

232

- | | |
|----------------|------------|
| 1 hedge | fence |
| 2 education | upbringing |
| 3 abnormal | unusual |
| 4 compensation | reward |
| 5 criminal | prisoner |
| 6 guardian | warden |

233

- | | | | |
|----------------|---------------|---------|---------|
| 1 discoverer | inventor | 5 mob | crowd |
| 2 attendant | assistant | 6 thief | burglar |
| 3 announcement | advertisement | | |
| 4 verdict | sentence | | |

Words and their associations

The following five exercises give practice in using words that express broadly related ideas. They have been included in order to focus attention on an important aspect of learning and using new words: their meaning and use should be learned, as far as possible, from their connotations or associations. For example, 'stride' and 'strut' are, broadly speaking, both ways of walking, but each has its particular associations and must be used in an appropriate context. At the end of most sentences in Exercises 234, 236, and 237, a clue is given to the appropriate associations of the word needed, in some cases by a repetition of words from the sentence.

234 Complete the sentences, using the words given at the head of the exercise. Use each word once only.

- | | | | |
|---------|--------|-------|--------|
| stagger | plod | march | pace |
| loiter | stride | stray | strut |
| ramble | lurk | creep | wander |

- The victorious army . . . through the conquered city. (soldiers)
- Not wishing to be discovered, the small boy . . . downstairs. (fear of making a noise)
- The thieves . . . in the shadows for their unsuspecting victim. (waiting with evil intentions)
- The turkey . . . up and down the farmyard. (arrogance)
- The drunkard . . . from the public house and clung to a lamp-post. (unsteady movement)
- We reached the village after a very long walk, and . . . wearily to our hotel. (wearily)
- The manager . . . into the office and asked who was responsible for the error. (purposeful)
- The mother told her son to do the errand quickly, and not to . . . on the way. (necessity for speed)
- The dog had . . . from its home, and was now completely lost. (lose the way)
- As last Sunday was a fine day, we decided to . . . around the countryside. (walking for pleasure, and without aim)
- The man whose wife was expecting a child . . . nervously up and down the hospital waiting-room. (nervously up and down)
- On my first visit to the city, I . . . from place to place without any sense of direction. (no sense of direction)

235 Write sentences illustrating the use of each of the words given.

- | | |
|------------|-----------|
| 1 stroll | 6 stumble |
| 2 rush | 7 trudge |
| 3 scramble | 8 step |
| 4 crawl | 9 lurch |
| 5 limp | 10 prowl |

- 236 Complete the sentences, using the words given at the head of the exercise. Use each word once only.
- | | | | | |
|---------|---------|-------|--------|-------|
| smile | sneer | grin | cheer | roar |
| jeer | giggle | laugh | titter | tease |
| snigger | chuckle | groan | mock | boo |
- The Queen . . . graciously as she passed through the . . . crowds. (graciously; crowds expressing approval)
 - The crowd . . . loudly when it appeared that the referee had given a wrong decision. (noisy expression of displeasure)
 - A nervous . . . was heard in the audience when the solo violinist broke a string in the middle of the performance. (nervousness, desire to suppress laughter)
 - The spectators . . . when the champion, who was lying third in the race, gave up, pretending to be suffering from cramp. (noisy expression of contempt)
 - Jokes are unpredictable in their effect. Sometimes they make the hearer . . . , sometimes they merely produce a . . . because the hearer has heard them before. (—; pretended pain)
 - At the end of the boxing match, the winner . . . broadly in response to the . . . of approval from the crowd. (broadly; loud expression of feelings)
 - An intellectual snob often . . . at the efforts of others to improve themselves. (contempt)
 - If you . . . me any longer, I shall get angry. (make fun of)
 - The school-children . . . when the headmaster tripped over his gown as he was mounting the school platform at morning assembly. (nervousness, school-children)
 - The boy . . . when shown a comic drawing of the teacher. (half-ashamed laughter)
 - The unwieldy package seemed to . . . at all my efforts to tie it securely. (defy contemptuously)
 - The reader, obviously finding the book very amusing, sat quietly . . . to himself. (to himself)
- 237 Instructions as for 236
- | | | | | |
|------|--------|------|------|-----|
| draw | drag | jerk | pull | lug |
| tug | wrench | haul | tow | |
- The thieves, unable to open the safe, had . . . it from its fixtures and taken it away. (pull violently)
 - My car broke down and had to be . . . to a garage. (broke down)
 - The bus braked sharply and stopped with a . . . , throwing several passengers to the floor. (sudden stopping)
 - The trawlermen had taken such a huge catch that they had difficulty in . . . the nets aboard. (raising a heavy load)

- The load of hay was being . . . by two horses.
- The piece of furniture was so heavy that it had to be . . . along the floor. (pull without lifting)
- My friend arrived at the station . . . a heavy suitcase. (pull or carry something cumbersome)
- The cross-Channel swimmer had to be . . . out of the water exhausted.
- He . . . so hard at the window sash that it broke, and the window came crashing down. (pull sharply)

238 Write sentences illustrating the use of each of the words given.

- | | |
|----------|-----------|
| 1 hold | 6 grip |
| 2 grasp | 7 clasp |
| 3 clutch | 8 capture |
| 4 seize | 9 pluck |
| 5 snatch | 10 clench |

Substituting adverbs for adverbial phrases

- 239 Replace each group of words in italics by one of the adverbs given at the head of the exercise, making any necessary changes in punctuation and word order. For each of the four remaining adverbs, write a sentence illustrating its use.
- | | | | |
|---------------|---------------|---------------|------------------|
| conceivably | stealthily | outspeakingly | interminably |
| imaginatively | reluctantly | concurrently | radically |
| indifferently | clandestinely | explicitly | conclusively |
| substantially | superficially | querulously | indiscriminately |
- Although unwilling to do so*, he came to the conclusion that no better scheme was practicable.
 - The party leader's speech seemed to go on and on without end.
 - The electorate viewed with lack of interest the prospect of a Communist government coming to power.
 - Until the new method had proved its worth, the management agreed that the old and the new should be used together at the same time.
 - The Secretary General said that the new plan the Russians had proposed was, in most respects, the same as the one that had been rejected earlier.
 - Having been officially banned, the political party was obliged to meet and operate in secret.
 - This course of action could, it may be imagined, lead to ruin.
 - A member of the audience voiced his objections without any reticence or reserve.

- 9 The sick man asked in a complaining manner why no one ever visited him.
- 10 The chairman of the company said that new techniques had, in a very fundamental way, changed their production methods.
- 11 The fingerprints proved beyond all doubt that Mr X was the murderer.
- 12 An avid reader, he reads all books without regard to differences in quality or theme.

240 Instructions as for 239

- | | | | |
|--------------|-----------------|-----------|---------------|
| judiciously | conscientiously | wilfully | inadvertently |
| tremulously | inopportunistly | adroitly | conversely |
| hysterically | tirelessly | lavishly | vicariously |
| prematurely | emotionally | slavishly | blindly |
- 1 The lost child gave its name with a nervous and shaking voice.
- 2 He did his work with great care and thoroughness.
- 3 Knowing that the weather might quickly change for the worse, the climbers very wisely took extra equipment with them.
- 4 The woman trapped in the blazing house was screaming with uncontrollable emotion and fear.
- 5 Everyone agreed that the Secretary General was a man who had worked for peace with unremitting effort.
- 6 More exports means, looking at the question from the opposite point of view, fewer goods for the home market.
- 7 Many people enjoy the thrills of climbing indirectly by reading of the experience of others.
- 8 This book, illustrated regardless of expense, makes a wonderful Christmas gift.
- 9 Having no mind of his own, the critic adopted with complete lack of originality the opinion of others.
- 10 The patient was, through an oversight, given the wrong prescription by the doctor.
- 11 The man in court was charged with obstructing the police with intention and determination.
- 12 The revelation of the scandal occurred at a very inconvenient time at the beginning of an election campaign.

241 Instructions as for 239

- | | | | |
|-----------|--------------------|---------------|--------------|
| severely | temperamentally | synthetically | tentatively |
| wistfully | apprehensively | triumphantly | arbitrarily |
| briskly | characteristically | aggressively | persuasively |
| leniently | surreptitiously | scrupulously | earnestly |
- 1 We are now able to produce more and more raw materials by artificial means.

- 2 The winners of the football championship ran off the field carrying the silver cup and expressing their pride in victory.
- 3 I suggested in a hesitating way that what my friend was doing was wrong.
- 4 Heavy rain hampered rescue operations in an extreme way.
- 5 Intending aircrew undergo searching tests to discover whether they are by disposition and character suitable for the work.
- 6 The thief took the goods in a way that no one would notice and left the shop.
- 7 A judge must always be perfectly and in every way fair.
- 8 The children pressed their noses against the shop window and looked with unsatisfied longing at the goods inside.
- 9 The drunkard spoke in a quarrelsome way when asked by the police to accompany them to the police station.
- 10 We walked actively and with energy along the cliffs and soon became warm despite the cold wind.
- 11 The workers complained that their wage claim had been rejected without impartial consideration by their employers.
- 12 The wife of the first man in space sat at home waiting with anxious fear for his return to earth.

242 Replace the words in italics by a single adverb of equivalent meaning, making any necessary changes in punctuation and word order.

- 1 The young students were discussing the subject in a lively manner.
- 2 They managed to settle the dispute in a friendly way.
- 3 I have almost finished my work, and I shall be with you very soon.
- 4 He expressed his point of view in very few words.
- 5 The ship's generator broke down, and the pumps had to be operated by hand instead of by machine.
- 6 In the accident that occurred last night, two men were so badly injured that they died.
- 7 His novel ideas are time and again getting him into trouble with his more conservative colleagues.
- 8 This machine is out of order for the time being.
- 9 When asked why he had been absent from school, the boy replied, in a manner lacking all respect, that he had gone fishing instead.
- 10 England is by reputation a land of everlasting rain and fog.
- 11 He undertook the work of his own free will.
- 12 The motion was carried with the agreement of all.

243 Instructions as for 242

- 1 The room has been furnished in a manner showing good taste.
- 2 The Music Festival was held every year.
- 3 He won the first prize three years one after another.

- 4 The politician realized that by supporting a pacifist policy he would, beyond all hope of recall, forfeit his chances of becoming the party leader.
- 5 He could see, looking back over the past, where he had gone wrong.
- 6 The farmer found that his crops were, in comparison with those of other farmers, undamaged by the heavy rainstorm.
- 7 He said that they had, it was to be regretted, been obliged to give up the scheme through lack of support.
- 8 He felt angry, as he had every reason to be, at the way he had been treated.
- 9 The new building was at once functional and pleasing in its appeal to one's sense of beauty.
- 10 The man was found to have married again while still legally married to his first wife.
- 11 Investigators agreed that passengers on the airliner that had crashed must have died at the very moment of the crash.
- 12 A thousand pounds was given to the Cancer Research Fund without the name of the donor being made known.

Adjectives ending in -ible, -able, and -able

- 244 Replace the words in italics by an adjective ending in -ible or -able, making any necessary changes in word order.
 - 1 Many people are easily influenced by flattery. (. . . to)
 - 2 Adolescents often go through a phase when they are completely lacking in any sense of responsibility.
 - 3 He argued so cogently that his critics found they could not answer him.
 - 4 Despite several setbacks, the climbers went on with their plans for an assault on the Eiger with enthusiasm that could not be repressed.
 - 5 A good ear for nuances is absolutely necessary if one wishes to speak a foreign language perfectly.
 - 6 Being impatient is opposed in nature or character with being a good teacher.
 - 7 The police admitted to having made a mistake that was very much to be regretted in accusing an innocent man.
 - 8 Your attitude in this matter is such as cannot be defended.
 - 9 The value of Elgar's contribution to the reputation of British music is too great to be estimated.
 - 10 Negotiations between the employers and the workers broke down because both sides were too determined not to be turned aside from, or to modify, their purpose.
 - 11 Although the two vessels collided with a sharp impact, the damage was found, on inspection, to be of little or no significance.
 - 12 Most people like to think they are so efficient at their job that they would be impossible to replace.

245 Instructions as for 244

- 1 Humidity is so intense in some parts of the tropics that Europeans find they are unable to endure it.
- 2 He found he could not be chosen for the job because he hadn't the necessary qualifications. (was . . .)
- 3 The two views are such as cannot be reconciled to one another.
- 4 All men are liable to make mistakes.
- 5 He spoke so quickly that no one could understand him. (as to be . . .)
- 6 In Wales there is a village whose name is, for English people, impossible to pronounce.
- 7 The number 12 can be divided by 2, 3, 4, and 6. (is . . .)
- 8 We had the greatest difficulty one could imagine in persuading the authorities that we had come to England only to study.
- 9 Froebel believed that unless children were trained properly from a very early age they would develop faults of character that would later become fixed so firmly that they couldn't be rooted out.
- 10 The quality that makes a picture a masterpiece is often impossible to define or explain.
- 11 It's useless to go ahead with a plan if you think it may prove impossible to put into practice.
- 12 After he had followed a course in elocution, his speech was quite without faults.

246

- Complete the sentences with adjectives ending in -able, -ible, or -able, derived from the verbs given in brackets. Note that in some cases the negative form of the adjective is required if the sentence is to make good sense.
- 1 England is linked by such (dissolve) ties to America that any permanent quarrel between the two countries is (conceive).
 - 2 Employers claimed that yet another strike would do (repair) harm to the public image of Trade Unions.
 - 3 Most people would agree that the greatest of poets are (translate).
 - 4 Only a limited number of types of fungi are (eat).
 - 5 My first sight of mountains made an (delete) impression on my memory.
 - 6 You won't persuade him to change his mind. His decision is (revoke).
 - 7 His moods are very (change).
 - 8 I've never met such a man. His energy seems (exhaust).
 - 9 Mozart's style has been found to be (imitate).
 - 10 He is in the (envy) position of being completely independent.
 - 11 Though once friends, they are now the most (placate) of enemies.
 - 12 Floods having carried away the bridge, the river was (pass).

247 Instructions as for 246

- 1 Many fabrics are specially treated so as to be (shrink).
- 2 Men may die, but their words are (destroy).
- 3 Unfortunately, the problem of recurring inflation appears to be (solve).
- 4 Extra police were called in when it appeared that the crowd might become (control).
- 5 It was a (remember) day when peace was declared.
- 6 Britain has many miles of (navigate) waterways.
- 7 Cheques are generally (negotiate).
- 8 Day changes to night by almost (perceive) stages.
- 9 He returned to his university after twenty years' absence to find that (number) changes had taken place.
- 10 The residents complained of the (object) smell produced by the tanning factory.
- 11 The engineers engaged on tunnel construction had to blast away tons of (penetrate) rock.
- 12 Many currencies are now freely (convert).

248 Instructions as for 246

- 1 In the poorer parts of underdeveloped countries many people live in a (pity) state.
- 2 Airmen are supplied with (inflate) rubber dinghies, to be used if they bale out over the sea.
- 3 We spent a very (enjoy) evening talking about old times.
- 4 Even as late as the nineteenth century, sheep-stealing was (punish) by death.
- 5 The goods were so badly damaged in transit that they were found to be (sell).
- 6 The problem of slum clearance is (separate) from the problem of building new houses.
- 7 When shown the music of Tchaikovsky's violin concerto, the violinist for whom it was written declared it to be (play).
- 8 Since his bad habits were never broken when he was a child, they are now (correct).
- 9 The English now regard free education as an (alienate) right.
- 10 Children's minds are very (impress).
- 11 How a nail came to be in the meat pie was quite (explain).
- 12 The English butler is generally assumed to be (perturb).

Adjectives ending in -ive

- 249 Replace each group of words in italics by one of the adjectives given at the head of the exercise, making any necessary changes in word order. For each of the four remaining adjectives, write a sentence illustrating its use.

abortive	defective	excessive	lucrative	submissive abusive	defensive	formative	pervasive	successive acquisitive	discursive	indicative	plaintive deceptive	evasive	intensive	repulsive

- 1 Present-day English society is often labelled 'wanting to gain things for itself'.
 - 2 Would you prefer to be thought obedient or merely humble and meekly unassertive?
 - 3 The measures the Government has already taken are some sign of the seriousness with which it views the present crisis.
 - 4 The child had come under bad influences during the years of his life that were decisive in shaping his character.
 - 5 The police charged the man with using language that was meant to be insulting.
 - 6 Television exerts an influence that has a widespread effect on the lives of our children.
 - 7 We had almost given up hope of finding our cat, when we heard a mournful and sorrowful miaow from the branch of a nearby tree.
 - 8 The Company's profits have increased by 5 per cent in each of the last three years.
 - 9 The machine that didn't work properly had to be returned to the makers.
 - 10 Efforts to put the scheme into practice proved such that they ended in failure.
 - 11 When we asked the boy who knocked on the door what the money he was collecting was for, he gave us an answer that was intended to avoid being a direct reply.
 - 12 He does a trade that brings in a lot of money by selling vegetables grown in his back garden.
 - 13 Most students found the lecture useless because it was too prone to wander from one point to another without plan.
 - 14 'Appearances can often be liable to mislead.'
- 250 Replace the words in italics by a single adjective ending in -ive, making any necessary changes in word order.
- 1 One side of a postage stamp is covered with a sticky substance.
 - 2 A man who is apt to be moved by sudden impulse acts first and thinks afterwards.
 - 3 Children are very apt to ask questions and often have memories more able to remember facts than adults.
 - 4 A passage of writing whose purpose is to describe can be very difficult to summarize.

- 5 A great deal of damage was caused by the fire before it could be brought under control.
- 6 Much of eastern England has a soil that produces crops of a very high yield.
- 7 In a debate, it is always good to have at least one speaker whose arguments are intentionally irritating or designed to produce a strong reaction.
- 8 It is a platitude that wealth is not always likely to lead to happiness.
- 9 Everyone recognized that it would be unfair and impracticable to make the law apply to the past.
- 10 The public needs to be assured that the Stock Exchange does not offer too many opportunities to the investor who is merely concerned with financial operations of a risky but potentially highly profitable nature.

Adjectives ending in -ous

- 251 Replace each group of words in italics by one of the adjectives given at the head of the exercise, making any necessary changes in word order. For each of the four remaining adjectives, write a sentence illustrating its use.

boisterous	homogeneous	miscellaneous	presumptuous
capricious	ingenious	momentous	specious
extraneous	ingenuous	obnoxious	strenuous fallacious	ludicrous	precocious	supercilious
fastidious	malicious

- 1 Most teachers prefer a class that is fairly consistent in having pupils of the same level.
- 2 The hotel porter gave me a contemptuous and haughty stare as I alighted from the bus with a rucksack and approached the entrance.
- 3 Mountain-climbing can often be dangerous in winter because of the unpredictable and ever-changing weather.
- 4 Nobody could agree with the speaker because all his arguments and ideas sprang from assumptions that were based on error.
- 5 What a pity it is that some cheeses have such a thoroughly unpleasant smell that people are deterred from eating them!
- 6 Children who develop faculties at an unusually early age do not always fulfil their promise later in life.
- 7 This writer keeps strictly to his subject, and is careful not to introduce any matter that is not directly relevant to the subject.
- 8 Only a person who can't think for himself will be taken in by arguments that seem right or true but are not really so.
- 9 It was regarded as an event of great importance and consequence when man first stepped on to the moon.

- 10 The man's fellow workers felt he had been taking an unwarranted liberty in putting himself forward as their spokesman.
- 11 When questioned by the master about a theft from a cloakroom, the boy, with an open and innocent expression on his face, pretended to know nothing about it.
- 12 The newspaper was sued for having made remarks motivated by ill will and spite about the famous singer.
- 13 At certain ages, many children are very difficult to please or very particular about the food they eat and the clothes they wear.
- 14 Fifty years ago, the idea of flying to the moon appeared absurd or ridiculous.

252 Replace the words in italics by a single adjective ending in -ous, -ious, -uous, or -eous, making any necessary changes in word order.

- 1 Comedians must depend to some extent on the fact that laughter is likely to spread to or influence others.
 - 2 They chose the village hall for the party as it was roomy and had, at the same time, a homely atmosphere.
 - 3 The audience at the circus broke into natural and unforced applause as the acrobat completed his most daring turn.
 - 4 Trees that shed their leaves each year look very bare in winter.
 - 5 In some of his experiments with dogs, Pavlov had to keep them from food until they were almost fierce from lack of food in order to induce the desired response to stimuli.
 - 6 Contrary to expectations, the House was far from being all of the same mind on the question of building new universities.
 - 7 Comparatively few people are able to use either hand with equal facility.
 - 8 Until the nineteenth century, governments tended to view the problem of the aged and the poor with hard and insensitive indifference.
 - 9 Shop assistants must sometimes find it difficult to remain polite and showing good manners when faced with an unpleasant or rude customer.
 - 10 Airline pilots undergo very strict and severe health checks at regular intervals.
- 253 Complete the sentences with an adjective ending in -ous, -ious, -uous, or -eous, according to the definitions given in brackets.
- 1 Perhaps he was simply trying to make an impression, but I found him rather . . . (full of self-importance)
 - 2 The houses were clearly subsiding. Several . . . cracks had appeared in the walls. (having a threatening or unfavourable aspect)

- 3 It is now generally accepted that cigarette smoking is . . . to health. (likely to cause harm or injury)
- 4 His eldest daughter was growing up into a . . . young lady. (lively, high-spirited)
- 5 London was once . . . for its smog, but things have improved since the introduction of smokeless zones. (well known for a bad reason)
- 6 The lawyer advised the publishers to withdraw from the book several passages that might be considered . . . (likely to damage the character or reputation of someone)
- 7 Our short cut proved to be a very hilly and . . . road. (full of twists and bends)
- 8 Some students took . . . notes during the lecture. (plentiful, in abundance)
- 9 In the Hebrides, off the coast of Scotland, there has been a revival in . . . crafts such as weaving. (native, belonging naturally to the area)
- 10 The sentence he had written was . . . (capable of more than one interpretation)
- 11 It seemed to me that the taxi driver was taking a most . . . route. (Perhaps he just didn't know the way. (roundabout or indirect))
- 12 An older generation often regards the behaviour of the young as . . . (shocking; beyond all reasonable limits)

254 Form adjectives ending in -ous, -ious, -uous, or -eous, according to the definitions given, and write sentences illustrating their use.

- 1 taking care not to make mistakes or get into danger (c . . .)
- 2 offering service that is not wanted; intrusive (o . . .)
- 3 flourishing, successful, thriving (p . . .)
- 4 difficult, requiring the use of much energy (a . . .)
- 5 careful to act according to what one's conscience tells one is right; showing a strong sense of duty (c . . .)
- 6 full of a strong desire to do or be something, or for success, fame, or honour (a . . .)
- 7 untrustworthy or disloyal; not to be depended on (tr . . .)
- 8 happening or done at the same time (s . . .)
- 9 costly or luxurious (s . . .)
- 10 showing readiness to give money, help, or kindness (g . . .)
- 11 delighting in the infliction of injury (v . . .)
- 12 showing or influenced by unreasonable belief in the supernatural, in magic, or in witchcraft (s . . .)

Adjectives and verbs ending in *-ate*¹

255 Form adjectives ending in -ate according to the definitions given, and write sentences illustrating their use.

- 1 thoughtless of others (in . . .)
- 2 avoiding extremes (m . . .)
- 3 permitted by law (l . . .)
- 4 unable to read or write (i . . .)
- 5 in proper proportion with (com . . .)
- 6 having little or no hope (d . . .)
- 7 inborn or natural (i . . .)
- 8 stubborn or inflexible of will (o . . .)
- 9 occurring, done, at once; coming nearest (i . . .)
- 10 sufficient (a . . .)
- 11 loving, showing love or fondness (a . . .)
- 12 dominated by, or easily giving way to, strong feelings (p . . .)
- 13 pure, faultless, right in every detail (im . . .)
- 14 fine, soft or tender (d . . .)

256 Replace the words in italics by a suitable form of a verb ending in -ate, making any necessary changes in word order.

- 1 The two authors worked together on the book.
- 2 While he was a prisoner of war, his captors attempted to instal their own beliefs into him.
- 3 Investors have seen the value of their shares go down considerably during the last six months.
- 4 Far from improving matters, what you have done has only made the problem worse.
- 5 The fact that the management is trying to reach agreement with five separate unions has tended to make the negotiations more difficult and complex.
- 6 Unfortunately, it is all too evident that reports about famine in parts of Africa were in no way made to seem worse than the reality.
- 7 The cross-examining lawyer was soon able to show that the witness had simply invented the story from beginning to end.
- 8 The new methods will make easier the speedy handling of goods in the docks.
- 9 The two thieves gained access to the house by pretending to be policemen.
- 10 The whole consignment of tinned food was condemned as being impure and likely to cause disease.
- 11 Next year, we shall prepare a much larger area of ground for growing crops.

¹ See also Exercises 269–271.

- 12 The courier had the unenviable task of trying to calm the angry feelings of a crowd of holidaymakers who were obliged to accept alternative accommodation.
- 257 Form verbs ending in -ate according to the definitions given, and write sentences illustrating their use.
- 1 pull up by the roots, get rid of (e...)
 - 2 utterly destroy (a...)
 - 3 take part in
 - 4 make inquiries into
 - 5 soak thoroughly (s...)
 - 6 restore to good condition (ren...)
 - 7 fill with holes (p...)
 - 8 estimate too highly
 - 9 propose for election (n...)
 - 10 make very angry (inf...)
 - 11 turn into vapour
 - 12 subject to questioning

258 Instructions as for 257

- 1 have commanding influence and position (d...)
- 2 supply land with water
- 3 preserve in memory by celebration (com...)
- 4 try to do as well as or better than (e...)
- 5 pierce, enter into
- 6 look forward to a thing before it comes
- 7 buy or sell where there is a great risk of loss and a great chance of gain; form opinion (without having complete knowledge)
- 8 go round, revolve
- 9 go through the main points of again (re...)
- 10 place apart or alone (i...)
- 11 look at or think about seriously
- 12 use movements of the hands and arms to express ideas or feelings

Verbs ending in -fy

- 259 Complete the sentences with a suitable tense or form of a verb ending in -fy, according to the definitions given in brackets.
- 1 He was so enraged that nothing I could say or do would ... him. (calm or quieten down)
 - 2 This new motor policy ... the holder against all risks. (give safeguard or protection by means of insurance)
 - 3 The rescued climbers said they had drunk hot chocolate to ... themselves against the cold. (support or strengthen)

- 4 After months of negotiations, the two sides have now ... the new agreement. (confirm or formally accept)
- 5 In our tour of the factory, we saw the molten metal being poured into moulds, where it quickly ... (become hard or firm)
- 6 The witness ... that he had seen the accused leaving the house at around midnight. (give evidence)
- 7 Even some experts are ... as to how the Government arrived at the latest set of trade figures. (puzzle, bewilder)
- 8 There are many who believe that the use of force in pursuit of political ends can never be ... (show to be right, reasonable, or proper)
- 9 Independent auditors were called in to ... the figures given in the Company's annual accounts. (check the truth and accuracy of)
- 10 In England, one must follow a three years' course of training to ... as a teacher. (become entitled to work)
- 11 The chief negotiator's conciliatory remarks during the talks were completely ... by a public statement he made later. (make useless, make null and void)
- 12 The speaker was invited to ... some of his earlier remarks, which had caused quite a stir among the audience. (make larger or fuller, give more details relating to)

260 Form verbs ending in -fy according to the definitions given, and write sentences illustrating their use. (NB. Except in No. 12, the verb is directly related to one of the words in the definition.)

- 1 make pure
- 2 make or become clear
- 3 fill with terror
- 4 put right
- 5 give notice of, report
- 6 make false or incorrect
- 7 make or become liquid
- 8 arrange in classes or groups
- 9 make or become more intense
- 10 illustrate by example; be an example of
- 11 form into one, unite
- 12 be a symbol of; be representative of (t...)

Verbs ending in -ize or -ise

- 261 Form verbs ending in -ize or -ise according to the definitions given, and write sentences illustrating their use.
- 1 make (soil) productive
 - 2 make of one size, shape, quality, etc., according to fixed standards

- 3 prepare for movement or action
- 4 practise terrorism upon
- 5 reduce to a minimum
- 6 use sparingly
- 7 speak in general terms
- 8 give authority to
- 9 subject to penalty
- 10 establish a colony
- 11 put in danger (j...)
- 12 make permissible by law

262 Instructions as for 261

- 1 understand, be fully conscious of, see clearly (r...)
- 2 arouse horror and indignation in a person (sc...)
- 3 compose or produce something without preparation (im...)
- 4 act as deputy
- 5 bring up to date, make suitable for present-day needs
- 6 say that one is sorry for doing wrong
- 7 support by means of a subsidy
- 8 be or become a specialist
- 9 become fact (m...)
- 10 represent, be a symbol of
- 11 make a victim of
- 12 go through carefully and correct where necessary

Words with variable stress and pronunciation

263–268 Each of the following words¹ can function as a verb, and can also function as either a noun or an adjective. The grammatical function of the words is reflected in the stress pattern employed. If they function as verbs, the stress falls on the second syllable, whereas if they function as nouns or adjectives, the stress falls on the first syllable (in many cases, the vowel sounds also change):

He refused to believe what I said. (verb = /rɪ'fju:zd/)

The streets were littered with refuse. (noun = /'refju:s/)

Write sentences using the words either (a) as verbs in any tense or form, or (b) as nouns or adjectives, and state on which syllable the stress falls in the words as you have used them.

¹ See also page 248.

263

- 1 accent
- 2 contest
- 3 object
- 4 rebel
- 5 project
- 6 abstract
- 7 transfer
- 8 compound
- 9 convict
- 10 export

264

- 1 perfect
- 2 extract
- 3 exploit
- 4 discount
- 5 attribute
- 6 transport
- 7 suspect
- 8 imprint
- 9 recount
- 10 absent

265

- 1 frequent
- 2 convert
- 3 present
- 4 conflict
- 5 increase
- 6 progress
- 7 refill
- 8 conduct
- 9 record
- 10 contract

266

- 1 desert
- 2 incense
- 3 subject
- 4 fragment
- 5 converse
- 6 redress
- 7 content
- 8 protest
- 9 prospect
- 10 combine

267

- 1 compress
- 2 escort
- 3 essay
- 4 contrast
- 5 insult
- 6 permit
- 7 confine
- 8 compact
- 9 decrease
- 10 dictate

268

- 1 combine
- 2 digest
- 3 produce
- 4 overflow
- 5 entrance
- 6 survey
- 7 addict
- 8 reprint
- 9 incline
- 10 reject

269–271 Each of the following words¹ can function as a verb, and can also function as either a noun or an adjective. The grammatical function of the words is reflected in the pronunciation of the syllable -ate. If they function as verbs, -ate is pronounced /eɪt/, whereas if they function as nouns or adjectives, -ate is pronounced ət/or/ɪt/.

He graduated at Yale University. (verb = /'grædʒʊeɪtɪd/)

He is a graduate of Yale University. (noun = /'grædʒʊət/)

Write sentences using the words either (a) as verbs, or (b) as nouns or adjectives, and state the pronunciation of the syllable -ate in the words as you have used them.

¹ See also Exercises 255–258.

269

- 1 appropriate
- 2 estimate
- 3 intimate
- 4 deliberate
- 5 elaborate
- 6 moderate
- 7 duplicate
- 8 associate

270

- 1 degenerate
- 2 delegate
- 3 desolate
- 4 separate
- 5 articulate
- 6 co-ordinate
- 7 alternate
- 8 repatriate

271

- 1 precipitate
- 2 animate
- 3 advocate
- 4 approximate
- 5 predicate
- 6 regenerate
- 7 subordinate
- 8 initiate

Prefixes and suffixes

272–275 Explain the force of the prefixes in the words given. Give at least one other word formed with each prefix, and write sentences illustrating their use.

272

- 1 omnibus
- 2 perimeter
- 3 forgo
- 4 forecast
- 5 decipher
- 6 nonsense
- 7 counterpart
- 8 postpone
- 9 premature
- 10 semicircle

273

- 1 antipathy
- 2 coherent
- 3 homophone
- 4 bicycle
- 5 multiply
- 6 ambidextrous
- 7 automatic
- 8 interfere
- 9 circumference
- 10 antecedent

274

- 1 monotony
- 2 overcharge
- 3 superintend
- 4 retroactive
- 5 maltreat
- 6 syndicate
- 7 transform
- 8 surplus
- 9 uniform
- 10 outclass

275

- 1 obtrusive
- 2 connect
- 3 mislead
- 4 evict
- 5 proceed
- 6 benefactor
- 7 subtract
- 8 pseudo-Gothic
- 9 hyperbole
- 10 contravene

276–277 Explain the force of the suffixes in the words given. Give at least one other word formed with each suffix, and write sentences illustrating their use.

276

- 1 troublesome
- 2 noteworthiness
- 3 oldish
- 4 headmastership
- 5 parenthood
- 6 nominet
- 7 waitress
- 8 leaflet

277

- 1 strengthen
- 2 mountaineer
- 3 speedometer
- 4 fruitless
- 5 philology
- 6 photography
- 7 dormitory
- 8 motorist

278–280 Make as many verbs as you can from the stems given by adding different prefixes. Write sentences illustrating the use of each verb, or of a noun or adjective derived from it.

278

- 1 -tract
- 2 -pel
- 3 -fer
- 4 -vert
- 5 -cur
- 6 -duce
- 7 -sume

279

- 1 -tain
- 2 -mit
- 3 -press
- 4 -nounce
- 5 -pound
- 6 -plete
- 7 -voke

280

- 1 -pose
- 2 -scribe
- 3 -sist
- 4 -tend
- 5 -claim
- 6 -sent
- 7 -volve

Compound words

281–285 Make compound words (with hyphens if necessary) according to the definitions, using the word given as the first part of the compound. Write sentences illustrating the use of each word.

281

- 1 fool
 - a taking unnecessary risks
 - b made in such a way that even a fool can understand or use safely
- 2 heart
 - a sincere, deeply felt
 - b causing deep grief or distress
 - c suffering deeply from grief

- 3 stop a a temporary substitute b late news printed in a special column in a newspaper c an instrument used for recording the time taken for a race
- 4 head a forward motion, progress
 b self-willed, obstinate c words printed in large or heavy type giving information about the subject-matter of a newspaper article d place from which (e.g. police or army) operations are controlled
- 5 foot a a safe place for the foot, especially when climbing
 b a row of lights along the front of a stage
 c sound of footsteps

282

- 1 over a covered with clouds
 b sum of money drawn or borrowed from a bank in excess of one's deposit c failure to notice something
- 2 by a a road that enables the traveller to avoid going through the centre of a town
 b regulation made by a local authority
 c substance made or obtained during the manufacture of some other substance
- 3 long a tediously long b patient and uncomplaining in spite of trouble, pain, or insults c dating from long ago, not recent
- 4 book a person who keeps accounts (e.g. of a business)
 b person devoted to reading
 c supports to keep books upright when they are not kept on a shelf
- 5 shop a made dirty or faded by being shown or handled in a shop b one who steals goods while pretending to be a customer
 c one elected by his fellow workmen to act as their spokesman on conditions of work

283

- 1 hand a pair of metal rings joined by a short chain for securing a prisoner's hands
 b printed notice circulated by hand
 c not made by machine

- 2 light a cheerful, free from care
 b clever at stealing
 c giddy; thoughtless or forgetful
- 3 stand a unfriendly, distant in manner
 b stoppage
 c thing or person to be used or called on if necessary
- 4 play a someone who often goes to the theatre
 b dramatist
 c piece of land for children to play on
- 5 mouth a one who speaks for others or puts forward the views of others
 b small musical instrument with metal reeds played by blowing into small openings

284

- 1 up a tumult, violent disturbance
 b outcome, result
 c padding and covering of chairs and sofas
- 2 self a selfish, never thinking of the interests of others
 b obviously true, needing no proof
 c convinced of one's own goodness
- 3 lay a person who is not an expert with regard to a profession, science or art b manner in which something is arranged or disposed c piece of surfaced land at the side of a road where cars may park
- 4 show a place where goods are displayed
 b a full declaration of facts, intentions, or strength
 c something produced mainly for show or to attract attention
- 5 oil a waterproof cloth
 b container for oil
 c place where oil is found

285

- 1 fire a made of material that will not burn
 b gun, rifle, or revolver
 c company or group of men that put out fires
- 2 wind a something built or planted to give protection from the wind b the front window of a motor-car c unexpected and lucky receipt of money, or source of money

- 3 quick a mentally alert
b easily made angry
c expanse of soil that will not support any weight, but sucks down anyone who tries to walk on it
- 4 back a accumulation of work or business not yet attended to b principal piece of scenery on the stage, often left visible even though other parts of the scenery are changed c speaking evil of a person
- 5 eye a circumstance that brings enlightenment and surprise b an ugly or unpleasant thing to look at c one who has himself seen something happen

Word formation

286-294 Give an adjective and noun related to each verb, and write sentences illustrating the use of each word.

e.g. receive (verb) receptive (adjective) reception (noun) or receipt or receptacle

- a He should have received the money by now. (verb)
b I enjoy teaching that class because the children's minds are so receptive. (adjective)
c A reception was held in the village hall after the wedding. (noun) or I should keep the receipt for the money for the time being. or
 'Please place your cigarette ends in the receptacles provided.'

286

- 1 persist
2 abstain
3 compete
4 retain
5 proceed
6 deepen

287

- 1 deceive
2 vary
3 grieve
4 authorize
5 compare
6 explore

288

- 1 defy
2 explain
3 explode
4 irritate
5 imitate
6 observe

289

- 1 depend
2 conceive
3 attend
4 fail
5 hasten
6 fertilize

290

- 1 migrate
2 sympathize
3 repeat
4 presume
5 analyse
6 defraud

291

- 1 simplify
2 defend
3 conclude
4 heal
5 invigorate
6 apologize

292

- 1 appear
2 distinguish
3 repel
4 remember
5 interpret
6 encumber

293

- 1 reveal
2 avenge
3 broadcast
4 emphasize
5 exceed
6 resolve

294

- 1 continue
2 exemplify
3 foresee
4 submit
5 inform
6 prosper

Homonyms

295-304 Each of the words given has at least two distinct meanings. Write two sentences for each word illustrating its different uses. The words given may be used as verbs in any tense or form, as nouns in the singular or the plural, or as adjectives, e.g. stage:

- a At this stage, it would be better to confine the discussions to general matters. (noun)
b The local dramatic society will stage a production of Pygmalion in the autumn. (verb)

295

- 1 book
2 bear
3 bank
4 mark
5 bill
6 table
7 pore
8 blow

296

- 1 strike
2 measure
3 rifle
4 side
5 leave
6 mean
7 wing
8 hide

297

- 1 fine
2 party
3 case
4 well
5 type
6 right
7 nail
8 grave

298

- 1 leaf
2 just
3 chest
4 box
5 bark
6 sentence
7 file
8 express

299

- 1 post
2 stick
3 slight
4 saw
5 train
6 sound
7 row
8 execute

300

- 1 record
2 tear
3 state
4 grate
5 rear
6 swallow
7 lean
8 board

- 301 1 address 2 note 3 tender 4 might 5 hamper 6 rent 7 matter 8 bore
- 302 1 curious 2 mine 3 fray 4 can 5 jar 6 shed 7 utter 8 firm
- 303 1 mould 2 fair 3 dock 4 drill 5 limp 6 sole 7 yard 8 pitch
- 304 1 just 2 park 3 found 4 pen 5 brief 6 tap 7 lead 8 temper

Homophones

305-310 Each of the words below is one of a pair or group of words that have exactly the same pronunciation, but a different spelling and a different meaning. Supply one other such word in each case, and write a sentence illustrating its use, e.g.

find (/faɪnd/), fined (/faɪnd/)

The driver was fined for causing an obstruction with his car.

- 305 1 allowed 2 blue 3 berry 4 cereal 5 days 6 road 7 higher 8 key 9 nose 10 male
- 306 1 horse 2 miner 3 pier 4 principle 5 gilt 6 saw 7 through 8 way 9 wear 10 board
- 307 1 caught 2 cue 3 die 4 guest 5 least 6 morning 7 praise 8 stare 9 tax 10 whether
- 308 1 bowled 2 ceiling 3 frays 4 hole 5 heard 6 one 7 pair 8 paste 9 rain 10 sent
- 309 1 bear 2 course 3 fair 4 feet 5 hall 6 pore 7 passed 8 raise 9 sell 10 tire
- 310 1 crews 2 flower 3 idle 4 piece 5 sight 6 sweet 7 sort 8 war 9 sauce 10 steak

Related word groups

311-316 Arrange the words in four groups of six. Three groups should each contain only words that are related, and the fourth group should contain six unrelated words.

- 311 locomotive palacesleepers impudence mudguard counsel fine attempt chain court rails saddle plaintiff offer eraser buffers spokes
- 312 record-player suit chest catalogue directory amplifier dial turntable pin caller suite visitor loudspeaker bureau stylus receiver armchair slot
- 313 session account cabinet navigator draughtsman cheque truce loan debate safe parliament bankrupt decrease speaker fuselage poster stewardess kerb undercarriage hangar overdraft constituency extension runway
- 314 warehouse bough eiderdown bedstead trunk concrete sheets barge subsidiary platform dock mattress bark dog log cargo twig port sherry bolster chimney engine switch mortar
- 315 clutch windscreen tiles indicator calendar dashboard grasp drainpipe socket seed bulb boot chimney engine switch mortar
- 316 ladder eyewitnesses banisters grip funnel stairs onlookers deck boycott congregation leak port-hole ornament cabin hold spectators tunnel flight sightseers landing

Phrasal and prepositional verbs¹

[1] The terms phrasal verb and prepositional verb are employed here to denote verbs used with an adverbial or prepositional particle to form a group whose meaning is, in many cases, independent of the separate elements that constitute it.²

If you've nowhere to stay, we could easily put you up.
John obviously takes after his father.

The elements that make up phrasal and prepositional verbs can be deceptively simple: students will know the meaning of put and up, or take and after, but the two words used in combination have quite independent idiomatic meanings, give lodging to and resemble, respectively.

[2] Compare these sentences:

- 1*a* He looked / up the chimney.
b He looked up / the meaning of the word.
 2*a* He came / across the road.
b He came across / an interesting book.

In a comparison of these pairs of sentences, we can make two observations:

[2.1] In sentences a, the words up and across are both prepositions whose function is to express the relationship between a verb and a noun, and in each case, the preposition is more strongly attracted to the noun following it than to the verb before it.

[2.2] In each of the sentences b, it is clear that the particle is more strongly attracted to the verb than to the noun, and that one could make a pause only after the verb + particle group. In the case of 1a, moreover, we could form the question 'Where did he look?' (= 'up the chimney'), whereas in the case of 1b, we could not ask 'Where did he look?' (= *'up the meaning of the word'). It is also clear that the groups looked up and came across as used in sentences b have idiomatic meanings independent of their separate elements.

To look up is a phrasal verb (verb + adverbial particle), and to come across is a prepositional verb (verb + prepositional particle), and each has different characteristics with regard to word order.

¹ See also Exercises 95–97 (The Passive).

² Students will find that the meaning of phrasal verbs consisting of verbs of movement + an adverbial particle is often clear from the separate elements:

Please bring the book back when you've finished reading it.
 Surely you haven't thrown the letter away?

For this reason, such phrasal verbs have been excluded from the examples used in this introduction.

[3] Word order after *phrasal verbs*¹ shows a clearly defined pattern:

[3.1] With phrasal verbs used transitively, the position of the adverbial particle is determined by the nature of the object:

(a) If the object is a pronoun, the particle comes after it:

You can count me out. (= exclude)

The customer turned it down. (= rejected)

(b) If the object is a noun, the particle may come before or after it:

They managed to put out the fire. (= extinguish) or They managed to put the fire out.

(c) If the object is a long noun phrase, a noun with a qualifying clause, or a noun clause, the particle comes immediately after the verb, so as to avoid too great a separation of the verb and its particle:

They turned down lots of perfectly good suggestions. (= rejected)

They're bound to turn down any suggestions I make.

You should think over what I've just suggested. (= consider further)

[3.2] With intransitive phrasal verbs, the particle comes immediately after the verb:

He broke off as I came into the room. (= stopped talking)

[4] Prepositional verbs raise no such problems, the prepositional particle always coming immediately after the verb:

John obviously takes after his father. (= resembles)

The same is true of verb groups consisting of a verb + two particles (one adverbial and one prepositional), sometimes called phrasal prepositional verbs:

I refused to put up with his rudeness any longer. (= tolerate)

The plan came in for a lot of criticism. (= met)

These differences in word order after phrasal and prepositional verbs help us to distinguish the two types of semi-compound, and are the most helpful feature for a student to learn to recognize initially. Other differentiating tests, such as stress or the absence of stress on the particle, are more difficult for a student to apply.

It is with phrasal and prepositional verbs whose meanings can least easily be deduced from their separate elements that the following exercises are mainly concerned. Students can learn their meanings only by a steady process of assimilation, as with all new vocabulary, and no attempt should be made to work through the exercises systematically day after day.

¹ The adverbial particles most commonly used to form part of a phrasal verb are: up, down, in, out, on, off, away, back.

Word order after phrasal and prepositional verbs

- 317 Replace the words in italics by a suitable pronoun, making any necessary changes in word order.
- The applicant filled in the form.
The applicant filled it in. (Phrasal verb)
John takes after his father.
John takes after him. (Prepositional verb)
- 1 Companies do a great deal of research in order to find out exactly what their customers want.
 - 2 The motorist ruled out one particular route because the road had a poor surface.
 - 3 Who's looking after your house while you're away?
 - 4 Employees working in research departments are forbidden to give away confidential information.
 - 5 We might have known he would blurt out the news to everybody!
 - 6 I looked at the problem quite differently.
 - 7 His publishers will soon be bringing out his latest collection of essays.
 - 8 The Company has put forward several new proposals.
 - 9 You should put away the medicine where the children can't get at the medicine.
 - 10 The Council has decided to try out new defensive barriers along the centre of the motorway.
 - 11 Accountants seem to develop a remarkable facility for adding up a long column of figures.
 - 12 If the dog isn't kept chained up, he goes for everyone who enters the garden.
 - 13 Don't come here stirring up trouble!
 - 14 I took to your friend as soon as I met him.
- 318 Replace the pronouns in italics by the words at the end of the sentences, making any necessary changes in word order. If you think there are two possibilities, state both.
- The applicant filled it in. (the form)
The applicant filled the form in.
or The applicant filled in the form.
The applicant filled it in. (the long and complicated application form)
The applicant filled in the long and complicated application form.
- 1 The Minister brushed them aside. (all objections)
 - 2 The Minister brushed them aside. (objections made by members of the Opposition)

- 3 The Embassy refused to hand him over. (the man who sought political asylum)
- 4 It is not yet clear who will take it on. (the job)
- 5 It is not yet clear who will take it on. (the captaincy of the English touring team)
- 6 He always wraps them up in a cloud of obscurity. (his arguments)
- 7 The State should not interfere in matters where it cannot bring it about. (an improvement)
- 8 Insurance companies expect clients shortly to be putting them in after the recent floods. (some very heavy claims)
- 9 To become competitive in world markets, British manufacturers must keep them down to the absolute minimum. (their production costs)
- 10 The industrial spy handed them over. (the confidential papers he had obtained)
- 11 They are trying them out in America. (many new synthetic products)
- 12 No one brought it up. (the question)
- 13 No one brought them up. (the questions everyone most wanted to hear asked)
- 14 I read it quickly through. (the letter I had just received)

Replacing words with phrasal or prepositional verbs

319–325 Replace the words in italics, using the verbs indicated at the head of the exercises together with an adverbial or prepositional particle, and making any necessary changes in word order. (NB. In some cases, two particles are required.)

319 TURN

- 1 The manager refused his request for a day off.
- 2 I waited half an hour for my friend, but he didn't come.
- 3 It's about time we went to bed.
- 4 Would you lower the gas when the kettle boils?
- 5 His landlady evicted him for not paying his rent.
- 6 The police told the suspected thief to empty his pockets.
- 7 Crowds of people had to be refused admission to the theatre.
- 8 This popular sports car is now being produced at the rate of a thousand a week.
- 9 Our visit proved to be a waste of time because fog reduced visibility.
- 10 After being hit by a huge wave, the rowing-boat capsized.
- 11 Although the dog appeared to be friendly, it would attack anyone who tried to fondle it.

320 GET

- 1 We wondered how he was progressing in his new job.
- 2 I don't think I shall complete all this work this afternoon.
- 3 She is so upset at her husband's death that I don't think she will ever recover from the shock.
- 4 She put the book in a place where the child couldn't reach it.
- 5 As it's got to be done, we may as well have done with it.
- 6 He says that his lack of success is beginning to depress him.
- 7 You must really apply yourself to some serious work.
- 8 I see no way of avoiding the problem.
- 9 Their business partnership flourished despite the fact that they didn't agree well personally.
- 10 It must be nearly ten o'clock!

321 TAKE

- 1 The teacher said I ought to start learning French.
- 2 He resembles his father in many ways.
- 3 The son assumed control of the business on the retirement of his father.
- 4 The man looked so respectable and honest that I was completely deceived.
- 5 He undertook so much work that he couldn't really do it efficiently.
- 6 The secretary wrote the letter in shorthand as the manager dictated it to her.
- 7 When he discovered the truth, he retracted all he had previously said.
- 8 That teacher has a way with children: they seem to like her immediately.
- 9 I don't wish to occupy too much of your time.
- 10 The shopkeeper agreed to deduct five per cent from the bill.

322 PUT

- 1 I had to postpone my visit because of the weather.
- 2 He refused to tolerate laziness on the part of his pupils.
- 3 They were very annoyed when they learned that the train had been cancelled without notice.
- 4 The rebellion was suppressed by the army.
- 5 He had managed to save quite a lot of money over the years.
- 6 He advanced the theory that those who had money always made money.
- 7 His aggressiveness was attributed to the fact that he had had an overbearing father.
- 8 How many hours do you have to work each week?
- 9 Don't let the fact that I didn't enjoy the play deter you from seeing it.

- 10 The workers have made a claim for higher wages.
- 11 When the teacher asked who had broken the window, all the boys assumed an air of innocence.
- 12 If I visit you at the week-end, will you be able to give me lodging for one night?

323 STAND

- 1 What does this abbreviation mean?
- 2 The strikers are maintaining their demand for higher wages and shorter working hours.
- 3 I must make it clear that I refuse to tolerate such behaviour.
- 4 He hoped that when the time came I would keep my promise.
- 5 One man particularly was conspicuous at the meeting.
- 6 When he realized that his nomination would mean competing with his closest friend, he decided to withdraw.
- 7 Troops were ordered to be in a state of readiness for action.
- 8 The understudy had to take the part of the leading actor, who had fallen ill.
- 9 The employers in this case were obliged to take no part in the dispute, which was purely the result of inter-union rivalry.
- 10 The machine soon went wrong: it was never intended to withstand the rough treatment it was given.

324 COME

- 1 While looking through the books he found an old and valuable map.
- 2 Although he was unconscious when we found him, he soon recovered consciousness.
- 3 When his father died he received a lot of money under his father's will.
- 4 We never discovered how the accident occurred.
- 5 Although it seemed a good idea in theory, in practice it didn't succeed.
- 6 His new book will be published next week.
- 7 The whole truth became known at the trial.
- 8 The film didn't equal our expectations.
- 9 No one thought that any good could result from discussing the question further.
- 10 The problem of finance is always raised on such occasions.

325 GIVE

- 1 He resigned from a secure job in order to devote himself to full-time writing.
- 2 Because of difficulties in getting a visa, we had to relinquish the idea of visiting Albania.

- 3 Although he agreed with me on most points, there was one on which he was unwilling to yield.
- 4 He returned the money to the man who had lost it.
- 5 The bad cheese emitted a very unpleasant smell.
- 6 The men crossing the Sahara found to their horror that their supplies would come to an end before they reached safety.
- 7 The English like coal fires even though these don't always produce much heat.
- 8 Every time cigarettes go up in price, many people try to stop smoking.
- 9 The escaped prisoner had tried to disguise his appearance, but a scar on his cheek betrayed him.
- 10 The back entrance of the hotel led straight to a parking area.

Replacing phrasal or prepositional verbs with synonymous verbs

326–327 Replace the words in italics by a verb in the appropriate tense.

326

- 1 After winning the 800 metres, the world champion went on to win the 1500-metre event against strong opposition.
- 2 Your speech went down very well at last night's dinner. (passive)
- 3 Do you ever go in for any of the newspaper competitions?
- 4 Despite the noise, he went on working as if nothing were happening.
- 5 We haven't got time to go into that question now.
- 6 As it's most important that nothing should go wrong, let's go over the details of the plan again.
- 7 The index of industrial production went up by 4 per cent last month.
- 8 Many new buildings have gone up in the city centre during the last year. (passive)
- 9 I think you are most ungrateful, considering all the trouble I went to.
- 10 The fuse had been inserted wrongly, and the bomb failed to go off.
- 11 I think we should go back before it gets dark.
- 12 He simply went off without saying a word of apology.

327

- 1 Please look me up if ever you come to London.
- 2 We went to look over the house, but it wasn't suitable.
- 3 The police decided that they must look further into the matter.
- 4 A leader must be one whom the people can look up to.
- 5 He looks down on people with less knowledge than himself.
- 6 The teacher looked on the student's absence as a serious matter.

- 7 I should be grateful if you would look in at the library to see if a book has arrived for me.
- 8 Please look through the agreement before you sign it.
- 9 He looked for a reward when he returned the valuable ring to its owner.
- 10 Although it had been a bad year, the chairman thought that business was now looking up.

Opposites

328 Complete the sentences with a phrasal verb opposite in meaning to those in italics, e.g.

When they had finished playing, the children were made to all the toys they had taken out.

When they had finished playing, the children were made to put away (or back) all the toys they had taken out.

- 1 Go away, and don't till you're in a better frame of mind!
- 2 It's getting rather late. Perhaps we should go back rather than
- 3 No one likes the buildings they're putting up in place of the ones that were
- 4 If you want to help with the cooking, you'd better your jacket and put on this apron.
- 5 This picture keeps falling down. How can I make it?
- 6 Let's go out somewhere. I'm tired of every evening.
- 7 Prices always seem to be It's about time they started coming down.
- 8 Having picked up several articles as if he intended to buy them, the customer them all again.
- 9 The plane took off from London at 09.00 and in Geneva at 10.30.
- 10 The racing cars at the corners and speeded up along the straights.

329 Instructions as for 328

- 1 My suitcase wasn't big enough. I put in everything I could, but I had to several things I would have liked to take.
- 2 It's nearly midnight. You can stay up if you like, but I'm
- 3 That's the wrong map. Fold it up and the other one.
- 4 The children who had finished their work were let out on time, but the others were for another twenty minutes.
- 5 Who's taken down the notice I?
- 6 This page is loose. Whoever took it out ought to have it back

- 7 The firm took on a lot of extra staff before Christmas, but . . . them . . . in January when business was slack.
- 8 The phone has gone dead. I told the man to hold on while I fetched you, but he must have
- 9 He was obviously hoping they would take up his suggestion, but for some reason they . . . it
- 10 He looks up to people with money and everyone else.

Situations

330–332 Answer the questions with complete sentences, using the verbs indicated together with an adverbial or a prepositional particle.

330

- 1 What must you do if you find you are living beyond your means? (cut)
- 2 How do we express the fact that someone learns things quickly? (pick)
- 3 What would be done if it were found that a search was proving useless? (call)
- 4 What would two men do before entering into a partnership? (draw)
- 5 What would you say if you couldn't get rid of a cold? (shake)
- 6 What might a parent ask a child who had a guilty look on his face? (be)
- 7 How would you ask someone to confirm the truth of what you had said? (bear)
- 8 What are we expected to do when a friend shows a group photograph in which he appears? (pick)
- 9 How do we express the fact that there isn't enough for everyone? (go)
- 10 How would you describe a plan that had been carefully considered in every detail? (think)
- 11 What must a motorist do if the traffic lights show red? (pull)
- 12 What might you promise to do if someone made you an unusual proposal? (think) (Do not use 'about'.)
- 13 Before you bought a second-hand car, what would you want to do? (try)
- 14 How do we express the fact that a mine has been exhausted of its deposit? (work)

331

- 1 What might a crowd have to do if fire hoses were turned on it? (fall)
- 2 What would we say of a friend who had failed us in some way? (let)
- 3 How do we express the fact that a school term has ended? (break)
- 4 What do we say if we cannot read or understand what someone has written? (make)
- 5 When do you use a dictionary? (look) (Do not use 'for'.)
- 6 What does one do in order not to be late for an appointment? (set)
- 7 What would most parents like to think of their children? (bring)
- 8 What may happen when friends disagree and quarrel? (fall)
- 9 What do we fear may happen if a few people leave a party early? (break)
- 10 What might a magistrate agree to do with a first offender? (let)
- 11 What might happen to a plan if a majority of people withdrew their support? (fall)
- 12 How do we express the fact that one thing enhances the appearance of another? (set)

332

- 1 If a new way of doing things proves impracticable, what must you do? (fall)
- 2 If a student made a mistake, what would he expect the teacher to do? (point)
- 3 What might you say if someone were taking a very long time to reach a decision? (make)
- 4 How do we express the fact that bad weather seems likely to continue for some time? (set)
- 5 What would annoy you if you were going somewhere in a hurry by car? (break)
- 6 If a hunted man saw a policeman following him, what would he do? (make)
- 7 If someone fainted what would you try to do? (bring)
- 8 How would you describe a decrease in the circulation of a newspaper? (fall)
- 9 If the Government wished to investigate a matter of national importance what could it do? (set)
- 10 What would you do if you were criticizing someone in his absence and he suddenly entered the room? (break)
- 11 What do we say if there is a possibility that cannot be excluded? (rule)
- 12 What must we do if we have been delayed and wish nevertheless not to be late? (make)

Compound words derived from phrasal verbs

Besides being able to create phrasal verbs by adding different particles to commonly-used verbs (take over, take in, etc.), we can often also use in other combinations the elements of the phrasal verbs themselves (take over—overtake).

There are two different ways in which these elements may be combined.

The verb and particle may be placed in reverse order to form a compound verb or noun: take over—overtake (verb), put out—output (noun):

The Kenyan runner soon overtook the other competitors

Output at the factory has now risen considerably or the verb and particle may simply be joined, sometimes with a hyphen, to form a compound noun: break down—breakdown, make up—make-up:

Our car had a breakdown

His girl friend uses a lot of make-up.

In some cases, both types of compound may be made from the same phrasal verb: take over—overtake—take-over.

As in words with variable stress¹, the grammatical function of the compounds formed in this way is reflected in the stress pattern of the syllables or elements. If the compound is a verb, the main stress falls on the second element: overtake (əʊvə'teɪk); and if it is a noun, the stress falls on the first element: take-over ('teɪkəʊvə):

Couldn't we overtake that car in front?

The Company has changed considerably since the take-over.

Compounds formed from phrasal verbs are not necessarily related in meaning to the original verb:

The new manager took over last week. (= assumed control)

The Kenyan runner soon overtook the other competitors. (= caught up with and passed)

In some cases, two different compounds may be formed, corresponding to two different meanings of the original verb:

War broke out in 1914. (verb = began)

He was born at the outbreak of the war. (noun = beginning)

Three criminals broke out of the prison. (verb = escaped)

There was a break-out at the prison. (noun = escape of prisoners)

English people make full use of this facility for forming new compounds, and the following exercises can give practice in only a small selection of those in current use.

¹ See Exercises 263–268.

Compound nouns related to phrasal verbs

333 Complete the sentences with one of the compound nouns from the list at the beginning, using plural forms where necessary. Use each word once only.

break-out	lay-off	outbreak	set-back bypass	look-over	outry	upkeep intake	offshoot	outlook	uptake

- 1 British hopes of a gold medal in the Olympic Games suffered a sharp . . . yesterday, when Smith failed to qualify during the preliminary heats.
- 2 Owing to changes in the birth-rate, primary schools have had a smaller . . . of new pupils this year.
- 3 The British company is a(n) . . . of a much larger American concern.
- 4 There was a public . . . when the Post Office proposed higher charges for postal services.
- 5 Many men have already been made idle by the stoppage, and further . . . will be inevitable unless agreement is reached soon.
- 6 Stately homes in Britain need massive sums of money for their . . .
- 7 There was a sudden . . . of violence among students, following a period of relative calm.
- 8 Only one prisoner remains at large, following yesterday's . . . by six men from Dartmoor prison.
- 9 You can avoid going through the town centre by taking the . . .
- 10 We had time to give the property only a quick . . .
- 11 Some people have a very curious . . . on life.
- 12 I dropped several broad hints, but he seemed to be very slow on the . . .

334 Complete the sentences with a noun formed by a suitable combination of the words in brackets, using plural forms where necessary, e.g.

Many observers are pessimistic about the possibility of a successful . . . to the present round of talks. (come out)
Answer: outcome

- 1 The lower level of industrial activity is likely to lead to a considerable . . . in capital investment. (cut back)
- 2 As the . . . of answers to the questionnaire shows, there was rarely a full response to every question. (break down)
- 3 After a(n) . . . of over £10m. on new machinery during the last year, the factory is now among the most modern in Europe. At the same time, the . . . of the assembly lines has been radically changed. (lay out)

- 4 If the two companies merge, we can expect a great . . . in the electrical industry as a whole. (shake up)
- 5 Since last March, there has been an encouraging . . . in the volume of our exports. (turn up)
- 6 There has been a great . . . in industrial activity since the beginning of the year. (surge up)
- 7 Over-ambitiousness finally brought about his . . . (fall down)
- 8 Our company's . . . of this chain of stores will increase the number of our retail . . . to 250. (take over, let out)
- 9 The discovery of this latest drug marks a . . . in the treatment of the common cold. (break through)
- 10 Britain made the . . . to decimal coinage in 1971. (change over)
- 11 The company's . . . increased by twenty five per cent last year. (turn over)
- 12 After being out of favour with investors for several years, the shares are now staging a . . . (come back)

335 Complete the sentences with a noun formed by a suitable combination of the verbs in brackets with one of the following particles: back, by, down, off, out, up. Use plural forms if necessary, e.g.

There has been a marked increase in industrial . . . during the past nine months. (put)

Answer: output

- 1 There is likely to be a . . . between the guerillas and the elected government in the near future. (show)
- 2 We always keep a spare gallon of petrol in the car as a . . . (stand)
- 3 One of the cars involved in the accident was a complete . . . (write)
- 4 Despite its many . . . , the plan has much to commend it. (draw)
- 5 . . . for the next space shuttle is 06.00 tomorrow, and . . . will be at 15.30 on Friday. (blast, touch)
- 6 Two men thought to have been involved in the armed . . . of the bank are now helping the police with their inquiries. (hold)
- 7 Managerial staff made redundant by mergers often feel it is quite a . . . when they have to take a job at half their previous salary. (come)
- 8 There was yet another . . . yesterday at the factory over the question of tea-breaks. (walk)
- 9 The police will be keeping a sharp . . . for drug-pushers at the pop festival. (look)
- 10 No one can yet predict what the . . . of the talks is likely to be. (come)
- 11 It's difficult to understand the exact nature of the . . . between the two firms. (tie)
- 12 The speaker's outrageous remarks were met by a(n) . . . of anger among the audience. (burst)

Irregular plurals

336 Rewrite the sentences, making the words in brackets plural.

- 1 The book recounts the (crisis) of the post-war period.
- 2 The ships were unloading their (cargo) on to the (wharf).
- 3 Many people think that (parent-in-law) are potentially a nuisance.
- 4 Poisonous (gas) were being discharged from the exhaust pipes of the (bus).
- 5 He arranged that his books should contain detailed (index).
- 6 The eyes are sometimes (index) of character.
- 7 Shakespearean (hero) are generally the victims of circumstance.
- 8 (A mouse) can sometimes take the cheese without being caught in the (mousetrap).
- 9 Highly-coloured (fungus) were growing near the base of the tree.
- 10 He wished to place certain (memorandum) before the committee.
- 11 He agreed that these were strange (phenomenon).
- 12 We cannot proceed on such unlikely (hypothesis).
- 13 Servicemen found guilty of desertion of duty are tried by (court martial).
- 14 The new (syllabus) will be drawn up according to different (criterion).
- 15 Television and newspapers are the mass (medium) of advertising.
- 16 The (thief) broke into the shop without attracting the attention of (passer-by).
- 17 Piano (solo) will be played by John Smith.
- 18 The police called for (eyewitness) to come forward and give evidence.
- 19 The accused men had carefully prepared what appeared to be good (alibi).
- 20 University faculties expect to receive completed (thesis) by the beginning of June.

Idioms and proverbs

337-338 Each of the sentences contains one or more idioms (in italics). These common idioms are found particularly in newspapers, and they can easily pass unobserved or be misunderstood. Explain their meaning or use in the following contexts.

337

- 1 The programme of reconstruction in the city centre is now well under way.
- 2 The pilot said that with one engine of the plane out of action, it had been touch and go over the Channel.

- 3 With the breakdown of the latest round of talks, a strike must now obviously be on the cards.
- 4 It is generally assumed, however, that urgent discussions will continue behind the scenes to bring the two sides together.
- 5 The Bolshoi Ballet Company has taken London by storm.
- 6 The Inspectors' report pulls no punches in its comments on the standard of reading and writing among school leavers.
- 7 Whether or not to abolish corporal punishment in schools is still a bone of contention in educational circles.
- 8 British cars have pride of place at this year's International Motor Show.
- 9 The chairman said that the Company was now in much better shape to face the future, but that they were not yet out of the wood. They were still having teething troubles with some of their latest range of products.
- 10 The Opposition cannot afford to sit on the fence in such an important matter.
- 11 The result in the current world chess championships appears to be a foregone conclusion.
- 12 Furniture manufacturers are now feeling the pinch of the latest credit restrictions.
- 13 If he had played his cards right he would be a manager by now.
- 14 The odds are that taxes on beer and cigarettes will be increased once again next April.

338

- 1 Until his latest novel brought him international acclaim, he had been living from hand to mouth in obscurity.
- 2 Desirable as this plan is, many of its provisions will have to be watered down before it is generally acceptable.
- 3 Many people feel strongly that to legalize the use of cannabis would be the thin end of the wedge.
- 4 Unit Trusts have enabled the small investor to have a stake in industry.
- 5 Several companies have now withdrawn from the American market, having got their fingers burnt.
- 6 It would be foolish for the West to reject the latest peace proposals out of hand.
- 7 The Foreign Minister was rapped severely over the knuckles for taking what appeared to be an independent line.
- 8 Three British policemen recently went to the United States to exchange duties with their opposite numbers in Chicago.
- 9 It is believed that Civil Servants will be given short shrift by the Government when they submit their latest pay claim.
- 10 Reading between the lines, I get the impression that he's not very happy in his new job. Not that he has anyone to blame but himself—he went into it with his eyes open.

- 11 After his title fight last week, the champion has now decided to call it a day.
- 12 There is reason to think that if the employers were to make the first move, the unions would be prepared to meet them half way.
- 13 The Minister's resignation comes as no surprise. It is common knowledge that he was often frustrated at having to toe the line with his Cabinet colleagues.
- 14 The city is again talking of building a new opera house, but any plan seems unlikely to get off the ground, at least for several years.

339 Paraphrase the sentences.

- 1 'This plan falls between two stools.'
- 2 'He's just making a virtue of necessity.'
- 3 'Everything was at sixes and sevens.'
- 4 'She can't make ends meet.'
- 5 'I take everything he says with a pinch of salt.'
- 6 'He's a square peg in a round hole.'
- 7 'They are hand in glove with one another.'
- 8 'He hasn't a leg to stand on.'
- 9 'They beat us to it.'
- 10 'You've hit the nail on the head.'
- 11 'You should take the bull by the horns.'
- 12 'We're all in the same boat.'
- 13 'Even if he doesn't get this job, he has other irons in the fire.'
- 14 'I called his bluff.'
- 15 'Let's put all our cards on the table.'

340 Outline the situations in which the proverbs might serve as comments.

- 1 'Once bitten, twice shy.'
- 2 'One swallow doesn't make a summer.'
- 3 'Actions speak louder than words.'
- 4 'One good turn deserves another.'
- 5 'Don't count your chickens before they're hatched.'
- 6 'It never rains but it pours.'
- 7 'Make hay while the sun shines.'
- 8 'A stitch in time saves nine.'
- 9 'Necessity is the mother of invention.'
- 10 'Never look a gift horse in the mouth.'
- 11 'Blood is thicker than water.'
- 12 'Prevention is better than cure.'
- 13 'Nothing venture, nothing gain.'
- 14 'Rome wasn't built in a day.'
- 15 'A bird in the hand ...'

Colloquial phrases and responses

The following represent a small selection of phrases and responses frequently heard in conversations. Students will not be thoroughly at home with the language unless they can both understand and use these colloquialisms, and it is more important to know how to use them than to be able to explain their meanings.

Situations

341–342 Write short dialogues of two or three lines, incorporating these phrases and responses, e.g. 'Never mind!':

'I'm sorry; I forgot to post your letter.'

'Never mind! I'll post it myself when I go out.'

341

- 1 'Not on your life!'
- 2 'It's no joke!'
- 3 'Right you are!'
- 4 'Please yourself.'
- 5 'Well, I never!'
- 6 'I don't get it.'
- 7 'It can't be helped.'
- 8 'I like that!' (ironic)

- 9 'Not at all!'
- 10 'Honestly?'
- 11 'Here you are!'
- 12 'Well, really!'
- 13 'It's hardly worth it.'
- 14 'Yes, thanks to you!' (ironic)
- 15 'Perhaps it's just as well.'

342

- 1 'I could do with one!'
- 2 'Let me see . . .'
- 3 'Nothing doing.'
- 4 'Have it your own way!'
- 5 'What's up?'
- 6 'Just my luck!'
- 7 'Very well!'
- 8 'I beg your pardon!'

- 9 'I beg your pardon?'
- 10 'I'll see to it.'
- 11 'What are you getting at?'
- 12 'I'd rather not.'
- 13 'Yes, you'd better.'
- 14 'I couldn't do without one.'
- 15 'Help yourself.'

Newspaper headlines

343–344 Explain in complete sentences what each of the headlines is about. Do not give any information not suggested by the headline.

343

- 1 FORTNIGHT'S HOLIDAY ON A SHOESTRING
- 2 BY-PASS CRASH: MOTORIST CHARGED
- 3 POUND AT LOWEST EBB
- 4 VICE SQUAD SWOOP. TWO MEN HELD
- 5 BUILDING SOCIETIES WOO INVESTORS
- 6 GOYA FOR THE NATION
- 7 BIGGER GRANTS FOR REFERTORIES
- 8 BUDGET LEAK. COMMONS ROW
- 9 MANCHESTER BLACKOUT IN POWER CUT
- 10 CITY SCANDAL. FRAUD SQUAD CALLED IN
- 11 PM'S PLANE—RISK WAS NEGLIGIBLE
- 12 CREDIT RESTRICTIONS HIT INDUSTRY. 300 MEN LAID OFF

344

- 1 FOOTBALL FIXTURES HIT—PITCHES FROZEN
- 2 POSTMISTRESS FOILS ARMED ATTACKER
- 3 GOLD RESERVES REACH NEW PEAK
- 4 COLD SPELL WILL CONTINUE. ROADS TREACHEROUS SAYS AA
- 5 CHRISTMAS ROAD TOLL WORST EVER
- 6 RECENT POLL GIVES TORIES LEAD
- 7 BOOM IN EXPORTS. SUCCESS OF RECENT DRIVE
- 8 ELECTRIC KETTLE FAULT WARNING
- 9 SMUGGLING CHARGES: TWO MEN CLEARED
- 10 MINERS BAN OVERTIME
- 11 NEW FLYOVER SPEEDS TRAFFIC FLOW
- 12 MURDER RIDDLE STILL UNSOLVED—CID BAFFLED

General knowledge

The material in these exercises includes a variety of terms, phrases, and words of practical use to a student having to cope with everyday life in England, and, more generally, to any student who reads newspapers or listens to the radio. For students in England, the exercises may be used as a test of the degree of their awareness of what is going on around them, while for students abroad, the exercises may be used to prompt something more than an academic interest in the language. In the latter case, students should be asked to do some private research before any particular exercise is used in class, if it is thought that the material will be unfamiliar to them.

345–353 Say what the following are, or explain what they mean.

- 345 the electorate
 a constituency to stand for Parliament polling day
 a three-cornered contest
 a marginal seat
 a by-election the Speaker
 the Opposition
 the Shadow Cabinet
- a session
 to divide the House to dissolve Parliament a Tory a life peer the Budget
 a private member's bill
 a civil servant
 a town council to lobby an MP
- 346 a Premium Bond credit terms an overdraft
 a current account
 a crossed cheque
 Value Added Tax
 a subsidy income tax
- a demarcation dispute picketing arbitration piece-work shift-work
 a co-operative society
 'working to rule'
- a traffic warden
 'Diversion'
 a motorway
 a parking meter
 'Dual Carriageway' a 'T' junction
 a zebra crossing a season ticket
 a day-return
- 347 a Job Centre
 a Trade Union
 a shop steward
 white-collar workers an unofficial strike
 a 'scab' overtime
- a flyover lighting-up time a roundabout
 a by-pass a layby a ring road a tailback a bottleneck
 a toll

- 349 Scotland Yard to release on bail to remand in custody jurors
 the plaintiff
 a Probation Officer
- penal reform
 an open prison to do 'time'
 a by-law
 to gain remission
 a shop-lifter
- 350 press comment
 an editorial
 a newsgang
 a mass-circulation daily a 'small ad.' a hoarding
- a scoop
 a poster paperbacks a book token a blurb
 a book review
- 351 Royal Shakespeare Theatre
 the dress circle
 the box office
 the orchestra pit
 the footlights
 a dress rehearsal an usherette a Promenade concert
 a continuous performance
- viewers
 'on the air'
 Radio Three
 studio performance an understudy
Radio Times
The Listener credits to play the lead
- 352 the Cup Final a test match the Pools a stake a bookmaker
 a betting shop
- a raffle
 a teetotaler
 the 'local'
 a deck-chair
 a public convenience
- 353 the Union Jack
 the Royal Mint
 Big Ben
 the National Trust
 the British Council
 Kew Gardens
 a building society
- a public school
 a comprehensive school an approved school
 'Old Boys'
 a blazer a youth hostel an estate agent

Abbreviations

354–355 Say what the following abbreviations stand for and, where necessary, explain what they are:

354

OHMS PS
YMCA IOU
RSPCA IBA
GMT BBC
EEC TUC
w.e.f. PTO
c/o CID
L. MA
e.g. f.o.b.

355

VHF s.a.e.
RSVP GP
No. VIP
NHS c.v.
FRS Cantab.
AA GCE
Lab. B.Sc.
c.i.f. C.
fig. i.e.

356

Give abbreviations for the following:

Value Added Tax et cetera public limited company Great Britain do-it-yourself approximately per annum Doctor extension secretary

Section four

Composition work

Preliminary composition work

- 357 Write one descriptive or explanatory paragraph (75–100 words) for each of the following, using each sentence as the first sentence of your paragraph, and taking care to ensure that in each paragraph your use of tenses is consistent.
- 1 Yesterday, I met an old man.
 - 2 A Customs official has to be a good judge of character.
 - 3 I had found life difficult during the first week of my stay in a foreign country.
 - 4 The wedding reception is to be on a grand scale.
 - 5 The day of the examination had come; he not only knew it, but felt it.
 - 6 A week from now, I shall be on holiday on the Mediterranean coast.
 - 7 Although the car cost more than they could really afford, they felt they simply had to buy it.
 - 8 What a lot of patience nurses must have!
- 358 Write one descriptive or explanatory paragraph (75–100 words) for each of the following, using each sentence as the last sentence of your paragraph, and taking care to ensure that in each paragraph your use of tenses is consistent.
- 1 I left the manager's office, relieved that the interview was over.
 - 2 For this reason at least, it seems unlikely that ships will ever be completely superseded by aircraft as a means of passenger transport.
 - 3 He began to wish he had never come to the party.
 - 4 I decided that this should be my excuse for not turning up, but would anyone believe me?
 - 5 There is only one doubt in my mind: when I do reach retiring age, shall I still feel like doing any of these things?
 - 6 Only then did he begin to wish that he had worked harder at school.
- 359 Write two or three paragraphs (100–150 words) on the following subjects:
- 1 The ideal kitchen.
 - 2 Men's fashions.
 - 3 Living on one's own.

- 4 Keeping pets.
- 5 Window-shopping.
- 6 How to break the ice (socially).
- 7 What annoys me most about the opposite sex.
- 8 How to make a good impression at an interview.
- 9 Buying presents.
- 10 Modern furniture.

Arguments 'for' and 'against'

360 These exercises may be used as an introduction to both composition and discussion work. Students are asked to write down two arguments against and two arguments in favour of each proposition. A class will, between them, probably produce four or five arguments for and against. These arguments may then be discussed, and students should write a short essay (150–200 words), using any notes they may have taken during the discussion.

- 1 A boarding-school education.
- 2 Supermarkets.
- 3 Working mothers.
- 4 Censorship.
- 5 School uniforms.
- 6 Having the vote at the age of eighteen.
- 7 Pocket-money for children.
- 8 Package holidays.
- 9 Beards.
- 10 Marrying young.
- 11 Living in a foreign country.
- 12 Divorce.
- 13 Using animals for medical research.
- 14 Travelling by car.
- 15 Being an only child.
- 16 Compulsory school sports.
- 17 Living alone.
- 18 Travelling by air.
- 19 Having older/younger brothers/sisters.
- 20 Living in the country.

Students should develop the technique they have used in this exercise when preparing their compositions on the subjects given on the following pages.

Composition subjects (250–300 words)

361

- 1 When are parents most useful and when are they most annoying?
- 2 'It may come in useful some time.' What sort of things do you keep on this pretext, and where do you keep them?
- 3 My favourite month.
- 4 A dialogue between a landlady and a tenant, one of them complaining to the other.
- 5 The country I would choose to live in other than my own.
- 6 The world as it will be a hundred years from now.
- 7 What qualities I expect to find in a teacher.
- 8 'How glad we were to be back!' Using this as the last sentence of your essay, describe what events came before.
- 9 Books, television, radio—if you had to do without one of these, which would you rather give up?
- 10 Write a newspaper review of any film or play you have seen recently.
- 11 A dialogue between a traffic warden and a driver who has just received a parking ticket.
- 12 My first week in England (or another foreign country).
- 13 A day in the life of a telephone operator or a bus driver.
- 14 My greatest disappointment in life.
- 15 Visiting relatives.
- 16 Everyone lives by selling something.
- 17 The most significant events in my life.
- 18 The week-end.
- 19 A day in the life of an unemployed person.
- 20 Neighbours.
- 21 What I like about winter.
- 22 Public transport.
- 23 An incident in a restaurant.
- 24 My bad habits.
- 25 A dialogue between a hairdresser and a client whose hair has accidentally been dyed the wrong colour.
- 26 My first day at school as a child, and my last day at school before going out to work.
- 27 Grandparents.
- 28 If I were Prime Minister . . .
- 29 The ideal house.
- 30 Being in love.

Composition subjects (350–500 words)

362

- 1 'Spare the rod and spoil the child.'
- 2 National characteristics.
- 3 The telephone.
- 4 The use of machines and drugs to prolong life.
- 5 A politically united Europe.
- 6 The mistakes I shall try not to make if or when I become a parent.
- 7 England's scenery.
- 8 All men are not born equal.
- 9 The influence of television on our lives.
- 10 The best form of government.
- 11 Modern scientific discoveries—curse or blessing?
- 12 What makes for an ideal holiday?
- 13 The roles of interviewer and interviewee.
- 14 The purpose of prisons.
- 15 The career you would choose, and why.
- 16 Superstitions.
- 17 The effect of labour-saving devices on the modern housewife.
- 18 Everyone is a snob at heart.
- 19 The English Channel.
- 20 Money isn't everything.
- 21 Trade Unions.
- 22 Everything is becoming bigger and better.
- 23 A terrifying nightmare.
- 24 Hypocrisy is a social virtue.
- 25 The morals of advertising.
- 26 Nature or Nurture—which has the more influence on the formation of character?
- 27 Violence in modern society—causes and cures.
- 28 Prejudices.
- 29 Old age as a social problem.
- 30 What are the deadly sins of our age?

Subjects for letters (90–120 words)

363

- 1 You have found a flat in London. Write to a friend, describing the flat and inviting him (or her) to share it with you.
- 2 Write to the Principal of a school, asking for details of a course you would like to attend.
- 3 Write to your parents giving your first impressions of England.
- 4 Write a letter to your local Council, complaining about a parking meter that has been placed outside your house.
- 5 Write a letter of thanks to a relative for a Christmas present that you didn't want and didn't like.
- 6 Write a letter of application to an English company for a post as secretary.
- 7 Write to the editor of a newspaper, pointing out some errors of fact that appeared in an article on foreigners in England.
- 8 Write a letter to your bank to arrange credit facilities in London during your stay in England.
- 9 Write to a friend, inviting him (or her) to spend a holiday with you in some part of Britain outside London. Explain your plans and say why you think the holiday will be interesting and enjoyable.
- 10 Write a letter to a hotel at which you wish to stay for a holiday, asking for information.
- 11 You have left your handbag (or wallet) on a train. Write to the Lost Property Department reporting your loss, and describe the handbag (or wallet) and its contents.
- 12 Write a letter of congratulation to a friend on the birth of her first child.
- 13 Write to an estate agent, asking for details of properties that are for sale. State your requirements clearly.
- 14 Write to a tourist agency, complaining about an unsatisfactory coach tour.
- 15 Write a letter to your host at a party, apologizing for having been rude to him and for having made an embarrassing scene.
- 16 Write to a prospective employer, asking for the time of an interview to be changed.
- 17 Write to the manager of a restaurant to arrange the catering for a dinner and party for fifty guests.
- 18 Reply to the invitation in Letter 9 above, saying that you would prefer to visit another part of the country.
- 19 Write to the headmaster of your former school, asking him to write you a testimonial.
- 20 Write to an interior decorator, asking him to prepare an estimate for redecorating your house, and giving him all the necessary details.

Appendix

Notes on clauses

1 Introductory

[1.1] Compare these sentences:

1a We bought a large house.

1b We bought a house that would be large enough for conversion into flats.

The group of words in italics in 1b has the same function as large in 1a. It is doing the work of an adjective, qualifying the noun house.

2a Your speech gave everyone great pleasure.

2b What you said gave everyone great pleasure.

The group of words in italics in 2b has the same function as your speech in 2a. It is doing the work of a noun, as subject of the verb gave.

3a I shall see you tomorrow.

3b I shall see you when I return from my holiday.

The group of words in italics in 3b has the same function as tomorrow in 3a. It is doing the work of an adverb, modifying the verb see.

From these three pairs of sentences, we can see that the work of an adjective, a noun, or an adverb may be done either by a single word or by a group of words.

[1.2] Look at these groups of words from sentences b above:

that would be large enough for conversion into flats

what you said

when I return from my holiday

Each group contains a finite verb (a verb that has number, person, and tense). A group of words containing a finite verb is called a finite clause, and the groups of words in italics in 1b, 2b, and 3b above are finite clauses; respectively, an adjectival clause, a noun clause, and an adverbial clause.

All these clauses in italics have an auxiliary function in relation to the remainder of each sentence, and they are called subordinate (or dependent) clauses. The remainder of each sentence (which also contains a finite verb) is called the main (or principal) clause.

[1.3] The following parts of the verb are non-finite, and the clauses in which they operate are called non-finite clauses:

Infinitive

I have something to tell you. (non-finite adjectival clause, qualifying something in the main clause)

To give up at this stage would be a great pity. (non-finite noun clause, subject of would be in the main clause)

To speed up the delivery of letters, the Post Office introduced automatic sorting. (non-finite adverbial clause of purpose, modifying introduced in the main clause)

Gerund

Closing the factory would mean unemployment for many of the town's work force. (non-finite noun clause, subject of would mean in the main clause)

Present (or 'active') participle

The thieves took two mail-bags containing registered letters. (non-finite adjectival clause, qualifying mail-bags in the main clause)

He was taken ill while travelling by air from New York to London.

(non-finite adverbial clause of time, modifying was taken in the main clause)

Past (or 'passive') participle

I couldn't understand the instructions given in the manual. (non-finite adjectival clause, qualifying instructions in the main clause)

Given time, he'll make a first-class tennis player. (non-finite adverbial clause of condition, modifying 'll make in the main clause)

Perfect participle

Having received their final medical check, the astronauts boarded their spacecraft. (non-finite adverbial clause of time, modifying boarded in the main clause)

[1.4] If a sentence contains two or more main clauses, these clauses are called co-ordinate (of equal rank, analytically speaking):

The station-master waved his green flag and the train started moving.

This sentence may be divided into two clauses, each of equal rank:

A The station-master waved his green flag (Main clause, co-ordinate with B)

B (and) the train started moving (Main clause, co-ordinate with A)

If a sentence contains subordinate clauses, we can determine the function of these in relation to the main clause or to another subordinate clause by asking:

Does it qualify a noun in the main clause or in another subordinate clause? (Is it an adjectival clause?)

Does it provide the main clause or another subordinate clause with a subject, object, or complement? (Is it a noun clause?)

Does it modify the verb in the main clause or in another subordinate clause? (Is it an adverbial clause?)

2 Adjectival clauses¹

[2.1] The picture that hangs over the fireplace is a family heirloom.

Analysis A The picture is a family heirloom (main) a1 that hangs over the fireplace (Subordinate) clause a1 qualifies the noun picture in clause A, and is therefore an Adjectival clause.

In some defining relative clauses, the relative pronoun is not expressed:

The shoes you're wearing are identical to the pair I bought yesterday.

Analysis

A The shoes are identical to the pair (Main) a1 you're wearing (Subordinate Adjectival clause qualifying shoes in A) a2 I bought yesterday (Subordinate Adjectival clause qualifying pair in A)

[2.2] Examples of non-finite adjectival clauses:

The thieves took two mail-bags containing registered letters.

(Compare: 'that contained registered letters')

I couldn't understand the instructions given in the manual.

(Compare: 'that were given in the manual')

There are many factors to be taken into consideration.

(Compare: 'that must be taken into consideration')

Note: the term 'non-finite' should not be confused with the terms 'defining' and 'non-defining', employed in the section on relative clauses (pages 116–35). The term 'non-finite' relates to the type of verb structure employed, and can be applied to any type of clause (adjectival, noun, or adverbial) that employs a non-finite verb form (see examples on page 264).

The terms defining and non-defining are used for two types of relative clause, and both defining and non-defining relative clauses can be finite or non-finite in structure:

The picture that hangs over the fireplace is a family heirloom. (Adjectival clause—defining relative clause—finite in structure)

The picture hanging over the fireplace is a family heirloom. (Adjectival clause—equivalent to a defining relative clause—non-finite in structure)

The Victoria Line, which runs from Brixton to Walthamstow, was opened in March 1969. (Adjectival clause—non-defining relative clause—finite in structure)

The Victoria Line, running from Brixton to Walthamstow, was opened in March 1969. (Adjectival clause—equivalent to a non-defining relative clause—non-finite in structure)

[2.3] Not every clause introduced by a relative pronoun is an adjectival clause. Non-defining clauses sometimes have an explanatory function: they may suggest an adverbial idea, implying the reason or cause of the facts presented in the main clause:

The manufacturers soon stopped marketing the drug, which was found to have serious side-effects. (i.e. because it was found to have serious side-effects)

[2.4] Not every clause introduced by a relative pronoun is a Subordinate clause. Which may introduce a Co-ordinate clause:

He's not on the telephone, which makes it very difficult to get in touch with him.

Analysis A He's not on the telephone

B which makes it very difficult to get in touch with him

Clause B does not qualify any single word in Clause A (in other words, it hasn't an auxiliary function as adjective or adverb in relation to clause A). It introduces a further idea or additional comment 'and this makes it very difficult to get in touch with him'. Clause B is, then, a Main clause, co-ordinate with clause A.¹

In a similar way, who may introduce a Co-ordinate clause:

He told his wife, who then passed on the information to a neighbour (= and she passed on the information).

This can be compared with:

He told the story to his wife, who is a great lover of gossip.

In this sentence, who introduces a clause describing wife in the Main clause (i.e. it introduces an Adjectival clause).

[2.5] Do not be misled by the word that introduces a Subordinate clause. We can determine the function of a subordinate clause by asking: is it doing the work of an adjective, a noun, or an adverb? An Adjectival clause may, for example, be introduced by when or where, as in the following sentences:

1 He spoke of the time when he was a boy.

Analysis

A He spoke of the time (Main clause)

a1 when he was a boy (Subordinate Adjectival clause, qualifying time in A)

2 Do you remember the place where we first met?

Analysis

A Do you remember the place (Main clause)

a1 where we first met (Subordinate Adjectival clause, qualifying place in A)

¹ Students who feel that the first clause is more important than the second, and that these clauses cannot therefore be co-ordinate, should remember that clauses may be Independent (in the case of one Main clause in the sentence), Subordinate (serving another clause as an adjective, noun, or adverb), or Co-ordinate (where there are two or more Main clauses in the sentence). Since Clause B in this example is not subordinate according to the definition given, it must be Co-ordinate, analytically speaking, with the first, Clause A.

¹ See also Relative Clauses, page 116.

3 Noun clauses¹

[3.1] As subject Compare these two sentences:

- 1 Your talk was very interesting.
- 2 What you said was very interesting.

In sentence 1, there is only one verb (was), and its subject is your talk. In sentence 2, there are two finite verbs, and two clauses:

- aI* What you said (Subordinate)
A was very interesting (main)

Clause aI is clearly the subject of was in Clause A, just as your talk is the subject of was in sentence 1 above. It should be noted that the Main clause cannot stand alone without the subordinate noun clause.

Examples of non-finite clauses as subject:

To give up at this stage would be a great pity.

Closing the factory would mean unemployment for many of the town's work-force.

[3.2] As object Compare these two sentences:

- 1 They now know the facts.
- 2 They now know that the scheme is impracticable.

In 1, there is only one verb (know), and its object is the facts. In 2, there are two finite verbs and two clauses:

A They now know (Main)

aI that the scheme is impracticable (Subordinate)

Clause aI is the object of know in Clause A, just as the facts is the object of know in sentence 1.

Examples of non-finite clauses as object:

He claims to be an expert on the subject.

I hate putting you to any trouble.

[3.3] In apposition to the subject

- 1 The fact that you haven't enough time is no excuse.

Analysis A The fact is no excuse (Main) aI that you haven't enough time (Subordinate)

Clause A is complete: it contains subject, verb, and complement. Clause aI is not, however, an adjectival clause: it does not describe fact in Clause A; it is the fact, expressed in other words. In this case we call it a Noun clause in apposition to the subject. If in doubt as to the function of that (is it a conjunction or a relative pronoun?), try substituting which:

*The fact which you haven't enough time is no excuse.

This is clearly impossible, and that in the sentence above is functioning as a conjunction, not as a relative pronoun.

- 2 It seems unlikely that he would do such a thing.

Analysis A It seems unlikely (Main) aI that he would do such a thing (Subordinate)

Clause aI is represented by the word it in the Main clause, and could replace it. Clause aI is a Noun clause in apposition to the subject. It is possible to begin such sentences with the noun clause:

That he would do such a thing seems unlikely.

This alternative construction is quite frequently found in written English, but is not commonly used in the spoken language.

Examples of non-finite clauses in apposition to the subject:

The proposal to increase taxes met with fierce opposition.

It would be tactless to mention the subject.

It's boring sitting here doing nothing.

[3.4] In apposition to the object

He resented the suggestion that he didn't work conscientiously.

Analysis A He resented the suggestion (main) aI that he didn't work conscientiously (Subordinate)

As in [3.3] 1 above, Clause A is complete, having subject, verb, and object. Clause aI does not describe suggestion in A, it is the suggestion, expressed in other words. It is a Noun clause in apposition to the object.

Example of a non-finite clause in apposition to the object:

The Government has now made a decision to increase old-age pensions.

[3.5] As complement Compare these sentences:

- 1 The news was a shock to us all.
- 2 The news was that the police had arrested a suspect.

In 1, there is only one verb (was), and the complement of the verb is a shock to us all. In 2, there are two finite verbs, and two clauses:

A The news was (Main)

aI that the police had arrested a suspect (Subordinate)

Clause aI completes the predicate of was in the Main clause, just as a shock to us all does in Sentence 1. Clause aI is, therefore, a Noun clause, complement of the verb was (never 'object' of the verb to be).

Examples of non-finite clauses as complement:

His intention was to say nothing about it.

Our main problem was finding time to do the work.

[3.6] As object of a preposition Compare these sentences:

- 1 They were engrossed in his speech.
- 2 They were engrossed in what he was saying.

In 1, his speech is the object of the preposition in. In 2, there are two clauses:

A They were engrossed in (Main) aI what he was saying (Subordinate)

Clause aI is the object of the preposition in, just as his speech is in sentence 1. Example of a non-finite clause as object of a preposition:

He insisted on seeing you personally.

¹ See also verb patterns with -ing forms, infinitives and 'that' clauses, page 135.

4 Adverbial clauses¹

[4.1] Time

I shall speak to you when I come back.

Analysis A I shall speak to you (Main) aI when I come back (Subordinate)

Clause aI modifies the verb shall speak in Clause A, telling us when 'I' shall speak. It is an Adverbial clause of Time. Clauses of time may also come at the beginning of a sentence:²

When I come back, I shall tell you what happened.

Example of a non-finite clause of time:

Having received their final medical check, the astronauts boarded their spacecraft.

Note

(a) When may introduce an Adjectival clause:

He spoke of the time when he was a boy. (See under Adjectival clauses, page 266).

(b) When, like which, may also introduce a Co-ordinate clause:

They had given up hope of finding their way, when a guide arrived.

Analysis A They had given up hope of finding their way

B when a guide arrived.

Clause B does not tell us when they had given up hope. It introduces a further idea and then a guide arrived. It is a Main clause, co-ordinate with Clause A. (Note, also, that the two clauses are not reversible in this case.)

(c) When may also introduce a Noun clause.³ Compare these sentences:

1 Please tell me the time of your arrival.

2 Please tell me when you will arrive.

¹ See also Participles and Gerunds, page 161.

² This is simply an observation of what is grammatically possible, and is not intended to suggest that the choice of one position or the other is purely arbitrary. Quite often (but depending on intonation), the first of two clauses in such a sentence represents information that is familiar, taken for granted, or secondary in importance to the information carried by the second clause.

In the sentence 'I shall speak to you when I come back', attention is focused on when I shall speak to you, rather than on what I shall do at the time referred to; whereas in the sentence 'When I come back I shall tell you what happened', attention is focused on what I shall do rather than on when I shall do it. Stylistic considerations also have to be taken into account.

The possibility of making such distinctions arises, of course, only when the two clauses are reversible.

³ See also note (a) on page 60.

In I, there is one finite verb (tell), and its object is the time of your arrival. In 2, there are two finite verbs and two clauses:

A Please tell me (me is an indirect object) (Main) aI when you will arrive (Subordinate)

Clause aI provides tell in Clause A with an object, just as the time of your arrival is the object of tell in sentence 1, and is therefore a Noun clause. (Again, the clauses are not reversible.)

[4.2] Place

I am always meeting him where I least expect.

Analysis A I am always meeting him (Main) aI where I least expect (Subordinate)

Clause aI modifies the verb am meeting in Clause A, telling us where I meet him, and is an Adverbial clause of Place.

Note

(a) Where may introduce an Adjectival clause:

Do you remember the place where we first met? (See under Adjectival clauses, page 266).

(b) Where, like when and which, may also introduce a Co-ordinate clause:

He was taken to the police station, where he proceeded to make a full confession.

Analysis A He was taken to the police station

B where he proceeded to make a full confession

Clause B does not describe police station in Clause A. It introduces a further idea and there he proceeded to make a full confession. Clause B is a main clause, co-ordinate with clause A.

(c) Where may introduce a Noun clause. Compare these sentences:

1 Perhaps you could show me the place.

2 Perhaps you could show me where you put it.

In sentence 1, there is only one verb (could show), and its object is place. In 2, there are two clauses:

A Perhaps you could show me (me is an indirect object) (Main) aI where you put it (Subordinate)

Clause aI supplies show in Clause A with an object, just as place is the object of show in sentence 1, and is therefore a Noun clause.

[4.3] Manner

He solved the problem as one might have expected.

Analysis A He solved the problem (Main) aI as one might have expected (Subordinate)

Clause aI tells us how he solved the problem, and is an Adverbial clause of Manner.

Note

The insertion of a comma after problem would change the function of the second clause and create a difference in meaning:

He solved the problem, as one might have expected.

Analysis A He solved the problem,

B as one might have expected

Clause B, after the comma, does not tell us how he solved the problem. It introduces a further idea and one might have expected this. It is, therefore, a Main clause, co-ordinate with Clause A. In this case, the clauses are reversible:

As one might have expected, he solved the problem.¹

[4.4] Comparison

I He writes as incoherently as he speaks.

Analysis A He writes as incoherently (Main) aI as he speaks (Subordinate)

Clause aI tells us how (comparatively) incoherently he speaks, and is an Adverbial clause of Comparison, modifying the adverb incoherently in Clause A.

2 His stepfather treated him more kindly than any real father would have done.

Analysis A His stepfather treated him more kindly (Main) aI than any real father would have done (Subordinate)

Clause aI tells us how (comparatively) kindly his stepfather treated him, and is an Adverbial clause of Comparison, modifying the adverb kindly in Clause A.

[4.5] Reason or cause

He stole the money because he was out of work.

Analysis A He stole the money (Main) aI because he was out of work (Subordinate)

Clause aI explains why he stole the money, and is an Adverbial clause of Reason or Cause. Clauses of reason or cause can also come at the beginning of a sentence:

Since we haven't heard from him, we must assume he isn't coming.

¹ We could, of course, insert an adverb of manner, indicating how he solved the problem:

He solved the problem easily, as one might have expected.

or As one might have expected, he solved the problem easily.

Example of a non-finite clause of reason or cause:

Having heard nothing further from him, we assumed he wasn't coming.
or We assumed he wasn't coming, having heard nothing further from him.

[4.6] Purpose

He spent most of his time studying so that he might later get a better job.

Analysis A He spent most of his time studying (Main) aI so that he might later get a better job (Subordinate)

Clause aI explains his aim in spending his time studying, and is an Adverbial clause of Purpose. Clauses of purpose can also come at the beginning of a sentence:

So that you should know exactly how things stand, I have put everything in writing.

Example of a non-finite clause of purpose:

To speed up the delivery of letters, the Post Office introduced automatic sorting.

or The Post Office introduced automatic sorting to speed up the delivery of letters.

[4.7] Result

The boy was so exhausted that he fell asleep on the bus.

Analysis A The boy was so exhausted (Main) aI that he fell asleep on the bus. (Subordinate)

Clause aI tells us the result of the boy being so exhausted, and is an Adverbial clause of Result.

Example of a non-finite clause of result:

Drug-taking is now increasing so much as to constitute a major national problem. (= . . . so much that it constitutes a major . . .)

Note

A clause introduced by so that may also be an Adverbial clause of Purpose. Compare these sentences:

1 The doctor explained the nature of my illness in medical terms, so that I didn't understand fully.

2 The doctor explained the nature of my illness in medical terms so that I shouldn't understand fully.

In 1, where the so that clause is introduced by a comma, we have an Adverbial clause of Result; but in 2, where the comma is omitted, we have instead an Adverbial clause of Purpose. A difference may also be observed in the sequence of tenses in the two sentences above, and students should note that the clauses in 1 are not reversible, whereas those in 2 are:

So that I shouldn't understand fully, the doctor explained the nature of my illness in medical terms.

[4.8] Condition

If I were rich, I would go on a world cruise.

Analysis A I would go on a world cruise (Main) a1 if I were rich

Clause a1 tells us what condition would have to be fulfilled in order to make my going on a world cruise possible, and is an Adverbial clause of Condition. Clauses of condition can also come after the main clause:

I would go on a world cruise if I were rich.

Examples of non-finite clauses of condition:

- Given time*, he'll make a first-class tennis player.
- or He'll make a first-class tennis player, given time.
- All being well*, we should arrive just after lunch.
- or We should arrive just after lunch, all being well.

[4.9] Concession

Although he is over eighty, he's still very active.

Analysis A He's still very active (Main) a1 although he is over eighty

Clause a1 makes the admission (i.e. concedes) that he is over eighty, and modifies the verb is in Clause A (in spite of this fact, he's still very active). Clause a1 is an Adverbial clause of Concession. Clauses of concession can also follow the main clause:

He's still very active, although he's over eighty.

Example of a non-finite clause of concession:

Although approving the plan in general, the committee expressed several serious reservations on individual points.

or The committee expressed several serious reservations on individual points in the plan, although approving it in general.

Despite and in spite of are also commonly associated with concessive clauses, but they function differently from although. They are prepositions, not conjunctions, and must always be followed by a noun or a gerund:

Despite | the fact that he's over eighty, he's still very active.

Despite | being over eighty, he's still very active.

But not Despite* that he is over eighty, he's still very active.

Clauses of concession may also be introduced by an adjective, adverb, or verb followed by as:

Tired as they were, the rescuers continued searching among the ruins for survivors. (= Although they were very tired)

Hard as he tried,

however hard he tried, he couldn't force the door open.

Try as he might,

(= Although he tried very hard or No matter how hard he tried)

Key to exercises

Note: Answers to exercises marked with an asterisk (*) are suggestions only, and are provided for the guidance of students working independently of a teacher. This applies mainly to exercises in 'free completion'. It should not be assumed, however, that in all other cases the answers in the key are offered as the only acceptable ones. Alternatives are suggested where appropriate, but these may not exhaust all the possibilities. Students working with a teacher can, of course, discuss their own suggestions in class. The abbreviation OALDCE is used throughout the key for Oxford Advanced Learner's Dictionary of Current English.

- 1 I have been trying/have you been; 2 have met/saw/were not; 3 looks/has been burning/have forgotten to switch/went; 4 to have kept you waiting; 5 was going to buy or would have bought/heard/changed; 6 have been waiting/have known/would be; 7 has been working/returns/shall not have seen; 8 see/will be struck/has improved/went; 9 had told/had already bought/wouldn't have given/is; 10 shall ring/hasn't answered/have gone/wouldn't have bothered to come/had known; 11 brought or have brought/hadn't/would have been or would be; 12 have remembered to tell/had/would have arrived.
- 2 1 arrived or had arrived/was/was/had given/have stood/saving; 2 had told/were coming or would be coming/had known/wouldn't have had to; 3 didn't you tell/could/needn't have borrowed or wouldn't have needed to borrow; 4 couldn't understand/had broken down/had undergone/beings; 5 were going or went/don't leave/shall miss; 6 were/was talking/were/have gone; 7 is talking/ will be free to see/would you like to take; 8 to have written/have been/haven't had/writing/would have telephoned/had forgotten or have forgotten; 9 saw/was living/told/was thinking or had been thinking of emigrating/well have done; 10 am/going ski-ing/will be/have tried; or was/going ski-ing/would be/had tried; ski-ing/making; 11 had let me know/wouldn't be able or weren't able/would certainly not have gone/had known; 12 didn't want to see or wouldn't want to see/had heard/was/had suggested or suggested.
- 3 1 didn't come/have never seen/ would have been; 2 complete or have completed/shall have been living or shall have lived/don't think/shall stay; 3 should mention or mention/was just thinking/ (was) wondering/had become or became; 4 wouldn't call/were/will have got or has got; 5 wished/had been able to see/left/would have liked to say/hoped/would accept; 6 are/is/could have sworn or could swear/talking; 7 hasn't worked/are/have got/rang/certainly wouldn't have come/hadn't asked; 8 arrived or had arrived/did we discover/was/had wasted or were washing/calling; 9 hasn't taken or didn't take/to get/needn't have taken/have saved/spent/had; 10 made/choosing/don't decide/will never settle down; 11 didn't realize/had been informed/had been asked to go on talking/was being traced or was traced; 12 will hardly believe/is/has telephoned/(has) apologized/getting/rings/shall not answer.
- 4 1 could drive . . . when he was eighteen; 2 could understand/could speak it when I first arrived in England; 3 could have let . . . money yesterday;

- 4 could have persuaded ... come last week/ could; 5 could play ... beautifully at one time; 6 could see ... was bored to death at the party last night; 7 couldn't get ... because I had forgotten my key; 8 could overhear ... said in the hotel we stayed at; 9 could have seen you yesterday;
- 10 When they asked my advice, I could suggest; 11 could well understand/felt ... at the time; 12 couldn't get/could have got it done by the following morning.
- 5 I we shan't be able to get; 2 we shall be able to give; 3 we were able to take; 4 was able to escape; 5 were able to find; 6 I've been unable or I haven't been able; 7 to be able to show; 8 to be able to speak; 9 they'd been unable to get or they hadn't been able to get; 10 had been unable to answer.
- 6 *1 ... we could all make notes about the lesson. 2 ... we could go much faster. 3 ... we could visit you more often. 4 I could give you more help myself if ... 5 ... you could have kept to the main roads. 6 I could have done something about it if ... 7 ... we could stay and have coffee with you. 8 We could have stayed and had coffee with them if ... 9 ... we could fix it straight away. 10 We could have fixed it there and then if ...
- 7 *1 ... we'd all be able to make notes about the lesson. 2 ... we'd be able to go much faster. 3 ... we'd be able to visit you more often. 4 I'd be able to give you more help myself if ... 5 ... you'd have been able to keep to the main roads. 6 I'd have been able to do something about it if ... 7 ... we'd be able to stay and have coffee with you. 8 We'd have been able to stay and have coffee with them if ... 9 ... we'd be able to fix it straight away. 10 We'd have been able to fix it there and then if ...
- 8 1 She can be quite forgetful. 2 Holidays abroad can be quite cheap. 3 Racial harmony can be difficult to achieve. 4 ... discipline could be very strict. 5 He could occasionally be quite high-spirited. 6 September can be a wonderful month ... 7 Students ... can be very critical. ... 8 One-way traffic ... can be very confusing. ... 9 She can look quite pretty at times. 10 English cooking can, in fact, be excellent.
- 9 1 You may find; 2 We might (or could) get; 3 He might (or could) change; 4 trains may be; 5 Parents may find; 6 we may find; 7 He may (or might) be able; 8 He may (or might) not turn up; 9 The Government's policy might (or could) prove; 10 Getting ... may (or might) not be.
- 10 *1 We may have missed the bus. 2 He might not have wanted to see us. 3 They might have gone out for the evening. 4 He could have broken a window. 5 He may not have known the answer. 6 They could have guessed what we intended to do. 7 He may already have known about it. 8 They may have lost their way. 9 They may have gone away for a time. 10 She could have forgotten your address. 11 He may not have had the time. 12 He might have changed his mind about it.
- 11 1 The manager told me I might leave ... if I wanted to. 2 His interviewer told him he could put off ... 3 The Customs officer asked if he could see ... 4 The teacher asked the student if he might ask him ... 5 I told my friend he could ... provided he took ... 6 The police inspector asked his - colleague if he might see ... he was holding. 7 The notice stated that cars might be parked ... 8 The chairman asked the speaker politely if he might interrupt him ... 9 He asked his friend if he might join him. 10 The notice stated that visitors might not take photographs ...
- 12 1 The restaurant may be expensive, but ... 2 The method may be crude, but ... 3 He may be badly paid, but ... 4 The book may be long, but ... 5 He may be old, but ... 6 The climb may have been exhausting, but ... 7 I may have been rude to him, but ... 8 He may have acted unwisely, but ... 9 His work may have improved, but ... 10 Old-age pensions may have risen considerably, but ...
- 13 1 You might let me know ... 2 He might be ... 3 You might perhaps ask him ... 4 You might post this letter ... 5 You might have warned me ... 6 You might have apologized ... 7 He might have tried ... 8 She might keep ...
- 14 1 The Conservatives should win ... 2 There should be a lot ... 3 ... says it should be fine ... 4 Our visitors should have arrived ... 5 It shouldn't be too difficult ... 6 The meeting ought to have finished ... 7 The organizers of the games should be meeting ... 8 It shouldn't have taken us so long ... 9 ... regulations shouldn't affect ... 10 We should be able to move ...
- 15 *1 ... be very much in love with him. 2 ... left it in my other jacket. 3 ... be rolling in money. 4 ... been taken in by his charming manner. 5 ... read it very carefully. 6 ... be crazy. 7 ... received it. 8 ... be getting any better. 9 ... had a quarrel about something or other. 10 ... forgotten all about it. 11 ... be much later ... 12 ... got to know him very well.
- 16 1 This will be what ... 2 That will be the postman ... 3 You will appreciate that ... 4 As you will no doubt have heard, he's ... 5 You won't (or wouldn't) have seen ... 6 He would have been the manager's ... 7 You won't know my name ... 8 You wouldn't have seen me ... 9 The family won't have finished ... 10 ... , he won't have understood properly.
- 17 1 They will sit ... 2 He will often buy things and then leave ... 3 My wife will leave things ... 4 ... , the water pipes would freeze ... , and we would have to call in ... 5 ... he would interrupt ... 6 ... he would insist ... 7 Why will you be so difficult? 8 ... , everyone would listen ... 9 You will go out ... 10 ... , people would go to church ...
- 18 1 I will do; 2 will hold; 3 won't work; 4 won't fit; 5 will seat; 6 will reach; 7 will suit; 8 will bear.
- 19 1 'I can manage ... , but I shall need ... ' 2 'If the price ... increases, we shall be obliged to raise ... ' 3 'I shall have more to say about this problem later.' 4 'I shall be writing to you ... to let you know ... ' 5 'I shall be working ... this evening.' 6 'Do you think we shall need to take ... ?' 7 'I shan't be sorry to see ... ' 8 'I assume we shall be given ... ' 9 'We shall never get there, at the rate we're going.' 10 'We shall be making ... tomorrow morning, ...'

- 20 1 belief; 2 characteristic behaviour; 3 request; 4 agreement; 5 prediction/inherent capacity; 6 command/instruction; 7 prediction; 8 characteristic behaviour; 9 prediction; 10 promise; 11 belief; 12 inherent capacity.
- 21 *1 He should cut down on bread and potatoes. 2 You should get up earlier. 3 We'd better take our seats. 4 He shouldn't have been driving so fast. 5 I'd better inform the police. 6 We'd better get a builder to look at it tomorrow. 7 You ought to have stayed in a hotel. 8 She shouldn't have lain in the sun so long. 9 You'd better start learning some Spanish. 10 You'd better think about buying a new one. 11 You ought to see a doctor. 12 We should have bought more in the first place. 13 He ought to change his job instead of complaining. 14 You should have taken umbrellas with you. 15 We'd better ask someone the way. 16 You'd better not take the car. 17 You'd better get it renewed. 18 You should buy yourself an alarm clock. 19 I'd better see who it is. 20 You'd better phone a plumber.
- 22 1 Factory inspectors recommended that new safety rules should be introduced. 2 The judge ordered that the court should adjourn for lunch. 3 The Speaker ruled that the MP should withdraw his remark. 4 The Colonel decided that his troops should attack at dawn. 5 The leader of the expedition proposed that they should make ... held. 6 Teachers advocated that more nursery schools should be set up. 7 The magistrate directed that the man should be released. 8 The police gave instructions that members of the public should not approach the two men but should report to the nearest police station. 9 Shareholders demanded that the Board should give more detailed information about profits. 10 The employers urged that the men should return to work so that negotiations could begin.
- 23 1 ... table so that I should be sure. ... 2 ... undertones so that the teacher shouldn't overhear ... 3 ... warning in order that the public should be ... 4 ... umbrella in case it should rain. 5 ... bank lest the house should be burgled. 6 Lest you should think I'm ... truth, I have brought. ... 7 ... university so that he should have ... 8 ... here so that you should have ... 9 ... hall so that everyone should have ... 10 ... number in case you should want ...
- 24 1 It's natural that you should be upset. ... 2 It's incredible that we should have been living. ... 3 It's a pity that you should have missed ... 4 It's curious that he should have asked ... 5 It's typical of him that he should expect ... 6 It's odd that they should be getting married. ... 7 It's crazy that you should have to ... 8 It is essential that you should look over ... 9 It is important that you should read ... 10 It's splendid that you should be coming ... 11 It's interesting that you should have bought ... 12 It is vital that emergency supplies should reach ...
- 25 1 must; 2 must; 3 must; 4 have to; 5 had to; 6 must; 7 must; 8 must; 9 have to; 10 have to; 11 must; 12 having to or to have to; 13 will probably have to; 14 must/must; 15 must or has to/must or has to; 16 have had to; 17 mustn't; 18 had to; 19 must; 20 have to.
- 26 1 ... we must hurry, or we'd be late. 2 ... application forms must be returned to the office ... 3 ... he must visit us ... 4 ... he could never remember ... He always had to ... 5 ... the car had broken down, and we had to have it ... 6 ... the situation had now become intolerable, and that something must be done ... 7 ... I realized how difficult ... was, but he must try ... get him down. 8 ... visas ... must be obtained ... 9 ... I was sorry to have to tell him that, but he left me ... 10 ... it wasn't fair. He always had to do ... 11 ... I really must try ... 12 ... no one liked having (or to have) to work ... 13 ... whichever party ... would probably have to reintroduce ... 14 ... candidates must write ... and must write ... 15 the verdict ... must (or has to) be unanimous: if ... the case must (or has to) be retried ... 16 ... the crowd had dispersed peacefully. If ... hadn't, the police might have had to ... 17 ... we mustn't make ... or he wouldn't take ... 18 ... had suddenly taken ... , and she had had to call ... 19 ... problem cropped up again, he must report ... 20 ... it was ... to have to make.
- 27 1 We needn't (or don't need to) leave; 2 You don't have to come; 3 we need (or need to) take; 4 you needn't (or don't need to) decide; 5 you don't have to go; 6 you don't have to take; 7 we shan't have to rush; 8 I wouldn't need to keep; 9 he's never had to earn; 10 you don't have to do/do you; 11 I need hardly say; 12 You needn't have told; 13 this needn't make; 14 he had never had to deal; 15 we didn't need to do; 16 he didn't even have to have; 17 you needn't have made; 18 he need never discover; 19 you needn't (or don't need to) be alarmed; 20 I need have gone.
- 28 1 we needn't (or didn't need to) leave/didn't start; 2 didn't have to go ... to please him; 3 need (or needed to) take; 4 I needn't (or didn't need to) decide/I could let him know the following day; 5 it was ... the next day/I didn't have to go; 6 didn't have to take/He could go ... himself. 7 we got ... then, we wouldn't have to rush; 8 he listened/he wouldn't need to keep ... for his benefit; 9 he didn't know/was. He had never had to earn; 10 he didn't have to do/he told him; 11 need hardly say/he was/I'd done; 12 I needn't have told/It was none; 13 I wouldn't be able ... the following day, but that this needn't make ... to their plans. 14 he was completely/he had never had to deal; 15 the house had just been decorated, so they didn't need (or hadn't needed) to do; 16 had offered/didn't even have to have or hadn't even had to have; 17 had been/I needn't have made; 18 I chose ... myself/he need never discover; 19 he needn't (or didn't need to) be alarmed; 20 had come up/He didn't think he need have gone.
- 29 1 rises in the/sets in the; 2 sells; 3 flows through; 4 stands on; 5 doesn't exist on the; 6 make a; 7 generates; 8 treat the; 9 indicates a; 10 work at; 11 floats on; 12 doesn't believe in.
- 30 buy a ticket/show it/sucks it in/scans/records/releases a barrier/leave a station/takes your ticket/lets you out/is a season.
- 31 normally wake up/seldom need/have a built-in/cat sparingly/doesn't take me long/have a relatively; that is because I rarely throw/I read the New York Times/then separate/mail goes/office is/usually walk/It is about/exercise I get.

- 32 *1 I generally get up at seven. 2 I often spend the morning in bed. 3 I occasionally go abroad. 4 I never listen to light comedy. 5 I always walk. 6 I hardly ever read thrillers. 7 I nearly always enjoy documentaries. 8 One usually finds a full stop. 9 They sometimes ask me to tidy up my room. 10 I usually keep some money and my driving licence in it. 11 I generally take aspirins. 12 I frequently meet my friends in a nearby coffee bar.
- 33 *1 My neighbour always catches the same train as me. 2 My father never drinks alcohol. 3 The manager generally goes for a drink after work. 4 My parents live in a bungalow. 5 My father plays golf nearly every week-end. 6 Our teacher never smokes cigarettes. 7 The neighbour usually takes the dog for a walk at about this time. 8 A friend of mine never walks anywhere if he can avoid it. 9 My secretary wears a different dress every day. 10 Most of the people in our town work in the local factory.
- 34 Free composition
- 35 Now here is a recipe for iced coffee mousse for six persons. We need three eggs, half a pint or 275 ml of strong black coffee, and one level tablespoon of powdered gelatine. We measure the coffee . . . , sprinkle in . . . and leave it to soak . . . Next we crack . . . Now we add . . . and then we place . . . and whisk until the mixture . . . That's ready now, so we remove the saucapan from the heat and gradually whisk in . . . We continue beating until the mixture has cooled . . . Next we beat . . . and then we beat . . . Now we use a metal spoon and fold the egg whites . . . We pour the mixture into . . . and chill it until it has set firm.
- 36 Free composition
- 37 1 MP DEMANDS; 2 INJURIES HIT; 3 BOOM CONTINUES; 4 BRITISH RAILWAYS FORECAST(S); 5 PLANE CRASHES; 6 AMERICA LAUNCHES; 7 BOYS FIND; 8 SIX FACE; 9 DOCTORS FEAR; 10 CHAMPION RETAINS.
- 38 *1 he meant; 2 I don't believe; 3 I think; 4 make(s) ten; 5 His tie doesn't match; 6 resembled his mother; 7 does this pen belong; 8 tank holds; 9 did he know; 10 deserved so much applause; 11 Do you see; 12 tastes sour; 13 Does it suit; 14 He understands English; 15 does the mixture consist.
- 39 who ordered/digger reached/it advanced/digger was level/officers leapt out/made their arrest/Jones watched/digger sank/were fruitless/tide came in/submerged it/said.
- 40 *1 I spent my holiday in France. 2 I chose France, because I'd never been there. 3 I went there in September. 4 I travelled by plane. 5 I went alone. 6 I took a suitcase and a hold-all. 7 I lived in a hotel. 8 I paid in cash. 9 I met several interesting people—a reporter from England, a teacher from America and several students from Japan. 10 I spent most of the time sightseeing, swimming, and reading. 11 I ate typical French food. 12 I usually drank the local wine, which was very good. 13 I had wonderful weather. 14 I generally slept about eight hours a night—more than usual in fact. 15 I generally woke up at about 7.30. 16 I didn't usually get up till
- about eight o'clock. 17 I sent postcards to several of my friends. 18 I didn't bring home any souvenirs. 19 The whole holiday cost me £170. 20 I felt I needed another holiday before I went back to work.
- 41–42 Free composition
- 43 1 The exhibition closes . . . 2 Clearance . . . hall begins . . . 3 My plane leaves . . . 4 The new regulations come into force . . . 5 What time does the concert end . . . ? 6 The exhibition opens . . . 7 The ship makes . . . 8 . . . , the winter term finishes . . . , and the spring term starts . . . 9 When do you take up . . . ? 10 The new motorway opens . . .
- 44 1 I will have/come; 2 will start/return; 3 will have/expires; 4 will he do/leaves; 5 is/will renew; 6 sets/will be; 7 will be/opens; 8 don't leave/will be/get; 9 wait/make/will be; 10 will have to/move; 11 will soon settle down/gets; 12 will interrupt/have; 13 don't tell/will simply keep on/do; 14 hear/will let/will be.
- 45 1 I'm trying; 2 The kettle's nearly boiling. 3 I'm still reading it. 4 are killing; 5 I'm dying; 6 I'm just brushing; 7 I'm driving; 8 I'm going/my car's giving; 9 Peter's acting; 10 earth's happening; 11 How are you getting on; 12 I'm beginning/he's not coming; 13 Aren't you rather jumping; 14 why aren't you taking; 15 you're being.
- 46 1 Industry is steadily introducing . . . 2 The present credit squeeze is severely reducing the ability . . . 3 The Company's activities abroad are expanding. 4 Living standards are rising more slowly in . . . 5 The police are investigating the crime. 6 The strike at London Airport is resulting in heavy . . . 7 Passenger services on suburban lines are steadily improving. 8 Manufacturers of personal computers are fighting to maintain . . . 9 Large jumbo jets are gradually being replaced by . . . 10 The apparently inexorable rise in oil prices is creating a . . .
- 47 1 I were talking/passed; 2 was sleeping/was awakened/went/was happening/knew/was barking; 3 didn't take/thought/was joking; 4 broke/were approaching/took/restarted/stopped; 5 were drinking/broke out/soon came/called/was just beginning/arrived/took/were getting/made/succeeded/were still looking; 6 burst/taxied or was taxi-ing/was injured; 7 was going on/called/rang/didn't answer/was coming/thought/be having; 8 was looking or looked/were you sitting; 9 left/were still talking/seemed to be having; 10 was just wondering/didn't ask/was living.
- 48 reported; told/looks/are venting/is; Mission control asked/is it coming/do you see; Spacecraft: is coming/is giving/I'm suspecting or I suspect/is/is/is spinning; was working/came/I'm transmitting/don't have/is/is; were kept/reported/was falling/ordered; reported/looks/is; confirm/confirms; Does it look/it is still going down; it's slowly going down/are starting; is/we're thinking.

- 49 1 appears/be gaining; 2 are you sitting/watching/know/be getting; 3 be getting on or get on/I'm waiting; 4 think/hear/talking; 5 leave/be waiting; 6 call/be having; 7 says/knows/do/wonder/be thinking; 8 be sitting/doing; 9 seems/be improving/has; 10 smell/burning; 11 be travelling/are overtaking; 12 accept/says/be telling.
- 50 1 Oil producers are meeting . . . 2 I'm taking . . . 3 Are you visiting . . . ? 4 . . . because I'm going out. 5 Some friends of ours are coming . . . We are meeting them . . . 6 . . . because I was seeing him . . . 7 . . . said he was holding . . . 8 How are you getting back . . . ? 9 The chairman . . . said that they were opening three . . . 10 The theatre company are taking the show . . .
- 51 1 be coming/meet; 2 be entertaining; 3 be doing; 4 like/be repeating; 5 be seeing/mention; 6 be working/get; 7 disappoint/be expecting; 8 be waiting/go; 9 make/be moving; 10 be waiting/recognize/be wearing.
- 52 1 I've been waiting; 2 has been learning; 3 had been asking; 4 I've been working; 5 haven't been listening/I've been saying; 6 have been pointing out; 7 had been expecting; 8 had been looking; 9 had been giving; 10 had been flying; 11 you've been seeing; 12 has been operating.
- 53 * 1 It weighs ___ 2 It measures ___ by ___ 3 It costs ___ 4 I have ___ copies. 5 It contains ___ exercises. 6 It feels ___ 7 It looks ___ 8 They come on page ___ 9 I like ___ best. 10 It lacks ___
- 54 1 think/already know; 2 I'm thinking; 3 I'm just smelling/don't they smell; 4 I'm gradually forgetting; 5 see/you're not looking/is pointing; 6 don't hear/you're just imagining; 7 is hearing; 8 I'm just tasting/does it taste; 9 think/is seeing/don't approve; 10 don't think/really knows/he's saying; 11 stands; 12 Do you realize/are standing; 13 has; 14 is having.
- 55 1 We have unanimously agreed; 2 the man had already died; 3 meeting will already have started; 4 flights had been cancelled; 5 he will have reached; 6 parents had already gone to bed; 7 he will have left hospital; 8 I've forgotten the name of the book. 9 it had already taken off; 10 They have got married.
- 56 1 I've never met him; 2 I haven't tried eating it; 3 He had never studied it before; 4 had been feeling ill; 5 will all have died; 6 hadn't slept very well; 7 It's all been used up; 8 haven't spoken to; 9 had obviously broken in and ransacked the house; 10 haven't read it yet; 11 I hadn't been told anything about it; 12 I'd forgotten your number; 13 It's already been sent; 14 I've just found them.
- 57 * 1 I've been cleaning the car. 2 I've been looking through it. 3 We've been clearing out the cupboard. 4 I haven't had time to look at them yet. 5 It's been raining for the last twenty minutes. 6 Someone has been taken ill. 7 I've been given a day off. 8 I've just come back from a holiday cruise. 9 I thought it had been cancelled. 10 I've been offered a very good job at a much higher salary.
- 58 1 is writing/have already been published; 2 is now going ahead/have already been completed; 3 are rapidly approaching/have already been reached; 4 are at present taking/have already been scrapped; 5 am saying/have often been said; 6 is currently trying/have been acquired; 7 is constantly receiving/have on occasion been; 8 is pushing ahead/have been opened; 9 is (or are) apparently winning/have been recorded; 10 are still having to/have now quietened down.
- 59 Free composition
- 60 1 have bought/were abolished; 2 has shown/was first announced; 3 introduced/have taken; 4 made/have been/has now been established/has been; 5 was made/have changed; 6 were introduced/have been reduced; 7 has gone down/was instituted; 8 have been/were nationalized; 9 has had/took over; 10 rose/have remained.
- 61 1 I haven't been to the dentist for six months. 2 He hasn't spoken to me about his plans for a year. 3 I haven't met him since he was 15 years old. 4 He hasn't written to me since I was in America. 5 It hasn't rained for three weeks. 6 The side hasn't won a home game for two months. 7 I haven't had a cold since last winter. 8 I haven't set eyes on him since he borrowed some money from me. 9 The Company hasn't made a profit since 1982. 10 I haven't been on holiday for six months.
- 62 1 It's six months since I went . . . 2 It's a year since he spoke . . . 3 It's three weeks since it rained. 4 It's two months since the side won . . . 5 It's six months since I went . . . 6 It's four days since I smoked . . . 7 It's ten days since they wrote saying . . . 8 It's a long time since we were all living . . . 9 It's such a long time since I read the book that . . . 10 It seems ages since he visited us.
- 63 1 I've written; 2 he's been writing; 3 have you been doing/I've been sitting; 4 we've always lived; 5 have you been keeping; 6 What has happened? 7 He's been drinking; 8 I've already drunk; 9 It's been cooking; 10 Haven't you finished/You've been reading; 11 has forgotten/I've been expecting; 12 Have you been waiting; 13 have you known/I've only just found out/I've been finding out or I've found out; 14 he's asked/he's asked.
- 64 1 I'll let/I've finished; 2 Do not start/have completed; 3 Don't make up/you've had; 4 shall be/I've finished; 5 will be/have spent; 6 you'll get/you've worked/you've got/you'll find; 7 will start/have been approved; 8 He'll make/he's had; 9 have thrashed out/shall be able; 10 do not smoke/have taken off.
- 65 1 let him know/I had finished; 2 to start/they had completed; 3 to make up his mind/he had had; 4 he would be/he had finished; 5 we were going . . . the following summer/it would be/we had spent; 6 he would get used to their methods/he had worked there/he had got used to their methods/he would find; 7 would start/had been approved; 8 would make/had had; 9 we would be able/we had thrashed out; 10 to smoke/had taken off.

- 66 1 got down/had been introduced; 2 died/had reigned; 3 had settled/circulated; 4 was moved/had taken; 5 refused/had been cleared up; 6 realized/had had; 7 returned/had been broken into; 8 understood/had managed; 9 wrote/hadn't yet arrived/replied/had already been sent; 10 called/discovered/had just missed/had gone out; 11 set out/had left/had still not returned; 12 had/had been strengthened; 13 saw/had occupied; 14 won/had not previously been beaten; 15 decided/had stood.
- 67 1 were/had expected; 2 happened/had feared; 3 arrived/had envisaged; 4 agreed/had not anticipated; 5 were already/had made/had ever dared; 6 seemed/had been made; 7 said/had broken/had succeeded/had previously been thought; 8 began/had ever set; 9 discovered/had not taken; 10 found/had earlier rejected.
- 68 1 ... since he had already failed ... 2 When they had made quite sure ... 3 ... since they had come no nearer ... 4 ... after he had spent ... 5 ... since I had always assumed ... 6 ... since he had failed ... 7 ... he had represented ... 8 ... since my old one had expired. 9 ... since its circulation had dropped ... 10 ... as only a small number had ever been put ...
- 69 I am still; I am having; I do not wish ... you if you find; It is still ... for me to stay; was unspeakable ... us/it did not matter; You were/this was/it was or is/I now have to pay; You must forgive me; I do not want; Do you want to see me; You said/we parted/you did/you said; I have been living; did you speak; you are back/ I shall perhaps seem; There will be/you once hinted/who will make you forget you; I think of our/I feel/must be for us; I never positively said or I have never positively said/you did not understand or have not understood/let me say/I love you/I want to marry you/I want to be with you; I ask of you/which might help me.
- 70 * 1 If flowers don't get any water, they die. 2 If the traffic lights are at red, a motorist must pull up. 3 If you want to write a letter, you need pen and paper. 4 If I'm very thirsty, I like to drink lager. 5 If businessmen want to borrow money, they go to see their bank manager. 6 If I make a mistake, I expect the teacher to correct it. 7 If one wants to visit a foreign country, one must have a valid passport. 8 If people feel ill, they go to see a doctor. 9 If there is a power failure, all electrical appliances stop working. 10 If people work in an office, they wear a suit.
- 71 * 1 If those shoes in the window fit me, I shall buy them. 2 If you drop that vase, my wife will murder you! 3 If it's fine tomorrow, we can have a picnic somewhere. 4 If I change my job, I'll try to get something more interesting. 5 If we're late for the theatre, we may not be able to get seats. 6 If you lose my library book, I shall have to pay for it. 7 If you meet some friends of mine in London, introduce yourself to them. 8 If he passes his exam, he'll go on to university. 9 If it's a boy, they'll call it John. 10 If I get a rise next year, we'll think of buying a house.
- 72 1 If your car should need ... 2 If I should be ... 3 If the baby should wake up, give ... 4 If the talks should break down, ... 5 If he should dare to - show ... 6 If he will accept ... 7 If you will take ... 8 If you will wait ... 9 If my father will give ... 10 ... if he won't give ...
- 73 1 Give him/and he'll work; 2 Take/and you won't be; 3 Remember/or she'll be; 4 Send/and she'll forgive; 5 Put on/or you'll get; 6 Tell/or I'll never trust; 7 Just say/and we can forget; 8 Be firm/or they'll misbehave; 9 Lend/and I'll pay; 10 Practise/or you'll never become.
- 74 * 1 ... we leave immediately. 2 ... I'll tell him what you said. 3 ... you will support it with evidence. 4 ... I shall buy a new car next month. 5 ... they can't reach an agreement? 6 ... you can assume I'm not coming. 7 ... you will be ready to take the examination next term. 8 I will let you into the secret. 9 ... it is really impossible for you to work it out yourself. 10 ... he ever discovers the truth? 11 ... we can give up the idea completely. 12 ... and I'll find a solution.
- 75 * 1 ... he would be able to advise you much better than I can. 2 ... would take a different view. 3 ... you'd probably earn a lot more money elsewhere. 4 ... he'd soon tell you whether it was serious or not. 5 ... we'd certainly need to buy ourselves a car. 6 ... we'd show them round. 7 ... if we agreed to pay him a bit more. 8 ... they would change them for you. 9 ... you'd begin to appreciate what the writer is trying to say. 10 ... we'd have enough money to rent a comfortable flat.
- 76 1 If I went to America, I'd visit ____ 2 If I could live my life over again, I'd ____ 3 If someone called me a fool, I'd ____ 4 If a visitor came to my town, I'd ____ 5 If I had the chance, I'd ____ 6 If I decided to live abroad, I'd ____ 7 If I had the money, I'd ____ 8 If I saw a house on fire, I'd ____ 9 If I had something stolen, I'd ____ 10 If I went to live on a desert island, I'd ____
- 77 1 If she loved him, she would marry him. 2 If our teacher didn't explain things clearly, we wouldn't understand his lessons. 3 If I had a watch, I could tell you the time. 4 If Britain exported enough, she wouldn't have a constant balance of payments problem. 5 If I didn't know the meaning of the word, I'd have to look it up. 6 If this exercise were difficult (or weren't easy), not everyone would get the correct answers. 7 If I didn't know the answer, I couldn't tell you. 8 If we had some matches, we could light the fire.
- 78 1 I wish I could speak ... Why? Because if I could, ____ 2 I wish I had a car. Why? Because if I did, ____ 3 She wishes her parents approved ... Why? Because if they did, ____ 4 I wish I were ... Why? Because if I were, ____ 5 I wish you liked ... Why? Because if you did, ____
- 79 1 I wish you'd hurry up. 2 It's time we were leaving. 3 I wish I knew his opinion. 4 I'd rather you kept it a secret ... 5 I wish you weren't going ... 6 I'd rather you didn't smoke ... 7 It's time he found ... 8 My parents would rather we lived ... 9 It's high time the weather improved. 10 I wish you'd stop making ...

- 80 *1 What would you do about the problem . . . ? 2 If I were earning a good salary, . . . 3 . . . , I would tell him to mind his own business. 4 . . . a stranger asked you how old you were? 5 . . . , you'd understand what the writer is trying to say. 6 . . . , your English would probably show a noticeable improvement. 7 . . . I didn't have to? 8 . . . I could afford it. 9 . . . we asked yet another person's opinion. 10 . . . , what could he do about it? 11 . . . , his friends might be more sympathetic. 12 . . . said exactly what you think.
- 81 1 If he had given . . . , I could have telephoned . . . 2 If the sun hadn't been . . . , the photographs wouldn't have come out. . . . 3 If the shop had packed . . . , they wouldn't have got damaged. 4 He would have remembered . . . if he had been paying. . . . 5 If he had been able . . . , he would have passed . . .
- 82 *1 If he had passed . . . , he would have gone to university. 2 If we had got there . . . , we wouldn't have found the doors locked in our faces. 3 If she had read . . . , she would have understood what I meant. 4 If we hadn't understood . . . , we would have asked him to explain again. 5 If the rocket had gone . . . , it would have marked a step forward in space research.
- 83 *1 He would have passed . . . if he had taken a little more care. 2 We would have got there . . . if we had left just fifteen minutes earlier. 3 She would have read . . . if she had been able to get a copy. 4 We wouldn't have understood . . . if he hadn't explained in laymen's terms. 5 The rocket would have gone . . . if the third stage had fired successfully.
- 84 1 If he hadn't failed . . . , he wouldn't be taking . . . 2 If you had remembered . . . , we could open . . . 3 If we hadn't missed . . . , we wouldn't be waiting . . . 4 If there hadn't been . . . , we wouldn't be able . . . 5 If you had taken . . . , you wouldn't be . . .
- 85 *1 . . . there hadn't been quite such a crowd of people there. 2 It would have been a wonderful day for sailing . . . 3 . . . I had asked you last week? 4 . . . , you wouldn't have got into such difficulties. 5 . . . , I'd have thought it over much more carefully. 6 . . . , he would never have got the job. 7 . . . , it might have avoided a lot of unpleasantness. 8 . . . you had known how desperately he needed it? 9 . . . we had followed your plan rather than mine? 10 . . . , the damage wouldn't have been nearly so extensive. 11 . . . she had known him better. 12 If they hadn't arrived just at that moment, . . .
- 86 1 Should you need . . . 2 . . . should the need arise. 3 Should you be late . . . 4 Were it not . . . 5 Were such a merger ever to be proposed . . . 6 Were it not . . . 7 Had it not been . . . 8 Had he taken . . . 9 Had the attempted assassination succeeded, . . . 10 Had the driver of the train not reacted so quickly, . . .
- 87 *1 If only you had acted sensibly, . . . 2 If my bank manager calls, . . . 3 . . . he expects us to believe him, . . . 4 . . . , you must take a much greater interest in your work. 5 So long as you watch out for small boats, . . . 6 . . . he'd be willing to help you. 7 . . . you're not feeling very well? 8 How on earth did you find me, . . . ? 9 . . . , tell him I'll phone him back later this afternoon. 10 . . . you take me into your confidence. 11 If anything goes wrong tomorrow, . . . 12 . . . , why didn't you write it down? 13 . . . I cleaned
- and oiled it before giving it back. 14 . . . , please say so now. 15 When would we be likely to arrive . . . ? 16 . . . , I would never have forgiven them. 17 . . . I didn't have to get up and go to work this morning! 18 . . . , need to get in touch again. 19 If you want to back out from the scheme at this stage, . . . 20 . . . were able to write your letters in English.
- 88 1 If I were you, I'd take . . . 2 If he hadn't had his wife's . . . 3 If it hadn't been for his . . . 4 If one considers . . . 5 If you don't (or didn't) have . . . 6 . . . if we discussed . . . 7 Provided that the weather is favourable . . . 8 . . . unless you can (or are able to) offer . . . 9 As long as you follow . . . 10 If we had given up . . .
- 89 Free composition
- 90 *1 . . . we would just manage . . . if we left . . . 2 . . . if I saw him . . . , I would tell . . . you had said. 3 . . . I would accept his explanation only if he would support . . . 4 . . . my bank manager would lend . . . , I would buy . . . the following month. 5 . . . would happen if they couldn't reach . . . 6 . . . didn't hear from him by the following Friday, I could assume . . . 7 . . . his work continued . . . , he would be ready . . . the following term. 8 . . . would let me . . . only if I would promise . . . 9 . . . look up . . . only if it was . . . for them . . . themselves. 10 . . . he would say if he ever discovered . . . 11 . . . the worst came to the worst, we could give up . . . 12 . . . give me time and I would find . . .
- 91 *1 . . . explained . . . to my solicitor, he would be able . . . me . . . than he could. 2 . . . would take . . . if I spoke . . . him myself. 3 . . . changed my job, I'd probably earn . . . 4 . . . went . . . he'd soon tell me . . . 5 . . . bought . . . , we'd certainly need . . . 6 . . . came . . . , we'd show . . . 7 . . . would take . . . if we agreed . . . 8 . . . took . . . , they would change . . . me. 9 . . . he read . . . , he'd begin . . . was trying . . . 10 . . . we all pooled . . . , we'd have . . .
- 92 1 This fact is very well known. 2 The theatre was opened only last month. 3 It will soon be forgotten. 4 The answers must be written in ink. 5 Two of my books have been taken. 6 The vacancy has already been filled. 7 What should be done in such cases? 8 Was anything interesting said? 9 Was the situation never made clear to you? 10 Milk should be kept in a refrigerator. 11 I don't think it can be done. 12 He would undoubtedly have been killed if he hadn't . . . 13 The work must be finished by seven o'clock. 14 This type of computer is now being manufactured in many European countries. 15 The secret could not possibly have been known. 16 Have all the necessary arrangements been made? 17 Fortunately, nothing had been said about it. 18 All orders will be promptly executed (or executed promptly). 19 The man was kept in custody. 20 Are all the rooms regularly cleaned (or cleaned regularly)?
- 93 1 was destroyed; 2 had been bitten/was given; 3 be respected; 4 are being demolished; 5 have been instructed; 6 was saved; 7 is expected to be declared; 8 is being done; 9 was being victimized; 10 was evicted; 11 had been thought; 12 will have been built; 13 be discontinued; 14 being cross-examined; 15 Having been threatened; 16 being treated; 17 to have been informed/had been withdrawn; 18 are asked/have been given/be rectified; 19 not being offered; 20 having been found.

- 94 1 will be added to; 2 was sent to/(was) distributed among; 3 has been arranged between or for or by; 4 had been involved in; 5 to be left in; 6 have been consulted on; 7 be kept out; 8 will not be felt till (until) or before; will have been exhausted; 9 have now been converted into; 10 will not be known for; 11 be defeated by; 12 to be closed for or during; 13 be switched off at or before or after; 14 have been handled with; 15 will be met at.
- 95 1 It must be pulled out. 2 It has to be washed up. 3 They should be pointed out. 4 I might be (or get) knocked down. 5 It would be blown out. 6 He may be let off. 7 They are often broken off. 8 It is held up. 9 They are laid off. 10 It is taken down (and may be used in court). 11 It must be given up. 12 It must have been taken down (or away). 13 It could have been picked up. 14 The meeting could be put off till a later date.
- 96 1 The search was given up . . . 2 That ought to have been pointed out to me . . . 3 That question wasn't brought up . . . 4 The matter should be looked into. 5 . . . that the child had been well brought up. 6 Our visit had to be put off . . . 7 . . . that your house had been broken into. 8 Don't speak until you're spoken to. 9 His request . . . was turned down by . . . 10 Every penny you spent must be accounted for. 11 This stamp hasn't been struck on . . . 12 The truth of what I'm saying will be borne out by events. 13 We were held up at the Customs for . . . 14 How can the desired result be brought about? 15 He hates being made fun of.
- 97 1 are or are being or were or were being or will be turned out; 2 had been or would be provided for; 3 is being done up; 4 being taken on; 5 is always being told off; 6 be drawn up; 7 will be broken off; 8 would be looked into; 9 had been badly let down; 10 having been blotted out.
- 98 1 The oldest councillor was given the freedom . . . 2 Access to the . . . was denied to . . . 3 The child was shown how . . . 4 He was declared 'persona non grata' and was allowed . . . 5 He was given . . . 6 Why wasn't he offered the job? 7 Weren't you promised a rise . . . ? 8 He was left a legacy . . . 9 . . . stamps, he found he had been sold forgeries. 10 What were you paid for . . . ? 11 He should be told never . . . 12 You were asked to meet . . . 13 Shall I be sent the details? 14 The goods will be sent to you . . . 15 That boy must be taught a lesson!
- 99 *1 He should be given a sedative. 2 He is paid a salary. 3 A witness is asked questions by a lawyer (who is acting for the opposite side). 4 I might be sent a prospectus. 5 He is given an anaesthetic. 6 I would most resent being told that I was a fool. 7 I would like to be offered the opportunity of visiting Moscow. 8 In England, an MP is paid about £17,000 p.a. 9 I would need to be lent some money. 10 I was taught French.
- 100 1 He is said to be . . . 2 This surgeon is considered to be . . . 3 Some redundancies in the Company are now thought to be . . . 4 The statements he had made were proved to be . . . 5 The delegation was understood to be keen . . . 6 The Chancellor is believed to be thinking . . . 7 The electricity supply industry is expected to be running . . . 8 Several . . . manufacturers are reported to be planning . . . 9 The brewers are expected to raise . . . 10 The drug was claimed to produce . . . 11 The police are said to have acted . . . 12 The Prime Minister was alleged to have misled . . . 13 The Government is believed to have had . . . 14 The explosion was believed to have been caused . . . 15 The . . . equipment is presumed to have been put . . . 16 The driver is thought to have had both legs broken . . .

- 101 1 You should have central heating installed. . . 2 He is having his wife's portrait painted. 3 They got married . . . 4 . . . they got divorced. 5 . . . if you don't want to have your licence endorsed again. 6 . . . we had to have it cut down. 7 . . . mothers to get their children vaccinated. 8 This book has had all the answers written in. 9 . . . optician to have her eyes examined. 10 The champion would never have got beaten if . . .
- 102 1 The fact that such a storm . . . was raised by the new scheme means that it can't have been properly explained to . . . 2 He was warned by . . . not to let himself be led astray by . . . 3 . . . that too much time was being taken up in . . . 4 The boy's rudeness was put down to his having been spoiled by . . . 5 Not until later was it discovered that the picture had been stolen. 6 Never before had anyone been sent to prison for . . . 7 Only in this way could the law be made . . . 8 It was said that no agreement could be reached on . . . 9 The rebellion was put down by . . . and martial law was declared. 10 He wanted the information to be treated as confidential . . . 11 Had I been told that the subject . . . was to be brought up at . . . 12 He dislikes being thought a fool by . . . 13 After having been ignored by . . . 14 Should it be proved beyond doubt that the fire was caused by an accident, the man who is at present being held (by the police) on suspicion of arson will, naturally, be released. 15 On being informed that he was wanted by the police, the man realized that he had been betrayed by . . .
- 103 1 The fire brigade finally got the fire under control, but not before it had caused extensive damage. 2 Don't let your failure depress you. 3 In view of the widespread concern (that) the community feels at the plan to build . . . village, the local Council has decided to hold a . . . 4 Thieves had broken into the house and (had) stolen two . . . 5 Only after the scientists had subjected the new . . . tests did the Company put it on the market . . . 6 The leader hadn't thought out the plan at all well. 7 The Board ought to have made it quite clear to the shareholders, before they held . . . meeting, that they would not allow them to vote for . . . 8 You should have obtained your . . . before you made any decision to take . . . 9 The army authorities needn't have caused him . . . distress by telling him that . . . action, as they later discovered that they had made a mistake as to . . . 10 The reporter withheld information about the source from which he had obtained . . .
- 104 *An atheist is a person who believes that there is no God. An actor . . . who acts on the stage or for cinema films. A journalist . . . who writes for a newspaper. A barber . . . who cuts men's hair. A newsagent . . . who sells newspapers. An MP . . . who represents electors in the House of Commons. A spokesman . . . who speaks on behalf of a group. An eyewitness . . . who can bear witness from what he has himself seen. A lawyer. . . who practises law. A stockbroker . . . who buys and sells shares, often on behalf of others. A greengrocer . . . who sells fruit and vegetables. A teetotaler . . . who never drinks alcoholic liquor.

105 A person who steals things is called a thief. . . beer is called a brewer. . . clothes is called a tailor. . . plans and drawings . . . draftsman (or draughtsman). . . examinations . . . examiner. . . shares in a company . . . shareholder. . . foreign languages . . . linguist. . . theatre regularly . . . theatre-goer. . . public house . . . publican. . . bicycle. . . cyclist. . . office or position . . . nominee. . . hospital. . . patient. . . plays . . . playwright. . . House of Lords . . . peer. . . concerts, etc., . . . reviewer.

106 1 The pipeline that (or which) carries the town's water supplies has been severed. 2 The exhibition my friend took me to see was not. . . 3 . . . things a computer can do is to save. . . 4 . . . an issue which (or that) raises strong emotions. 5 . . . in the sale which (or that) took place. . . 6 . . . that many men who (or that) went on strike were in fact willing. . . 7 . . . a system which, he said, had won. . . 8 The gales which (or that) swept . . . last night caused widespread damage. 9 . . . prices which (or that) compare . . . 10 Is the offer you made last week still open? 11 . . . for the goods we buy from abroad. 12 . . . wreck which (or that) had lam. . . 13 . . . at a price young couples can afford to pay. 14 . . . very person who will do the job quickly. 15 . . . is a fact of life people have grown accustomed to facing.

107 *1 . . . man that/who commits such crimes should. . . 2 Laws that/which have outlived their usefulness should. . . 3 The yacht that/which started last arrived first. 4 The house that/which stood in the path of the new motorway has. . . 5 . . . the photographs we took in Austria? 6 . . . man I've ever spoken to. 7 . . . anything you ask him to. 8 The man you saw talking to her was. . . 9 . . . call she has received this evening. 10 Nothing I do is. . . 11 . . . anyone that/who will listen attentively. 12 . . . someone that/who speaks his mind.

108 *1 . . . a teacher that/who understands their problems. 2 . . . students who/that have a sense of humour. 3 . . . work you've done? 4 . . . food one gets in England is not. . . 5 . . . uncles who/that give them presents. 6 . . . women who/that chatter incessantly. 7 . . . men who/that are in love with their cars. 8 The excuse the student gave was. . . 9 . . . anyone among the audience here tonight that/who puts any faith in the promises of the present Government. 10 . . . a man that/who believes in the value of self-discipline. 11 . . . people that/who criticize others behind their backs. 12 . . . country that/which has long been popular as a tourist centre.

109 *1 . . . are wearing look rather expensive. 2 I returned the book you lent me. 3 . . . took last year was much too short. 4 . . . complained about was very inexperienced. 5 . . . cooks is delicious. 6 . . . have just bought was surprisingly cheap. 7 What do you think of the clothes the English wear? 8 The audience clearly disagreed with every word the speaker said. 9 I hope you took the medicine the doctor prescribed for you. 10 . . . received were of very uneven quality.

110 *1 He was expelled from every school he attended. 2 . . . asked puzzled the teacher. 3 Did you follow the advice your lawyer gave you? 4 . . . wish to interview are all aged between 22–25. 5 Is there anything I can do to help? 6 Nobody liked the plans the architect had drawn up. 7 Is he the Mr Smith you were telling me about? 8 I haven't yet met the girl my brother intends to marry. 9 . . . had so carefully made had to be abandoned. 10 The London you describe is very different from the London I remember.

111 1 . . . dispute, which disrupted . . . lasted, has now been settled. 2 . . . the Cabinet, which now . . . members, will be reduced. . . 3 . . . policemen, who are . . . helpfulness, were sent. . . 4 . . . estate, which is situated. . . 5 Don Giovanni, which opened . . . night, looks like . . . 6 . . . London, which will . . . week, contains. . . 7 . . . first speech, which was broadcast, was. . . second, which he gave before. . . 8 . . . weather, which they often associate with fog and rain and which sometimes makes. . . England, is not so bad. . . 9 . . . Parliament, which cost. . . build, were begun. . . 10 . . . Corporation, which had begun . . . 1922 as the British Broadcasting Company, launched. . . or. . . Corporation, which, as the British Broadcasting Company, had begun. . . 1922, launched. . .

112 1 . . . speaker, who spoke. . . 2 . . . job, which would be. . . 3 . . . projectors, which are. . . 4 . . . type, which have been. . . 5 . . . The MP, who had failed . . . occasion, was disowned. . . 6 . . . garage, which gives. . . 7 . . . manner, which to our way of thinking was. . . 8 . . . new car, which seats. . . luggage, will be very popular. . . 9 . . . microfilm, which is. . . 10 . . . goods, which were. . .

113 *1 . . . book, which was published last week, is about. . . 2 . . . Company, which specializes in Shakespearean productions, is. . . 3 . . . car, which has an aerodynamic design, should. . . 4 His father, who set up in business ten years ago, has. . . 5 . . . code, which has been thoroughly revised in the light of new standards, should. . . 6 . . . bicycle, which could yield some important clues, has. . . 7 . . . application, which he had sent off as soon as the advertisement appeared. 8 . . . Race, which is generally televised, takes. . . 9 . . . meeting, which was attended by two rival groups, broke up. . . 10 . . . flowers, which grow in a variety of wonderful colours, are. . .

114 *1 . . . scheme, which we shall introduce in the new year. 2 . . . Dover, which can be seen from France on a clear day, are. . . 3 . . . Conrad, who was Polish by birth, wrote. . . 4 . . . Cambridge, which traces its beginnings to the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, comprises. . . 5 . . . lawyer, who spoke with great conviction, made. . . 6 . . . water, which is essential to life, does not. . . 7 . . . Street, which is the centre of the newspaper world in Britain, is. . . 8 . . . tides, which were abnormally high, . . . 9 . . . breakfast, which is often quite a substantial meal. 10 . . . harvest, which promised to be a very good one till the rain came, has. . .

115 1 . . . Russell, whose philosophical . . . world, died. . . 2 . . . President, whose administration . . . months, is unlikely. . . 3 . . . lecture, the subject of which was. . . 4 . . . driver, on whose shoulders rested. . . accident, was sent. . . 5 . . . Nelson, in whose memory a column . . . Square, was famous

... 6 ... the man without whose generosity your Society ... 7 ... Smith, whose letter ... yesterday, should check ... 8 ... hospital, many of whose patients are ... 9 ... this car, whose exterior dimensions ... unchanged, gives ... 10 ... Company, whose results ... forecast, and whose long-term recovery ... 11 ... men whose contracts had been ... 12 ... Government, over some of whose policies they have ...

116 (Note: Although the prepositions could come at the beginning of the relative clauses in every case, the answers suggest the most likely position.) 1 ... the person I'm sharing a flat with a very congenial ... 2 ... address you should write to. 3 ... man you can absolutely depend on. 4 ... the person I gave the money to. 5 ... job you can take your time over, because ... 6 ... the pupils he was responsible for had suddenly ... or ... the pupils for whom he was responsible had suddenly ... 7 ... businessmen I spoke to recently thought ... 8 ... a medium through which ideas ... 9 ... space during which both men and management ... 10 ... a plateau around which stood a circle ... 11 ... a basis on which talks ... 12 ... structure under which the men ... 13 ... model on which reliable tests ... 14 ... disease in which high sugar consumption ...

117 *1 Which is the cupboard the wine glasses are kept in? 2 I don't like the material the curtains are made of. 3 Have you read the book this quotation comes from? 4 I can't find the cup this saucer belongs to. 5 What's the name of the programme we're listening to? 6 ... asked for. 7 ... can speak to? 8 She bought the house her daughter now lives in. 9 What's the name of the school you went to? 10 ... we had got into was ...

118 1 ... passengers, four of whom were British, all ... 2 ... stations, all of which are ... 3 ... questions, the answers to which proved ... 4 ... force, the composition and power of which would be ... 5 ... by-pass, by means of which heavy congestion ... relieved, have now ... 6 ... proposals, the more radical of which will ... 7 ... staff, without whose unremitting support it would not ... 8 ... taxation, the study of whose provisions will be ... 9 ... supporters, among whom are some leading politicians ... 10 ... constituencies, each of which returns ...

119 1 ... course, which was ... 2 ... heating, which should make ... 3 ... bed, which explains ... 4 ... everything, which I thought ... 5 ... secretary, who was supposed ... 6 ... meeting, which was ... 7 ... repair, which means ... 8 ... lawyer, who advised ... 9 ... thoroughly, which was ... 10 ... resignation, which was ... 11 ... licence, in addition to which he had crossed ... 12 ... encore, at which the audience burst ... 13 ... tournament, despite which, however, he managed ... 14 ... next year, some allowance for which must be made ... 15 ... later, by which time, however, the thieves ...

120 1 It's quality (that) we need, not ... 2 It's a new sense of purpose that the Government ... 3 ... revealed that it was poisonous mushrooms that had caused ... 4 It wasn't until ... school that I realized ... 5 It is only by constant practice that you ... 6 It was two ... journalists that uncovered ... 7 It's his mother (that/who) he takes after, ... 8 It is cheap rented accommodation that is now ... 9 It is in London and ... cities that cheap ... 10 It was when the police arrived that the trouble ... 11 It's because he doesn't work hard enough that he doesn't ... 12 It was in order to warn ... happening that I telephoned you.

121 1 The days when you could travel ... 2 ... America, where he advocated ... 3 ... times when everyone ... 4 ... a situation where you know ... 5 ... past when he had experienced ... 6 ... 1586, where, some time later, he became ... 7 ... reason why you should take ... 8 ... roads, where it was possible ... 9 ... a policy where premiums are related ... 10 ... country where there is ... 11 ... raised, when it was ... 12 ... (as may well be the case) ... 13 ... and such friends as he has ... 14 You have the same problem ... car as we had ... 15 ... situation, as we later discovered.

122 1 What the speaker said ... 2 ... explain what you have ... 3 ... remembered what they had learned. 4 What you're asking ... 5 He's what's known as ... 6 ... just what I didn't want ... 7 What amazes me is ... 8 ... be what you're ... 9 Mind what you say ... 10 ... marked out what seemed ...

123 *1 ... what he was talking about. 2 ... what eventually happened? 3 ... what he had paid for it. 4 ... what we have just discussed? 5 ... what you did? 6 ... what he intended to do. 7 ... what I have just suggested? 8 What I can't understand is ... 9 ... what other people think about this problem. 10 ... What most surprised her teachers was ...

124 *1 following such a course of action; 2 doing the same thing day after day; 3 bullying younger boys. 4 walking unaccompanied in the park at night; 5 bringing up his children. 6 pointing out other people's faults; 7 disobeying the orders of a superior officer; 8 locking the building at night? 9 saving money, instead of hoping to win it on football pools; 10 satisfying the demands of the local residents; 11 going to the Arctic for a holiday; 12 doing as they had originally planned.

125 *1 eating starchy foods; 2 going abroad; 3 making school furniture; 4 giving the jury clear directions; 5 growing their own vegetables; 6 putting everything back in its place; 7 introducing the new topic immediately; 8 entering my house; 9 deciding whether to take legal action; 10 swimming in that particular part of the sea/being carried away by dangerous currents; 11 putting the assistant to a great deal of trouble/buying anything; 12 taking fewer subjects/getting a good result in the examination.

126 1 The customer accused the cashier of trying ... 2 Many people succeed in passing ... 3 Concert goers are asked to refrain from smoking ... 4 The solicitor dissuaded his client from taking ... 5 If ... you can't blame him for making ... 6 The hijackers prevented the passengers from leaving ... 7 The student apologized for missing (or having missed) ... 8 Visitors to the zoo are prohibited from feeding ... 9 Despite ... the party bore insisted on telling me ... 10 The police suspect the owner of the store of starting ...

- 127 *1 meeting; 2 eating; 3 having seen; 4 getting married; 5 speaking; 6 staying; 7 smoking; 8 increasing; 9 travelling; 10 following.
- 128 1 trying/answer; 2 building; 3 passing; 4 becoming; 5 trying/make; 6 having; 7 dislike/living; 8 winning; 9 try/discuss/speaking; 10 teaching; 11 increasing; 12 travelling.
- 129 *1 losing; 2 redecorating; 3 telling; 4 making; 5 laughing; 6 waiting; 7 speaking; 8 listening; 9 reading; 10 being sent; 11 worrying; 12 crying; 13 travelling; 14 arriving; 15 taking.
- 130 1 receiving or having received; 2 seeing or having seen; 3 receiving or having received; 4 my trying; 5 actually promising; 6 the Government setting up; 7 there being; 8 being; 9 his being; 10 him or his ever agreeing.
- 131 *1 people begging in the streets; 2 telling me to mind my own business; 3 making a decision; 4 inviting him to the party/meeting lots of strangers; 5 my getting drunk last night/reminding him of a few of his own past lapses; 6 mentioning it/having friends of your own nationality; 7 meeting you; 8 being away from home a lot? 9 buying your things there/waiting in queues; 10 getting married; 11 coming forward to give evidence; 12 going to Scotland/visiting Wales; 13 discussing the question with him; 14 paying a whole month's rent in advance; 15 agreeing to cooperate?
- 132 1 to solve; 2 to have 3; to be; 4 not to understand; 5 to resign; 6 to do; 7 never to follow; 8 to know; 9 to look into; 10 to meet.
- 133 *1 to do the work unpaid; 2 to have the operation performed? 3 to bring out the trapped miners; 4 to leave their homes; 5 to call at the shop/to pick up the goods myself; 6 to visit it again; 7 to ask him for help; 8 to snow quite a lot; 9 to see my driving licence; 10 to be.
- 134 *1 We can't afford to waste time discussing the matter. 2 The students appeared to understand most of the lecture. 3 The men have decided not to work overtime in future; 4 The contractors paid a heavy penalty for failing to complete the building on time. 5 The shop assistant hastened to apologize for appearing rude. 6 By his great presence of mind, the driver managed to avoid a serious accident. 7 Do you think the firm will offer to repair the damage caused by one of their employees? 8 I'm sure he won't refuse to listen to what I have to say. 9 Having been asked to say a few words on the subject, the man proceeded to make a long speech about something entirely different. 10 The shipyard undertook to finish the job within 6 months.
- 135 *1 to make; 2 to exercise; 3 to state; 4 to rejoin; 5 to do; 6 to admit; 7 to investigate; 8 to strike; 9 to follow; 10 to postpone.
- 136 1 The letter summoned me to appear . . . 2 The notice warned the public not to bathe . . . was flying. 3 . . . a note reminding him to lock . . . 4 A notice . . . terminal instructed passengers to check in . . . 5 My old friend pressed me to have . . . I went. 6 The teacher told the student to pay . . . he
- was doing. 7 She implored her friend not to tell her husband. 8 I invited the new member to join . . . 9 My friend encouraged me to take . . . matter. 10 The letter directed him to make his way . . . and (to) wait . . .
- 137 *1 to make such a cutting remark? 2 to run the new department; 3 to speak English? 4 to take him to the nearest police station; 5 to abandon our cherished plan; 6 to take up a life of crime; 7 to spend the night at the airport; 8 to do the clearing up; 9 to check the pressure of the tyres; 10 to take a holiday myself; 11 to support many deserving causes; 12 to give up hope completely.
- 138 *1 The manager has chosen Smith to lead . . . America. 2 I didn't mean you to tell anyone. 3 I didn't expect the Robinsons to invite us to dinner. 4 Will you help me (to) finish the work? 5 He expects everyone to be punctual. 6 The firm will probably ask him to resign. 7 I want you to give me some information. 8 The police wish to interview two men. 9 The man elected to go to prison. 10 He didn't mean to make you unhappy.
- 139 (Note: the answers given are as spoken originally by Dame Mary Warnock. Alternatives may be possible in a few cases) having; not having; to be asked to do; thinking; to get up; staying; to be told; get up; to go; to lose; to have; teaching; to fit; to come; thinking; do.
- 140 (Note: the alternatives given in brackets are acceptable, but are less likely than the first suggestion) 1 to keep; 2 convincing (or to be convinced); 3 to come; 4 causing (or having caused); 5 to take or taking; 6 smoking; 7 him or his saying (or having said); 8 you to see; 9 to be; 10 you to consult (or your consulting); 11 you to go; 12 the holder to use (or the holder's using); 13 to swim (or swimming); 14 learning or to learn; 15 to watch; 16 to speak; 17 driving; 18 their members to think/deciding to strike; 19 to pass/to mention (or mentioning); 20 to answer.
- 141 1 me to say; 2 him to think; 3 locking (or having locked); 4 his listeners to give; 5 causing or having caused; 6 all cars to be regularly tested; 7 him to drop or his dropping; 8 him to try.
- 142 *1 mentioning it to him; 2 to keep your appointment last night; 3 to revise much of our work or telling how important the examination was; 4 completely overhauling or to be completely overhauled; 5 to discuss your private affairs; 6 travelling by ship to travelling by plane; 7 pay all those bills soon; 8 stay out late; 9 getting involved in anything dishonest; 10 to cross swords with him; 11 to deal briefly with the remainder; 12 doing the same job/working in an office; 13 doing it the way I suggested; 14 to do something constructive.
- 143 *1 I enter or entering the building; 2 making those disparaging remarks about him; 3 fight or fighting the blaze; 4 beating on our necks; 5 feeling better; 6 come in; 7 taking or to take the man's wallet; 8 making their way slowly towards the summit; 9 hidden under a pile of papers; 10 reading her diary; 11 put right; 12 leave or leaving the building; 13 to be broken;

14 hanging with my coat; 15 walking towards the ticket barrier; 16 waiting a very long time; 17 scorching; 18 talking for ever; 19 sitting on a makeshift raft; 20 approaching.

144 *1 tell us; 2 go; 3 get him down; 4 come back and put things right; 5 cycle to school; 6 take a breathalyser test; 7 deter us; 8 decide what's best for you; 9 follow the instructions of the official leadership; 10 see things in a totally different light.

145 *1 I was made to say my prayers. 2 I was made to get dressed. 3 I was made to wash my hands. 4 I was made to clean my teeth. 5 I was made to go to church. 6 I was made to apologize. 7 I was made to write a 'thank you' letter. 8 I was made to tidy it up. 9 I was made to go to the doctor. 10 I was made to work harder.

146 1 that their informant was; 2 that the situation is; 3 that it was; 4 that it is; 5 that what he said was; 6 that it was; 7 that his long-term optimism was; 8 suspects that the Government is hiding; 9 that the ascent had taken; 10 that his evidence had been; 11 that earlier theories were; 12 that they had been stolen.

147 1 declared the book to be; 2 found the overhead projector to be; 3 thought the film to be; 4 considered the speaker to have overstated; 5 showed the man's alibi to be; 6 assumed the construction of such a building to be/believed it to be; 7 revealed himself to be; 8 knew him to be; 9 discovered £20,000 worth of precious stones to be; 10 thought it to be.

148 1 Having witnessed the crime; 2 Learning (or Having learned); 3 saying; 4 protesting violently; 5 When visiting a strange city; 6 Although receiving general support from the House; 7 intending to take their cars with them to the Continent; 8 He strikes me as being an intelligent man. 9 Having (now) heard your side of the question; 10 Having been warned; 11 Judging by what the critics say; 12 Spring having (now) come.

149 1 Being interested to see what would happen, I stayed . . . 2 I found . . . sale, the best bargains having already been snapped up . . . 3 Deciding that it would be . . . persisted, the rescue party put off . . . 4 Having been brought up in the belief . . . sinful, he now leads . . . 5 The children . . . holiday, the school having been closed because of . . . 6 Even allowing for the fact that . . . under-rehearsed, last night's concert . . . 7 He was very angry . . . down, having had it serviced . . . 8 No one was surprised . . . Bank Rate, it having already been confidently expected . . . 9 The man . . . work, having been passed over in favour . . . 10 We decided . . . Oxford, it being then the time . . . vacation and there being few students . . . (or . . . vacation and few students being in residence). 11 He had to . . . house, the Bank being unable to lend . . . 12 The police . . . boy wandering about the docks, (and) apparently looking . . .

150 *1 . . . , still firmly maintaining that he was innocent. 2 Having had some experience in these matters, . . . 3 . . . hidden in a disused cellar. 4 While digging the foundations of a new office block, . . . 5 . . . driving on icy roads. 6 Having been told what English food is like, . . . 7 . . . going towards the river bank. 8 . . . having been erected on three sides of it. 9 . . . stating that their earlier reports were quite wrong. 10 . . . shooting pheasants out of season. 11 Having promised to give him every assistance, . . . 12 . . . waving goodbye to friends and relatives.

151 *1 . . . , they decided to stay at home. 2 . . . , he was even more anxious to get hold of a copy. 3 . . . , he gets very ill-tempered. 4 They decided to re-visit Edinburgh, . . . 5 . . . , I think he should be let off with a caution. 6 . . . , the matter doesn't seem quite so serious. 7 The champion decided to withdraw from the tennis tournament, . . . 8 A lion escaped from the zoo, . . . 9 I haven't yet considered the questions . . . 10 . . . , the gambler tried to borrow money from his friends at the casino. 11 I borrowed a few pounds from a friend, . . . 12 . . . , the English are less insular than they used to be.

152 *1a the judge sentenced him to six years' hard labour; b is a popular Sunday activity in London; 2a I would say that the Government are more worried than they will admit; b is a very difficult art; 3a the climbers took several risks during their hasty descent; b requires great patience and understanding; 4a the cross-Channel swimmer approached Cap Griz Nez four hours after leaving the English coast. b is for some people more enjoyable than going to a swimming-pool. 5a the workmen unearthed a hoard of Roman coins; b is not my idea of fun; 6a the champion soon left his challengers behind; b demands more concentration than daytime driving; 7a John was interrupted several times; b generally results in mistakes in his work; 8a the motorist drew up at the next filling station; b often means making several preliminary attempts; 9a the soloist broke a string; b requires a good ear; 10a I noticed a suspicious character loitering near the house; b was most unexpected.

153 1 getting/to know/judging or having judged; 2 acting/loitering; 3 you or your going/to accompany or accompanying; 4 doing/doing; 5 to go/sit or to sit/listening; 6 doing; 7 to explain; 8 switching; 9 him or his saying/me borrow/paying; 10 disappointing or to disappoint/to go/decorating; 11 you to wait/deciding/to accept; 12 joining/to have/him showing.

154 1 you cheating/stay/to do; 2 blaming/to do; 3 being left or to be left/having been accustomed/having; 4 complain/to do/putting; 5 to think/speaking; 6 lending/to pay/forgetting/to remember; 7 making up/attending; 8 your or you being/to rely/his letting; 9 having; 10 having/looking/to read or reading/to prevent/saying.

155 1 No sooner had he put down; 2 Little did the thieves realize; 3 The doctor . . . that on no account should he return; 4 Not for one moment would I doubt; 5 Not until many years later did the whole truth; 6 So dense was the smoke that; 7 Such was his fear; 8 Rarely have we seen; 9 To such a pitch had their hopes been raised that; 10 Never again should such a situation be allowed; 11 Only when . . . passengers did the pilot agree; 12 Only if . . . agreement will a lasting peace be established.

156 1 Under no circumstances should the back of this radio be removed; 2 No doubt he has good reason; 3 In very few cases has such a major operation proved; 4 In a few cases, it has been found that; 5 It was only yesterday that he mentioned; 6 nor would he pose for a photograph; 7 On one or two occasions, students have been known; 8 The police admitted that seldom had they had to deal; 9 The driver admitted that not only was he not insured, but . . . 10 It was as long as four years ago that the two countries first began; 11 Not until quite recently, however, did the talks appear; 12 On all but a few issues there is now.

157 1 No longer do remote villages have . . . ; 2 Seldom does the temperature fall . . . ; 3 Never had he been in . . . ; 4 Only by working hard (or Only if you work hard) will you succeed. 5 No sooner did we step outside the door than it . . . ; 6 Under no circumstances would I have agreed . . . ; 7 Little do you care about . . . ; 8 At no time had the scientist been . . . ; 9 Hardly had I got inside . . . when . . . ; 10 So alike were the twins that few people . . .

158 *1 . . . , but not even then did everyone understand. 2 So complicated was the machine that only a skilled operator could use it. 3 Only three men know the true facts of the situation. 4 . . . that no sooner had he tried to use the machine than it stopped working. 5 Neither the driver nor his passengers realized what danger they had been in. 6 . . . nor on the previous one did anyone raise this particular problem. 7 . . . of discussion did the delegates finally reach agreement. 8 . . . of discussion that the delegates finally reached agreement.

159 1 ^aHe expressed his thanks^b. (naturally): ^aOf course, he expressed his thanks; ^bHe expressed his thanks in a natural manner. 2 ^aThe teacher^a thought the student was^b not intelligent. (obviously): ^aIt is clear that the teacher thought the student was not intelligent; ^bIn the teacher's opinion, the student's lack of intelligence was obvious; ^cThe student was intelligent, but his intelligence wasn't immediately apparent. 3 There were^a a few passengers^b on the bus^c on week-days^c. (only): ^aonly emphasizes the fewness of the passengers; ^bimplies but not on other forms of transport; ^cimplies but not at week-ends. 4 ^aThe speaker had not argued his case at all^b (clearly): ^aIt was clear that the speaker had not in any way supported his case with arguments; ^bThe speaker had argued his case, but his arguments weren't very clear. 5 ^aSome club members were^b horrified at^c the suggestion of^a small changes. (even): ^aOther people were horrified, but also, and rather surprisingly, some club members; ^bClub members had other feelings, but also went to the extreme of being horrified; ^cThe suggestion alone was enough to horrify some club members, not to mention the changes themselves; ^dOne might have expected some club members to be horrified at the suggestion of big changes, but, rather surprisingly, small changes were enough to horrify them. 6 I^a remember his being able to play football^b. (well): ^aI remember this clearly; ^bHe was a good footballer. 7 The rescue party^a managed to take^b ten of the crew off the ship^c before it sank. (just): ^aThey managed with difficulty (they nearly didn't succeed); ^bThey took ten of the crew and no more; ^cThey rescued the crew immediately before the ship sank. 8 I^a don't^b want to put myself under an obligation to him^c by asking a favour. (particularly): ^aI am very anxious not to put myself under an obligation; ^bI would rather not do so if it can be avoided; ^cI don't want to put myself under an obligation to him in any way, and least of all by asking a favour. 9 I^a think he will find he has been^b rash in investing his money in those shares. (rather): ^aI am inclined to think this; ^bHe will find he was not positively rash, but more rash than was wise. 10 Frank^a has^{a,b} decided^{b,c} to spend a few days in Austria on his way to Switzerland. (also): ^aIn addition to other people Frank, too, has decided this; ^bFrank has already made other decisions, this being an additional one; ^cApart from spending time elsewhere, he will spend some time in Austria too.

160 1 When I mentioned the money involved, he^a undertook to do the work^b. (promptly): ^aHe immediately said he would do the work; ^bHe promised that there would be no delay in doing the work. 2 He^a appreciated that my idea was^b a good one, but he still wasn't willing to lend me his support. (quite): ^aHe completely understood or agreed; ^bMy idea was good to a certain extent; ^cHe wasn't completely willing. 3 Do you^a think you'll^b have enough money at the end of the month to take a short holiday? (still): ^aDo you continue to think what you previously thought; ^bYou have enough money now, but will this situation remain unchanged at the end of the month? 4 ^aI should ask him^b what he meant by his statement. (personally): ^aIf I were you, I . . . ; ^bYou need to see him in person, rather than to write or telephone. 5 Have you^a made up your mind about what you^b want to do when you leave school? (really): ^aHave you taken a firm decision; ^bHave you decided what would most interest you? 6 ^aHe had^a the grace^b to admit that he was^c partly in the wrong. (at least): ^aPerhaps he could have done more by way of apology, but he did do something; ^bHe went so far as to admit that he was wrong, though he could perhaps have gone further than this; ^cHe wouldn't admit that his conduct was completely wrong, but he went so far as to admit he was partly wrong. 7 ^aHe will explain quite clearly^a what he intends to do^b. (in future): ^a*In future* tells us when he will explain; ^b*In future* tells us when he will do what he intends. 8 The student^a overheard the teacher saying^b that his last piece of homework was^c better. (distinctly): ^aThe student heard quite clearly; ^bThe teacher spoke very clearly; ^cThe improvement in his work could be clearly seen. 9 ^aA spokesman for the bus company pointed out that^b buses couldn't^c run^b on Sundays^c because of the unwillingness of staff to work overtime. (normally): ^aGenerally speaking, buses couldn't run on Sundays; ^bBuses could run on Sundays, but not according to their usual timetable. 10 As the solicitor^a said, the money had^b been divided among the brothers and sisters of the dead man, who had no children. (rightly): ^aThe solicitor was quite correct in saying this; ^bThe money had been divided in accordance with the law or the dead man's will.

161 They were stock-taking in her . . . it was terrible. She'd been working . . . and she couldn't do . . . It wouldn't have seemed so bad if it'd been raining—she hated (or hates) having . . . when it was (or is) fine . . . It had been just the same the day before. She'd started . . . she was (or had been) dropping . . . She'd asked . . . she could leave . . . as she'd worked . . . the day before, but he'd said (or he said) she had to . . . She said she'd be thankful when it was all over.

- 162 1 I was asked who I'd come to the party with. 2 Someone wanted to know if I'd come. . . . 3 I was asked why I wasn't drinking. 4 I was asked if I'd like 5 Someone asked me where I lived (or live). 6 I was asked if I knew 7 Someone wanted to know when I'd arrived. 8 I was asked what I did 9 I was asked if I'd seen a marvellous . . . the previous night. 10 I was asked if I'd been watching 11 I was asked how I liked my coffee. . . . 12 Someone wanted to know what time it was. 13 I was asked what my phone number was (or I was asked for my phone number). 14 Someone asked if he could ring me the next day. 15 Someone wanted to know how I would get . . .
- 163 Free composition
- 164 'I like quilts because it's easy to make the bed.' 'They're warm.' 'They're light.' 'One problem is that they sometimes tend to slip off the bed.' 'Sometimes they're too warm.' 'Sometimes they're too cold.' 'I don't have a quilt because I'm happy with the blankets I already have.' 'I like to be tucked in firmly at night. You can't do that with quilts.' 'Quilts are expensive.'
- 165 1 boasted; 2 suggested; 3 shouted; 4 claimed; 5 admitted; 6 protested; 7 whispered; 8 objected; 9 muttered; 10 exclaimed; 11 agreed; 12 insisted.
- 166 1 He boasted that he could speak . . . 2 He suggested that they (should) go . . . that evening. 3 The teacher shouted at the students to stop the noise . . . 4 The man claimed that the car I was driving was his property. 5 The boy admitted that he had broken . . . his catapult. 6 The man protested that they couldn't take . . . he knew his rights. 7 His fiancée whispered that she would . . . him. 8 The treasurer objected that they didn't . . . 9 The student muttered that the teacher didn't know . . . was talking about. 10 She exclaimed what a surprise it was . . . him there that day. 11 He agreed that if the weather was bad they couldn't go. 12 She insisted that we come (or came) the next day if we couldn't come that same day.
- 167 *1 'No one ever takes my advice.' 2 'You don't call that thing a car, do you?' 3 'I— I didn't mean to be rude.' 4 'You might try minding your own business.' 5 'The meeting will begin at 7.30.' 6 'You have to push this button first, and then the machine will work.' 7 'If you don't like my way of doing things, you can get on with the job yourself.' 8 'I've never seen anything like it.' 9 'You shall have the money back by the end of the week.' 10 'That's the fifth time I've heard that joke.' 11 'I see that you were right, after all.' 12 'I've just seen a murder committed.'
- 168 *1 He complained that no one . . . took his . . . 2 He made a sneering comment about my car. 3 He stammered that he hadn't meant . . . 4 He told me snappishly that I might try . . . my own. . . 5 He announced that the meeting would . . . 6 He explained that you had to push this button . . . myself work. 7 He retorted that if I didn't like his . . . , I could get on . . . myself. 8 He declared that he'd never seen . . . 9 He promised that I should have . . . 10 He said with a groan that it was . . . he'd heard that joke. 11 He conceded that I'd been right. . . . 12 He gasped out that he'd just seen . . .
- 169 *1 'Don't keep asking such silly questions.' 2 'You should treat your elders with more respect.' 3 'I shall always love you.' 4 'Mind your own business.' 5 'No one cares whether you live or die.' 6 'I thought you said you were ill yesterday.' 7 'That's your problem, not mine.' 8 'You can go to the devil!' 9 'You could try reading it up the right way.' 10 'I'll tell me what to say to her.' 11 'You think you're a genius, don't you?' 12 'I quite understand how you feel.' 13 'Let's try again, shall we? It's rather difficult.' 14 'I think it's been a very pleasant evening.' 15 'I've made very good progress.' 16 'That's what I intend to do, and no one's going to stop me.'
- 170 *1 'Many thanks for what you did.' 2 'That was a wonderful meal you prepared.' or 'That's a wonderful meal you've prepared.' 3 'I'm very pleased at how things have turned out.' 4 'How are you today?' 5 'Fancy meeting you here today!' 6 'Can I take your bags, sir?' 7 'If I were you, I'd think carefully before deciding.' 8 'Don't touch that fence! It's electrified.' 9 'Why don't we all go and have a drink?' 10 'You haven't done your homework again. It's just not good enough!' 11 'Hey! What are you doing giving me a ticket? I only stopped for a few seconds.' 12 'I'm sorry to hear you failed in the test.' 13 'Hello! Lovely to see you. Come in.' 14 'Can I give you a lift?' 15 'No, thanks all the same.'
- 171 *1 He said it was up to me to decide, but he warned me not to go and ask him for help if I got into difficulties. 2 I reminded him to take his passport with him. 3 The mother snapped at her daughter, telling her to stop . . . 4 I was surprised at the idea that he should think his friend was serious. 5 The teacher told the boy sharply to do as he was told and (to) stop arguing. 6 He exclaimed that he had been a fool not to accept the job, but then added resignedly that it couldn't be helped now. 7 The wedding guests proposed a toast to the bride . . . 8 The girl begged her father not to say anything to her boy friend, for her sake. 9 He asked if he should post the letter for me. 10 The master said angrily that he had had just about enough of the boy's insolence. One more word from the boy, he threatened, and he would be sent to . . . 11 She asked her husband indignantly if he really had lost . . . 12 He suggested sarcastically that I should try . . . myself if I was . . . 13 With cool assurance, he said he could have won . . . if he had . . . 14 He shouted angrily at me to . . . , and asked irritably if I couldn't see he was busy. 15 The thief, threatening the cashier, ordered him to give him the keys of the safe.
- 172 1 'What do you think? Should I take the job?' I asked. 'It's entirely up to you,' he replied. 2 'Are you sure you had nothing to do with the disappearance of a bicycle from the school cycle sheds two days ago?' the master asked. 'Quite sure,' answered the boy. 'I had nothing to do with it.' 3 'Could I possibly have the day off tomorrow?' Peter asked his employer. 'Most certainly not,' answered his employer. 4 'Would you lend me five pounds?' he asked. 'Well, yes, provided you pay me back next week,' I said. 5 'Hello! Jean? Look, I'm terribly sorry to ring you at the last minute like this, but I can't come to dinner with you this evening. Will it put you out terribly?' Michael asked. 'Yes, it will,' Jean replied angrily. 'You might have let me know earlier, and I wouldn't have needed to make such elaborate preparations.' 6 'I'm going to leave England early next year to take up a job abroad,' Margaret said. 'Good heavens! Are you really serious?' I asked. 'Would you please open your suitcase, Madam?' The Customs officer said. 'Well, really! Is that necessary?' said the woman. 'Yes, Madam. I'm afraid it is. Would you please open it?' 8 'Why don't you look where you're going,' said the bus driver to the motorist. 'What do you mean?' said the motorist. 'If you hadn't been driving so fast, I'd have had a chance of stopping in time.'

173 *I waited. The clock ticked as Mrs Armitage stared at the fire. Finally, she said that Jake didn't want any more children. When I asked her if she liked children, she felt it was impossible to answer such a question. I then asked if she thought it would be wrong not to like children. First she said she didn't know, then she said she thought it would. When I asked her why, her answer was that children didn't do you any harm. I agreed that perhaps they didn't, directly, but indirectly . . . She interjected that perhaps I didn't have any children. I said I had three, two boys and a girl. She wanted to know their ages, and I told her sixteen, fourteen, ten. She asked if I liked them and I said I did, most of the time. Her response to this was that her answer was the same—she liked hers most of the time.

174 *When I saw the bulge at Claud's waistline, I asked him what was under there. He pulled . . . belly. It was to carry the stuff, he said darkly. I indicated that I understood. When he suggested we go, I said I still thought we ought to take the car. He replied that this was too risky; they'd see it parked. I pointed out that it was over three miles up to the wood. Claud realized that himself, but assumed that I realized too that we could get six months in the clink if they caught us. I protested that he'd never told me that. Claud's response implied that he thought he had. I then announced that I wasn't going. It wasn't worth it. Claud replied quite simply that the walk would do me good and urged me to go with him.

175 *When the woman . . . chairs. 'Dear me,' she said, 'why on earth should I . . . my chairs?' 'No reason at all, except that I might . . . give you . . . price.' 'And how much would you give? They're definitely . . . sale, but . . . know, how much would you give?' 'Thirty-five pounds.' 'How much?' 'Thirty-five pounds.' 'Dear me, thirty-five pounds. Well, well, that's very interesting. I always thought . . . valuable. They're very old. They're very . . . too. No, they're not for sale . . . same.' 'They're not so very old,' Mr Boggis told her, 'and they wouldn't be . . . sell, but it just happens that I have a client who rather likes that . . . thing. Maybe I could go up another two pounds—call it thirty-seven. How about that?'

176 *Joan worked . . . records. One day . . . at Joan. 'I want a record, dear. One I heard on the radio this morning,' she began. 'What was the record called?' Joan asked. The woman shook her head. 'I don't remember. I should know it if I heard it, though. Perhaps you'll just play me some.' She settled . . . stool. 'We have hundreds of records in stock,' Joan pointed out. 'It would take . . . to play you . . . each. Could you hum it to me?' The woman giggled. 'I can't sing . . . tune. We should get into a worse muddle if I started humming.' She looked . . . brightened. 'I've just remembered something,' she said. 'It comes from a play. There's a woman who speaks . . . but after a time she learns to talk beautifully.' 'Would it be from My Fair Lady? Joan asked. 'That's it, dear. I wish you'd thought . . . sooner, instead of . . . questions. I suppose you are new to the job.'

177 1 Motorists intending to take . . . Continent; 2 proposals made . . . meetings; 3 river marking the frontier; 4 incomes imposed . . . government and not negotiated . . . employers; 5 interest credited . . . year; 6 companies already using/staff needed for stock-control; 7 aliens already living . . . country; 8 articles ordered from stock; 9 premises overlooking the Thames; 10 Reports now reaching London/casualties caused . . . earthquake.

178 1 a Show, which is held . . . autumn, attracts; b Show, held . . . autumn, attracts; 2a house, which still bears . . . number, stands; b house, still bearing . . . number, stands; 3a newsreader, who was making . . . television, looked; b newsreader, making . . . television, looked; 4 a hostel, which accommodates 200 students, will be; b hostel, accommodating 200 students, will be; 5a trains, which are made up . . . wagons, carry; b trains, made up . . . wagons, carry; 6a invasion, which was . . . executed, was completed; b invasion, carefully planned . . . executed, was completed; 7a houses, which are built . . . and which range . . . £180,000, should satisfy; b houses, built . . . and ranging . . . £180,000, should satisfy; 8a 'Ida', which swept . . . coast, left; b 'Ida', sweeping . . . coast, left; 9a societies, which are . . . money, will soon; b societies, at present struggling . . . money, will soon; 10a . . . ship, which is carrying . . . chemicals, is in danger; . . . ship, carrying . . . chemicals, is in danger.

179 1 Measures to restrain; 2 proposals to be discussed; 3 plenty to think about; 4 difficulties to be surmounted; 5 houses to suit; 6 tests to be passed; 7 way to go; 8 cords, to be operated; 9 tablets, to be taken; 10 point to have emerged.

180 *(Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses.) 1 that has stood empty for so long; 2 which had suffered such disastrous floods the previous year; 3 which the local Council started to tackle fifteen years ago; 4 beer was only sixpence a pint; 5 that would be economical to run; 6 where we stayed two years ago; 7 he inherited; 8 who'll go out of his way to help people; 9 who is now working as a mining engineer in Australia; 10 that few countries can equal; 11 that specializes in heart surgery; 12 you might like to suggest; 13 he came out with; 14 he had given for not coming; 15 which might stock this particular model; 16 he's mentioned the problem to me; 17 which haven't been on the market for over twenty-five years; 18 whom you spoke to on the telephone; 19 which is full of inconsistencies; 20 as we had taken on the outward journey; 21 agrees with what I'm saying; 22 the eighteenth century produced; 23 who was already over sixty; 24 which cost nearly twice as much as the smaller one; 25 which till then had remained unconquered.

181 *1 where we met a group of friends; 2 which would have been advisable under the circumstances; 3 when he suddenly turned up; 4 which was a great disappointment to the organizers; 5 who immediately began planning a major reorganization; 6 which was an act of almost criminal negligence; 7 for which he later received a commendation for bravery; 8 when the sun unexpectedly broke through; 9 which was a new departure for us; 10 who was supposed to pass it on to you; 11 which has been welcomed by anti-smoking campaigners; 12 where we saw the much-publicized new production of *The Trojan*s; 13 whom I sent it on; 14 which the School governors have now authorized work to begin; 15 which his parents engaged a private tutor.

182 * (Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses.) 1 than he writes it; 2 as soon as the weather improved; 3 where we generally leave it; 4 so that countries could discuss world problems together; 5 that I gave up reading it half way through; 6 although the water was still rather cold; 7 if they could come with us; 8 Since I had so much work to do at home; 9 so that we should have time for a talk before dinner; 10 a As the car has already been repaired; b As I got off the bus; c as quickly as he could;

183 * 1 where I told you to; 2 Although they're very well off; 3 so that we could all travel together more easily; 4 we should find no vacancies on our arrival; 5 if they didn't return to work the following day; 6 so that no one should be able to accuse the examiners of prejudice or favouritism; 7 When you live a little nearer us; 8 Although I agreed to in the first place; 9 The more I see of him; 10 you agree to abide by the rules;

184 * 1 that he couldn't stop trembling; 2 your own private feelings may be; 3 we left/the house should be warm/we returned; 4 drunk he was; 5 they like it or not; 6 until a suitable interval occurs; 7 that the speaker had to shout into the microphone; 8 I would have liked to/1 simply didn't have that much spare cash; 9 how much I argued with him; 10 the singer had given another encore/leave the concert hall.

185 1 Whichever of the two plans you adopt, there are bound to . . . 2 Once the opera began (or had begun), latecomers . . . 3 We didn't . . . food so as not to embarrass . . . 4 The quicker we get there the sooner you'll be able . . . 5 While our friends were staying . . . district, we invited . . . 6 He suffered from such a bad stammer that he . . . 7 As long as we kept close to the guide we were safe. 8 Unless we hurry, we won't . . . 9 The test wasn't as easy as I had expected. 10 The moment he finds out what's happened, he'll insist on . . .

186 1 Since the colour . . . her, my wife decided . . . 2 Because he had overslept, he was . . . 3 As I didn't . . . stamps, I couldn't . . . 4 Even though the course cost . . . money, I decided . . . 5 Although we left . . . late, we arrived on time. 6 While she likes . . . much, she's looking forward . . . home. 7 Although I agreed . . . advice, I did so . . . 8 Since I had . . . him, I felt obliged . . . 9 Although his doctor . . . bed, he went in to work. 10 Since he won't . . . me, you'd better try . . .

187 * 1 Although the robbery . . . daylight, there seem . . . 2 Despite being constantly interrupted, the speaker . . . 3 However difficult it may look, it's easy once . . . 4 No matter how loudly I shouted, I couldn't . . . 5 Ingenious as the plan is, it will . . . 6 However sincere his apology is, I don't think . . . 7 Much as I admire his honesty, I totally . . . 8 Try as we might, we couldn't . . .

188 * (Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses.) so that we shouldn't get wet if it rained (purpose, condition); because the weather looked unsettled (reason); after we saw heavy black clouds approaching (time or reason); in case it rained (purpose); although it was fine when we left (concession, time); if it looked like rain (condition).

189 * (Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses.) As it was the dress rehearsal (reason); although it was only a preliminary rehearsal (concession); if the playwright was to be satisfied (condition); before they gave their first performance (time); when the casting had finally been decided (time); as soon as the rehearsals started in earnest (time).

190 * (Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses.) while they were in that area (time); even if it meant making a detour (concession or condition); before they left Scotland (time); after they had seen Edinburgh (time); however little time they had to spare (concession); unless the weather got worse (condition).

191 * (Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses.) Whatever pressure he puts on you (concession); If he starts asking questions (condition); Since it would only make matters worse (reason); Much as I dislike not being open with him (concession); Although the information might be useful to him (concession); Whether he brings up the subject or not (condition); Lest he should misunderstand (purpose).

192 * (Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses.) so that no one makes a mistake (purpose); in case a few people aren't clear about what to do (purpose); if anyone appears to be in doubt (condition); unless you have written them down (condition); before the group disperses (time); while you have everyone assembled (time).

193 * (Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses.) Even though you dislike him (concession)/when he was in difficulties (time); As he respects your opinion (reason)/before he took such a decisive step (time); When he mentioned the project to you (time)/it might be useful (purpose); Whether or not he was likely to accept it (concession)/so that he couldn't blame you if things went wrong later (purpose, condition).

194 1 He seems . . . discover that the sun . . . 2 Most people welcome the fact that there is to be . . . 3 His girl friend later understood why he . . . her. 4 Don't run away . . . idea that your bank manager . . . 5a It was clear . . . that the law student was . . . b That the law student was . . . bar was clear . . . 6a The fact that he didn't even apologize made me . . . b What made me . . . angry was the fact that he didn't . . . 7a It was the parents' view that the boy . . . b The parents' view was that the boy . . . 8a It is my opinion that children . . . b My opinion is that children . . . 9 What he says in private is inconsistent with what he does in public. 10a I just don't know how he manages . . . b How he manages . . . things I just don't know.

195 1 insisted that the students arrive; 2 The fact that one is ignorant of the law; 3 that you (should) think; 4 why people dislike him; 5 The fact that you have accepted this job/that you will have to travel; 6 that he had told me the truth; 7 that he came from a broken home; 8 that I (should) check again/the fact that I had already assured him; 9 that it is genuine; 10 why it was (or is) so popular.

196 1 to take over other companies; 2 to withdraw from the American market; 3 to join in the scheme; 4 for licensing hours in Britain to be extended; 5 to postpone further discussion; 6 to share the costs; 7 to win; 8 to give up smoking; 9 to re-open talks; 10 for the road to be made part of a one-way system.

197 1 That the conversation . . . him soon became obvious. 2 That the driver . . . an accident was due to luck . . . 3 What the thieves . . . money remains a mystery. 4 What the speaker said wasn't at all easy . . . to follow. 5 To follow what . . . said wasn't at all easy . . . audience. 6 For the audience to follow what . . . said wasn't at all easy. 7 To see how . . . wrong is easy, with the benefit . . . 8 Watching you . . . hard makes me . . . 9 To have asked you to give . . . evening is very inconsiderate . . . 10 Whether he really . . . said is a little . . . judge. 11 Why we were . . . soon wasn't made clear . . . time. 12 How the Company . . . product was a matter . . . 13 Where the pilot . . . land isn't yet known. 14 Precisely who originated the plan hasn't yet . . . 15 How much . . . cost is difficult to . . . stage.

198 *(Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses) 1 that he didn't like my attitude (object of said); 2 that the Prime Minister was seriously ill at the time of the crisis (in apposition to subject fact); 3 What is being discussed at this conference (subject of is); 4 what he sets out to do (object of achieving); 5 how the trick was performed (object of discovered); 6 where he had hidden the body (object of to/did); 7 What you say (subject of is); 8 if there was any fish on the menu (object of asked); 9 that moral standards were declining (in app. to object fact); 10 that the unions should take stronger measures to control their members (in app. to subject it); 11 that the two parties had reached a reasonable compromise (in app. to subject it); 12 what you want to know (complement of is).

199 *(Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses) 1 what should be done in an emergency (object of preposition on); 2 what had happened to him (object of preposition by); 3 that it would be better to leave things as they are (complement of is); 4 That he was very dissatisfied with the outcome (subject of was); 5 what you have just said (object of prep. from)/that you intend to offer your resignation (object of infer); 6 that we should raise membership fees (in app. to subject idea); 7 that the Company needed a new management (in app. to object feeling); 8 when the train was due to arrive (object of know); 9 that a tunnel would prove cheaper in the long run than a bridge (complement of was); 10 that we had been overcharged considerably (in app. to object opinion); 11 what needn't be done immediately (object of doing); 12 that they're getting married (in app. to subject it).

200 *(Note: all the suggestions are finite clauses) 1 that the police were closing in (object of having learned); 2 that all Englishmen are the same (in app. to object idea); 3 he just didn't care (in app. to object impression); 4 that we're going to be late again (complement of seems); 5 why he disappeared so suddenly (object of remember); 6 what he had already told the court (object of repeating) / that he was at home at the time referred to (in app. to object alibi); 7 that euthanasia should become common practice (in app. to object proposal); 8 That there may be life on another planet (subject of is); 9 that no one foresaw the disaster (in app. to complement fact); 10 how the climbers met their deaths (subject of will be); 11 which of the two paintings was the original (object of prep. to); 12 that production costs had risen considerably (object of pointing out) / that prices wouldn't rise again in the near future (in app. to object assurance).

201 1 wishing; 2 there obviously being no point; 3 Looked at in this way, the situation doesn't seem; 4 to arrive or in order to arrive or so as to arrive; 5 unless accompanied; 6 him or his once offering; 7 the ship to be unsinkable; 8 not to disturb or in order not to disturb or so as not to disturb; 9 Not having any time to spare; 10 Never having been . . . before; 11 to be surmounted; 12 involved . . . scandal/to offer . . . resignation; 13 (Whether) restored . . . or not; 14 to hear; 15 as to be positively misleading.

202 *1 Having first made sure . . . watching, the thief climbed up . . . to a first-floor window, through which he succeeded . . . the house unobserved. 2 Despite the fact that I had no experience . . . , I decided to take the opportunity of spending . . . sea when some friends of mine, who were very keen . . . , and who wanted to sail . . . , invited me . . . them. 3 An outstanding characteristic . . . procedure is . . . system, under which a man may . . . citizens, who must be . . . decision without influence . . . judge, although he may direct them as to . . . law.

203 *1 Visitors . . . are surprised at the orderly way in which the English . . . transport, and they cannot understand the angry glares given them when, on first arriving in England, they innocently . . . queue. 2 If money or plate is found hidden . . . Britain and has no owner, it is called 'Treasure-Trove' and is . . . Crown. Although the finder must hand over . . . authorities, he is, in practice, given . . . return. 3 'The Black Death' was the name given to the bubonic plague which raged . . . Ages, carrying off . . . population, and in some cases exterminating . . . villages.

204 *1 Fleet Street, once famous . . . houses where men prominent . . . world used to meet, and now synonymous . . . newspapers, takes its name . . . Stream, which used to run from Hampstead down into . . . at Blackfriars. 2 Guy Fawkes, whose memory is perpetuated by . . . displays held on . . . each year, was the leader . . . conspirators who intended . . . Parliament while the King . . . in session. 3 When I returned . . . city where . . . born, I was dismayed to find that many of . . . streets and their . . . houses had been demolished to make way for modern but undistinguished shop-lined thoroughfares.

205 *1 The Pilgrim Fathers were . . . Puritans who, having first spent . . . Holland to escape . . . persecution, later sailed in the Mayflower to America, where they established . . . Massachusetts. 2 'The South Sea Bubble' was the name given to a great . . . crash which occurred . . . in 1720, following a wave . . . speculation, the dimensions of which have since been repeated only once, before . . . Wall Street, New York, in 1929. 3 Although Sir . . . had already attained . . . astronomer when he was only sixteen, it was not till he was . . . thirty that he seriously took up . . . architecture, the crowning result of which was . . . Cathedral.

206 *1 Foreigners are frequently surprised to learn that what the English call 'Public Schools' are in fact . . . schools, catering in the main for fee-paying pupils from . . . families. Many of these families have to make great . . . sacrifices to send . . . choice. 2 Although in the opinion . . . people the jury . . . has disadvantages, the disappearance . . . unthinkable. In the same way, there is in principle a very great deal to be said for making magistrates out of persons whose chief qualification is that of being prominent local citizens. 3 Having spoken at length on . . . tracks, pointing out that even experienced . . . locomotive, the headmaster warned the boys that if any of them persisted . . . railway, they would not only be . . . punished, but would also risk . . . school.

207 1a The chairman was the only person who objected; b The proposal was the only thing he objected to. 2a It was quite obvious that the man didn't understand in any way; b The man had only a vague understanding of the document. 3a He made no promises about attending; b He made a promise that he wouldn't attend. 4a I now remember that I told him at some earlier time; b First I remembered and then I told him. 5a You won't have much money which you can spend; b You won't be obliged to spend much money. 6a The question is asked in the morning (thus, the morning is still part of present time); b The question is asked during the afternoon or evening (thus, the morning is regarded as past time). 7a last week = the period ending last Saturday (past time); b the last week = the period of seven days up to the day of speaking (which includes present time). 8a Other people made the admission, but also, and perhaps surprisingly, he did; b Apart from admitting other characteristics of the tax, he went so far as to admit its unfairness.

208 1a He didn't claim that he knew; b He tried to give the impression that he didn't know. 2a His expressions of gratitude were unending; b He didn't say thank you because he didn't have time. 3a He persisted in asking what he had already asked before; b Although he knew what the answer must be, the next thing he did was to ask the question. 4a We assume he didn't go to the doctor; b He visited the doctor, but this later proved to have been unnecessary. 5a You can tell me then (viz. when you see me again); b could you tell me this (viz. when you will see me again). 6a The subject of the portrait was Holbein; b The painter of the portrait was Holbein. 7a This was the last thing he said; b He hoped that a satisfactory conclusion would be the end result. 8a He got up early so regularly that it wasn't a difficulty or a hardship for him; b At some past time, he habitually got up early (but we are not told his feelings or attitude towards this).

209 1a See whether it's possible to hire a video camera; b Hire a video camera; you might, for example, find this cheaper or more convenient than buying one. 2a He must have arranged for someone to do this; b He must himself have done this. 3a This is a general observation on how she spends her money; b This is a comment on what is regarded as a temporary phenomenon. 4a He asked 'Will you go ahead?'; b He asked 'Shall I go ahead?' or 'Should you go ahead?' 5a I would rather not see him if it can be avoided; b I am very anxious not to see him. 6a I am sorry that I must now tell you this; b I apologize for having said this earlier. 7a Did you lack the necessary courage? b Were you reluctant to upset him in this way ('your' courage isn't in question). 8a He should arrange for the workers to receive training while they are working; b He should be employing more workers who already possess the necessary skills; c he should himself have organized and carried out the training before now.

210 1a Whenever I meet her, I meet her at the station (though we are not told how often this occurs); b This happens extremely frequently nowadays. 2a The rain is coming down heavily; b The rain has nearly stopped. 3a direct = via an agent or some other intermediary; b directly = at once. 4a He was unpopular with the crowd as a whole; b More often than not he was unpopular. 5a Of course, one doesn't expect this; b Oranges can't grow under natural conditions. 6a The design was attractive, but not obviously so; b Its unattractiveness was obvious. 7a The purpose of his resignation is to make way for a younger man; b He has now accepted the fact (though perhaps reluctantly) that he must make way for a younger man. 8a The speaker is certain that the person will get the job; b The person himself feels confident of getting the job.

211 1a I enjoy . . . , despite the fact that I have made hardly any friends; b The reason for my enjoying living . . . is that I have made a small number of friends. 2a The fact that the scheme didn't work out in practice was something that we had foreseen; b The scheme worked out, but not in the way that we had foreseen. 3a He was approaching the bank when he noticed the men; b The men were approaching the bank when he noticed them. 4a The questioner asks if the man is now away on holiday; b The questioner asks if the man has been away and returned. 5a You are speaking just as if you were a teacher; b You are a teacher, and you are now speaking to me in that capacity (and not, e.g., as a friend). 6a No one has given me any information about him; b He hasn't communicated with me. 7a All the workers were dismissed because they went on strike; b The dismissals applied only to some of the workers, namely the strikers. 8a The rescue party was pessimistic, holding out very little hope of there being any survivors; b The rescue party wasn't entirely without optimism—there might be a small number of survivors. (NB. the contrast between any and some.)

212 1a She went to the shop because she wanted this information. b She went to the shop (perhaps with the intention of buying the dress), but then found that the dress was very expensive. 2a She drinks tea with breakfast and so, incidentally, do most other people in England; b The reason for her drinking tea with breakfast is that it is the custom in England. 3a i.e. but we don't know whether or not he will give permission; b He is more or less expected to give permission; the builders simply have to wait for the time when he does. 4a I'll pay you when the end of the month comes; b I'll pay you at some time during the month, but in any case not later than the end of the month. 5a In the speaker's opinion, the person had no reason to think this; b He felt that he himself had no reason to think this. 6a Aren't his plans to stay in London fixed—I thought they were; b Does he propose to stay in London for an unlimited time? 7a Previously, he followed a different profession; b He didn't produce any new ideas or write in a new style. 8a I didn't like a small number of all the modern paintings I've seen; b I've seen hardly any modern paintings, and I haven't liked any of them.

213 1a His arrival is assumed; b We don't know whether he will arrive or not. 2a The speaker implies that perhaps 'you' did tell a lie on a past occasion (or 'you' may have admitted that you did); b The speaker refers to a hypothetical future possibility. 3a even if = even supposing he has nothing to do (we don't know whether he has or not); even though = despite the fact that he has nothing to do. 4a On checking = when you check; b By checking = by means of checking, by using this method. 5a His illustrated lecture was of exceptionally high quality; b His lecture was admirably illustrated. 6a The speaker simply asks for information—he has no idea as to the likely answer; b The speaker implies that he had expected 'you' to see the man, but now he has the impression that perhaps you didn't. 7a The speaker's impression is that there is someone in the room; b The speaker simply asks for information—he has no idea as to the likely answer. 8a There were 10,000 people at the meeting, which was a surprisingly large number; b There were at least 10,000 people at the meeting, and possibly more.

214 1a It is thought that this will happen. b The speaker is issuing instructions: 'These are my requirements.' 2a so that . . . expresses her purpose in burning the letter; b so that . . . expresses the result of her burning the letter. 3a It is possible that he realized; b He ought to have realized. 4a She left me so that she could get on with her work. b She left me in a situation where I had to get on with her work. 5a They were very tired, though perhaps not exhausted; b They were very tired, and perhaps even exhausted. 6a Is this what you intend to do? b Would you do this for me (please)? 7a in time = eventually, sooner or later; b in time = early enough. 8a Why didn't the public like it? Because it was play of ideas. b The public liked the play for some reason or other, but not for the reason mentioned.

215 1a It is thought likely that the Queen will arrive on time; b Punctuality is required of the Queen. 2a We have discovered that he is a good lawyer; b We have obtained the services of a good lawyer for him. 3a He didn't leave London because he didn't take up the appointment. b He left London for some reason or other, but not in order to take up the appointment. 4a 'I insist that you arrive early,' the teacher told his students. b 'My students always arrive early,' the teacher insisted. 5a They wanted to visit an additional number of interesting places. b They wanted to visit places that were more interesting. 6a Perhaps they have arrived—this, at least, is what I expected. b They haven't arrived, which is contrary to what I expected. 7a No one liked the portrait which he himself had painted. b No one liked the portrait which he had commissioned to be painted. 8a When did he retire? At the age of sixty. b When did he make the decision? At the age of sixty.

216 1a 'The motorist,' said the bus driver, 'was to blame for the accident.' (The bus driver blamed the motorist.) b The motorist said, 'The bus driver was to blame for the accident.' (The motorist blamed the bus driver.) 2a I wouldn't advise you to go there for his sake. (Go there for some other reason if you like, but don't go just for his benefit.) b I wouldn't advise you to go there, for his sake. (Don't go there if you have his interests at heart.) 3a The teacher left his students feeling very depressed. (The students were in a state of depression when the teacher left them.) b The teacher left his students, feeling very depressed. (The teacher was feeling very depressed when he left the students.) 4a This type of education is very expensive indeed, but it is well worth . . . it. (It is exceedingly expensive, but . . .) b This type of education . . . expensive, indeed, but it is . . . spent on it. (It is very expensive, I agree, but . . .) 5a The headmaster said that the boy's parents . . . home. (The parents of the boy) b The headmaster said that the boys' parents . . . home. (The parents of the boys) 6a The facts the prisoner admitted pointed to him . . . person, but he protested he was innocent. (The prisoner admitted certain facts, and the speaker comments that although these facts indicated that the prisoner was guilty, the prisoner still protested his innocence.) b The facts, the prisoner admitted, pointed to him . . . person, but, he protested, he was innocent. ('The facts point to me as the guilty person, I admit, but I protest that I am innocent,' said the prisoner.) 7a Once having lost . . . Scotland, we had . . . road-side. (As soon as we had lost our way . . .) b Once, having lost . . . Scotland, we had . . . road-side. (On one occasion, when we had lost our way . . .) 8a The political demonstrators who felt strongly . . . discrimination were prepared . . . police. (Some of the political demonstrators were prepared to defy the police, namely those with strong feelings.) b The political demonstrators, who felt strongly . . . discrimination, were prepared . . . police. (All the demonstrators felt strongly, and all were prepared to defy the police.) 9a Cross-channel ferries unable to dock at Dover . . . gales had to . . . Newhaven. (Some cross-channel ferries had to go on to Newhaven, namely those that were prevented by gales from docking at Dover.) b Cross-channel ferries, unable to . . . gales, had to . . . Newhaven. (All the cross-channel ferries had to go on to Newhaven, because all were prevented from docking at Dover.) 10a He won't think he . . . thank you for all that you've done. (He won't think that what you have done justifies any thanks on his part.) b He won't think he . . . thank you, for all that you've done. (Despite all that you have done, he won't think . . . thank you.)

217 1a give instruction; b I'll punish you to deter you from stealing again. 2a written for this particular purpose; b more useful to foreign students than to anyone else. 3a willing; b physically ready. 4a had a view over; b chose to ignore; c failed to notice. 5a He hadn't been told; b He didn't have the specialized knowledge. 6a at this very moment; b neither now nor in the immediate future. 7a he had the benefit of; b got pleasure from. 8a His treatment had been quite good; b He had been treated justly. 9a that used up all their strength, b thorough. 10a certainly; b very probably.

218 1a immediately; b at the same time; c both. 2a concluded an agreement; b something that was very good value for money. 3a supports, provides for; b asserts; 4a I conclude that he is out; b are obliged to. 5a At one particular time; b reason to visit, or cause for visiting. 6*a* confusion of mind; b interesting and amusing things to do. 7*a* profit fully from; b profit unfairly from. 8*a* understands properly; b value and am grateful for; c rose in value. 9*a* I am certain of this; b I can hardly believe this. 10*a* it wasn't the right size; b it didn't look well on her.

219 1*a* know or identify again; b weren't willing to accept officially. 2*a* come and collect; b demands. 3*a* is full of self-praise; b is the proud possessor of. 4*a* feel unhappy at or feel ill-will because of; b anxious to maintain or protect. 5*a* demand to see; b inviting. 6*a* Iaking everything into consideration; b In all. 7*a* for the public benefit; b that the public will take an interest in. 8*a* He had disclosed the secret, and his friend expressed regret that he done so. b His friend assumed that he had disclosed the secret, and blamed him for doing so. 9*a* informed; b instructed, ordered. 10*a* requested, instructed; b inquired, wanted to know.

220 1 inferred; 2 affected; 3 incapable; 4 alternate; 5 disused; 6 satisfactory.

221 1 regrettable; 2 defective; 3 dependent; 4 industrial; 5 exceedingly; 6 unreasonable.

222 1 tell; 2 stationary; 3 dissatisfied; 4 adapted; 5 exhaustive; 6 conscientious.

223 1 stolen; 2 worthless; 3 past; 4 notorious; 5 principal; 6 sensitive.

224 1 aloud; 2 experience; 3 consists; 4 agreed; 5 overcome; 6 all ready.

225 1 hard; 2 persuade; 3 reminded; 4 confidently; 5 Every one; 6 opportunity.

226 1 all together; 2 At least; 3 besides; 4 lose; 5 Presently; 6 rather.

227 1 explicit; 2 responsible for; 3 price; 4 appreciable; 5 journey; 6 disinterested.

228 1 raise; 2 refused; 3 advice; 4 job; 5 borrow; 6 finally.

229 1 complementary; 2 stimulus; 3 glance; 4 distinctive; 5 work; 6 attend.

230-233 Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples.

234 1 marched; 2 crept; 3 lurked; 4 strutted; 5 staggered; 6 plodded; 7 strode; 8 loiter; 9 strayed; 10 ramble; 11 paced; 12 wandered.

235 Consult OALDCE.

236 1 Smiled/cheering; 2 boomed; 3 uttered; 4 jeered; 5 laugh/groan; 6 grinned/roar(s); 7 sneers; 8 tease; 9 giggled; 10 sniggered; 11 mock; 12 chuckling.

237 1 wrenched; 2 towed; 3 jerk; 4 hauling; 5 drawn; 6 dragged; 7 lugging; 8 pulled; 9 tugged.

238 Consult OALDCE.

239 1 He reluctantly came; 2 to go on interminably; 3 viewed indifferently; 4 used concurrently; 5 was substantially the same; 6 operate clandestinely; 7 could conceivably lead; 8 objections outspokenly; 9 asked querulously; 10 had radically changed; 11 proved conclusively that; 12 books indiscriminately. (The Government has tried to approach this problem imaginatively. The big-game hunter stealthily approached the leopard. The book deals with the subject very superficially. The troops were told explicitly not to make a move until the enemy revealed their positions.)

240 1 tremulously gave or name tremulously; 2 work conscientiously; 3 judiciously took; 4 screaming hysterically; 5 worked tirelessly or peace tirelessly; 6 means, conversely, fewer goods; 7 climbing vicariously; 8 book, lavishly illustrated, is; 9 slavishly adopted; 10 was inadvertently given; 11 wilfully obstructing; 12 occurred inopportunely. (The child was born two months prematurely. The problem needs to be considered rationally rather than emotionally. Smith adroitly slipped the ball past a defender and scored a goal. Should we blindly follow where others lead?)

241 1 materials synthetically; 2 cup triumphantly; 3 I tentatively suggested; 4 rain severely hampered; 5 are temperamentally suitable; 6 goods surreptitiously; 7 scrupulously fair; 8 looked wistfully; 9 spoke aggressively; 10 walked briskly; 11 been arbitrarily rejected; 12 waiting apprehensively. (As it was the offender's first appearance in court, the magistrate dealt with him leniently. Characteristically, the writer keeps his readers in suspense until the last pages of the book. He argues so persuasively that it's difficult not to agree with him. Everyone earnestly begged him to reconsider his decision to resign.)

242 1 subject animatedly; 2 dispute amicably; 3 you presently (or shortly); 4 view concisely (or briefly); 5 manually/mechanically; 6 were fatally injured; 7 are constantly getting (or repeatedly); 8 is temporarily out; 9 boy insolently replied (or impudently or disrespectfully); 10 is reputedly; 11 work voluntarily; 12 carried unanimously.

243 1 tastefully furnished; 2 held annually; 3 years successively; 4 would irrevocably forfeit; 5 Retrospectively, he could see; 6 were comparatively undamaged; 7 had regrettably been; 8 Naturally, he felt or He naturally felt; 9 aesthetically pleasing; 10 married bigamously; 11 died instantaneously; 12 given anonymously.

244 1 susceptible to; 2 irresponsible; 3 found him unanswerable; 4 irrepressible enthusiasm; 5 indispensable; 6 incompatible; 7 a regrettable mistake; 8 indefensible; 9 inestimable; 10 inflexible; 11 negligible; 12 irreplaceable.

245 1 unendurable or unbearable or intolerable; 2 he was ineligible; 3 irreconcilable; 4 fallible; 5 so quickly as to be incomprehensible; 6 unpronounceable; 7 12 is divisible by; 8 imaginable; 9 ineradicable; 10 indefinable; 11 impracticable; 12 impeccable.

- 246 1 indissoluble/inconceivable; 2 irreparable; 3 untranslatable; 4 edible; 5 indelible; 6 irrevocable; 7 changeable; 8 inexhaustible; 9 inimitable; 10 enviable; 11 implacable; 12 impassable.
- 247 1 unshrinkable; 2 indestructible; 3 insoluble; 4 uncontrollable; 5 memorable; 6 navigable; 7 negotiable; 8 imperceptible; 9 innumerable; 10 objectionable; 11 impenetrable; 12 convertible.
- 248 1 pitiable; 2 inflatable; 3 enjoyable; 4 punishable; 5 unsalable; 6 inseparable; 7 unplayable; 8 incorrigible; 9 inalienable; 10 impressionable; 11 inexplicable; 12 imperturbable.
- 249 1 'acquisitive'; 2 submissive; 3 indicative; 4 the formative years; 5 abusive language; 6 a pervasive influence; 7 plaintive; 8 three successive years; 9 The defective machine; 10 abortive; 11 an evasive answer; 12 a lucrative trade; 13 discursive; 14 deceptive. (Consult OALDCE for remaining four adjectives.)
- 250 1 adhesive; 2 An impulsive man; 3 inquisitive/have more retentive memories; 4 of descriptive writing; 5 Extensive; 6 productive soil; 7 provocative; 8 conducive; 9 retroactive; 10 the speculative investor.
- 251 1 homogeneous; 2 supercilious; 3 capricious; 4 fallacious; 5 an obnoxious; 6 Precocious children; 7 extraneous matter; 8 specious arguments; 9 momentous event; 10 presumptuous; 11 ingenuous; 12 malicious remarks; 13 fastidious; 14 ludicrous. (Consult OALDCE for the remaining four adjectives.)
- 252 1 infectious; 2 spacious (or commodious); 3 spontaneous; 4 Deciduous trees; 5 ravenous; 6 unanimous; 7 ambidextrous; 8 callous; 9 courtious; 10 rigorous.
- 253 1 pompous; 2 ominous; 3 injurious; 4 vivacious; 5 notorious; 6 libellous; 7 tortuous; 8 copious; 9 indigenous; 10 ambiguous; 11 circuitous; 12 outrageous.
- 254 1 cautious; 2 officious; 3 prosperous; 4 arduous; 5 conscientious; 6 ambitious; 7 treacherous; 8 simultaneous; 9 sumptuous; 10 generous; 11 vicious; 12 superstitious. (Consult OALDCE for examples.)
- 255 (Note: the pronunciation of the final syllable is /ət/ or /it/, except in the case of No 7, where it is /eɪv/.) 1 inconsiderate; 2 moderate or temperate; 3 legitimate; 4 illiterate; 5 commensurate; 6 desperate; 7 innate; 8 obstinate or obdurate; 9 immediate; 10 adequate; 11 affectionate; 12 passionate; 13 immaculate; 14 delicate. (Consult OALDCE for examples.)
- 256 (Note: the pronunciation of the syllable -ate is /eɪt/) 1 collaborated; 2 indoctrinated; 3 depreciate; 4 aggravated; 5 complicate; 6 exaggerated; 7 fabricated; 8 facilitate; 9 impersonating; 10 contaminated; 11 cultivate; 12 placate.
- 257 (Note: the pronunciation of the final syllable is /eɪv/) 1 eradicate; 2 annihilate; 3 participate; 4 investigate; 5 saturate; 6 renovate; 7 perforate; 8 overrate; 9 nominate; 10 infuriate; 11 evaporate; 12 interrogate. (Consult OALDCE for examples.)
- 258 (Note: the pronunciation of the final syllable is /eɪv/) 1 dominate; 2 irrigate; 3 commemorate; 4 emulate; 5 penetrate; 6 anticipate; 7 speculate; 8 rotate; 9 recapitulate; 10 isolate; 11 contemplate; 12 gesticulate. (Consult OALDCE for examples.)
- 259 1 pacify (or mollify); 2 indemnifies; 3 fortify; 4 ratified; 5 solidified; 6 testified; 7 mystified; 8 justified; 9 verify; 10 qualify; 11 nullified; 12 amplify.
- 260 1 purify; 2 clarify; 3 terrify; 4 rectify; 5 notify; 6 falsify; 7 liquefy; 8 classify; 9 intensify; 10 exemplify; 11 unify; 12 typify. (Consult OALDCE for examples.)
- 261 (NB Spellings are as given in OALDCE) 1 fertilize; 2 standardize; 3 mobilize; 4 terrorize; 5 minimize; 6 economize; 7 generalize; 8 authorize; 9 penalize; 10 colonize; 11 jeopardize; 12 legalize. (Consult OALDCE for examples.)
- 262 (See note at 261.) 1 realize; 2 scandalize; 3 improvise; 4 deputize; 5 modernize; 6 apologize; 7 subsidize; 8 specialize; 9 materialize; 10 symbolize; 11 victimize; 12 scrutinize. (Consult OALDCE for examples.)
- 263–268 Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples.
- 269–271 Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples.
- 272–275 Consult OALDCE for parallel formations, explanations, and examples.
- 276–277 Consult OALDCE for parallel formations, explanations, and examples.
- 278–280 Try the following prefixes, allowing for any necessary spelling changes in individual cases: ab-, ad-, com-, con-, de-, ex-, e-, im-, in-, ob-, per-, pre-, pro-, re-, sub-. Consult OALDCE for checking, explanations, and examples.
- 281 (NB. Hyphens are given as in OALDCE. In many cases, the two parts of the compound could be written as one word. See OALDCE for examples.) 1a foolhardy; b foolproof. 2a heartfelt; b heartrending; c heartbroken. 3a stopgap; b stop press; c stop-watch. 4a headway; b headstrong; c headline; d headquarters. 5a foothold; b foothights; c footfalls.
- 282 (See note at 281.) 1a overcast (or overclouded); b overdrift; c oversight. 2a by-pass; b by-law; c by-product. 3a long-winded; b long-suffering; c long-standing. 4a bookkeeper; c bookworm; c book-ends. 5a shop-soiled; b shop-lifter; c shop-steward.
- 283 (See note at 281.) 1a handcuffs; b handbill; c hand-made. 2a light-hearted; b light-fingered; c light-headed. 3a stand-offish; b standstill; c standby. 4a playgoer; b playwright; c playground. 5a mouthpiece; b mouth-organ.

- 284 (See note at 281.) 1*a* uproar; b upshot; c upholstery. 2*a* self-centred; b self-evident; c self-righteous. 3*a* layman; b lay-out; c layby. 4*a* show-room or show-case; b show-down; c showpiece. 5*a* oilskin; b oil-can; c oil-field (or oil-well).
- 285 (See note at 281.) 1*a* fire-proof; b firearm; c fire-brigade. 2*a* windbreak; b windscreen; c windfall. 3*a* quick-witted; b quick-tempered; c quicksand. 4*a* backlog; b backcloth; c backbiting. 5*a* eye-opener; b eyesore; c eye-witness.
- 286 (NB. Adjectives are given first, then nouns. Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples. These lists are not necessarily exhaustive.) 1 persistent; persistence. 2 abstinent; abstinence, abstainer. 3 competitive; competition, competitor, competitiveness. 4 retentive; retention, retainer, retentiveness. 5 procedural; procedure, process. 6 deep, depth.
- 287 (See note at 286.) 1 deceptive, deceitful; deception, deceit. 2 various; variety, variation. 3 grievous; grief. 4 authoritative; authority, authorization. 5 comparative; comparison. 6 exploratory; exploration, explorer.
- 288 (See note at 286.) 1 defiant; defiance. 2 explanatory; explanation. 3 explosive; explosion, explosive. 4 irritable; irritation, irritability. 5 imitative; imitation, imitator. 6 observant; observer, observation, observatory.
- 289 (See note at 286.) 1 dependent; dependence, dependant. 2 conceptual; conception, concept. 3 attentive, attendant; attendant, attendance, attention. 4 failible; failure, failing. 5 hasty; haste. 6 fertile; fertility, fertilization, fertilizer.
- 290 (See note at 286.) 1 migratory; migration, migrant. 2 sympathetic; sympathy. 3 repetitive; repetition, repeat. 4 presumptuous, presumption. 5 analytical; analysis. 6 fraudulent; fraud.
- 291 (See note at 286.) 1 simple; simplification, simplicity. 2 defensive; defence, defendant, defender. 3 conclusive; conclusion. 4 healthy; health. 5 vigorous; vigour. 6 apologetic; apology.
- 292 (See note at 286.) 1 apparent; appearance, apparition. 2 distinctive, distinct; distinction. 3 repulsive, repellent; repulse, repulsion. 4 memorable; memory, memorial, remembrance. 5 interpretative; interpretation, interpreter. 6 cumbersome; encumbrance.
- 293 (See note at 286.) 1 revelatory; revelation. 2 vengeful; vengeance. 3 broadcast; broadcast. 4 emphatic; emphasis. 5 excessive; excess. 6 resolute; resolution, resolve.
- 294 (See note at 286.) 1 continuous, continual; continuation, continuity. 2 exemplificatory; example, exemplification. 3 foreseeable; foresight. 4 submissive; submission. 5 informative; information, informant. 6 prosperous; prosperity.
- 295-304 Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples.
- 305 1 aloud; 2 blew; 3 bury; 4 serial; 5 daze; 6 rode or rowed; 7 hire; 8 quay; 9 knows; 10 mail. (Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples.)
- 306 1 hoarse; 2 minor; 3 peer; 4 principal; 5 guilt; 6 sore or soar; 7 threw; 8 weigh; 9 ware or where; 10 bored. (Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples.)
- 307 1 court; 2 queue; 3 dye; 4 guessed; 5 leased; 6 mourning; 7 prays or preys; 8 stair; 9 tacks; 10 weather. (Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples.)
- 308 1 bold; 2 sealings; 3 phrase; 4 whole; 5 herd; 6 won; 7 pear or pare; 8 paced; 9 rein or reign; 10 scent or cent. (Consult OALDCE for explanations/ examples.)
- 309 1 bare; 2 coarse; 3 fare; 4 feat; 5 haul; 6 pour; 7 past; 8 rays or raze; 9 cell; 10 tyre. (Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples.)
- 310 1 cruise; 2 flour; 3 idol; 4 peace; 5 site; 6 suite; 7 sought; 8 wore; 9 source; 10 stake. (Consult OALDCE for explanations and examples.)
- 311 locomotive, buffers, rails, sleepers, carriage, compartment; chain, spokes, saddle, mudguard, handlebars, pedals; trial, court, plaintiff, counsel, fine, sentence; (unrelated) eraser, palace, offer, impudence, attempt, reins.
- 312 record-player, stylus, loudspeaker, amplifier, turntable, record; receiver, slot, caller, directory, dial, exchange; armchair, suite, bureau, chest, sofa, divan; (unrelated) pin, suit, visitor, catalogue, convict, office.
- 313 session, speaker, constituency, cabinet, debate, parliament; cheque, account, overdraft, loan, safe, bankrupt; hangar, runway, fuselage, stewardess, undercarriage, navigator; (unrelated) extension, truce, poster, kerb, draughtsman, decrease.
- 314 warehouse, port, dock, quay, cargo, barge; bough, twig, bark, branch, log, trunk; eiderdown, bedstead, bolster, mattress, blanket, sheets; (unrelated) platform, sherry, dog, mist, concrete, subsidiary.
- 315 clutch, engine, windscreen, boot, indicator, dashboard; chimney, mortar, drainpipe, tiles, loft, gutter; switch, socket, bulb, flex, lamp, shade; (unrelated) grasp, seed, wallet, shoes, calendar, shadow.
- 316 ladder, flight, rung, landing, banisters, stairs; congregation, eyewitnesses, sightseers, audience, spectators, onlookers; bridge, port-hole, cabin, hold, funnel, deck; (unrelated) leak, tunnel, ornament, retreat, grip, boycott.
- 317 1 find it out; 2 ruled it out; 3 looking after it; 4 give it away; 5 blurt it out; 6 looked at it; 7 bringing it (or them) out; 8 put them forward; 9 put it away/get at it; 10 try them out; 11 adding it (or them) up; 12 goes for them; 13 stirring it up; 14 took to him.
- 318 (NB. alternatives in brackets are possible, but less likely on stylistic grounds.) 1 brushed aside all objections or brushed all objections aside; 2 brushed aside all objections made . . . ; 3 hand over the man who . . . ; 4 take the job on or take on the job; 5 take on the captaincy of . . . ; 6 wraps up his arguments or wraps his arguments up; 7 bring about an improvement (or bring an improvement about); 8 putting in some very heavy claims or putting some very heavy claims in; 9 keep their production costs down or keep down their production costs; 10 handed over the confidential papers . . . ; 11 trying out many new synthetic products (or trying many new synthetic products out); 12 brought the question up or brought up the question; 13 brought up the questions everyone . . . ; 14 read quickly through the letter.

319 (NB. Particles marked with an asterisk are prepositions.) 1 turned down his request; 2 turn up; 3 turned in; 4 turn down the gas or turn the gas down; 5 turned him out; 6 turn out his pockets or turn his pockets out; 7 turned away from; 8 turned out; 9 turned out; 10 turned over; 11 turn on*.

320 (See note at 319.) 1 getting on; 2 get through*; 3 get over*; 4 get at*; 5 get it over; 6 get him down; 7 get down to*; 8 getting round*; 9 get on; 10 getting on for*.

321 (See note at 319.) 1 take up French; 2 takes after*; 3 took over the business (or took the business over); 4 taken in; 5 took on; 6 took down the letter or took the letter down); 7 took back all he . . . ; 8 take to*; 9 take up too much . . . ; 10 take off.

322 (See note at 319.) 1 put off my visit (or put my visit off); 2 put up with*; 3 put out; 4 put down; 5 put by quite a lot . . . ; 6 put forward the theory; 7 put down; 8 put in; 9 put you off; 10 put in a claim . . . ; 11 put on an air . . . ; 12 put me up.

323 (See note at 319.) 1 stand out for*; 2 stands for*; 3 stand for*; 4 stand by*; 5 stood out; 6 stand down; 7 stand by; 8 stand in for*; 9 stand aside; 10 stand up to*.

324 (See note at 319.) 1 came across*; 2 came round (or to); 3 came into*; 4 came about; 5 come off; 6 come out; 7 came out; 8 come up to*; 9 come out of*; 10 always comes up.

325 (See note at 319.) 1 gave up; 2 give up; 3 give in; 4 gave back the money or gave the money back; 5 gave off; 6 give out; 7 give out much heat (or give much heat out); 8 give up smoking (or give smoking up); 9 gave him away; 10 gave on to.

326 1 proceeded; 2 was very well received; 3 enter; 4 continued; 5 discuss or examine; 6 study; 7 rose; 8 been built or been erected; 9 took; 10 explode; 11 return; 12 left or disappeared.

327 1 visit; 2 inspect or view; 3 investigate the matter further; 4 respect; 5 despises; 6 regarded; 7 call; 8 read or study; 9 expected; 10 improving.

328 1 come back; 2 go on or carry on; 3 pulled down; 4 take off; 5 stay up; 6 staying in; 7 going up; 8 put down; 9 touched down; 10 slowed down.

329 1 leave out; 2 turning in; 3 open out; 4 kept in; 5 put up; 6 stuck in; 7 laid off; 8 hung up or rung off; 9 turned down; 10 looks down on.

330 *1 You must cut down your expenses. 2 We say he picks things up quickly. 3 It would be called off. 4 They'd draw up an agreement. 5 I can't shake this cold off. 6 What have you been up to? 7 Would you bear me out on this? 8 We're expected to pick him out. 9 There isn't enough to go round. 10 It's a well thought out plan. 11 He must pull up; 12 I'll think it over. 13 I'd want to try it out; 14 The mine is worked out.

331 *1 It might have to fall back. 2 He has let us down. 3 The school has broken up (for the holidays). 4 I can't make this out. 5 When you want look a word up. 6 One sets out in good time. 7 They would like to think they are well brought up. 8 They may fall out for a time. 9 The party may break up. 10 He might let him off. 11 The plan might fall through. 12 The one sets off the other.

332 *1 You must fall back on old or existing methods. 2 He would expect the teacher to point it out. 3 It's about time you made up your mind (or made your mind up). 4 The bad weather seems to have set in. 5 It would annoy me if the car broke down. 6 He would make off as quickly as possible. 7 I'd try to bring him round (or to). 8 The circulation has fallen off. 9 It could set up a Royal Commission or a Committee of Inquiry. 10 I'd immediately break off and talk about something else. 11 The possibility cannot be ruled out. 12 We must try to make up for lost time.

333 1 set-back; 2 intake; 3 offshoot; 4 outcry; 5 lay-offs; 6 upkeep; 7 outbreak; 8 break-out; 9 bypass; 10 look-over; 11 outlook; 12 uptake.

334 1 cut-back; 2 breakdown; 3 outlay/lay-out; 4 shake-up; 5 up-turn; 6 upsurge; 7 downfall; 8 take-over/outlets; 9 break-through; 10 change-over; 11 turnover; 12 come-back.

335 1 show-down; 2 stand-by; 3 write-off; 4 drawbacks; 5 blast-off/touch-down; 6 hold-up; 7 come-down; 8 walk-out; 9 look-out; 10 outcome; 11 tie-up; 12 outburst.

336 1 crises ('kraisiz); 2 cargoes/wharves; 3 parents-in-law; 4 gases/buses; 5 indexes; 6 indices; 7 heroes; 8 mice/mousetraps; 9 fungi or funguses; 10 memoranda; 11 phenomena; 12 hypotheses (haɪ'pɒθəsi:z); 13 courts martial; 14 syllabuses (or syllabi) criteria; 15 media; 16 thieves/passers-by; 17 solos; 18 eyewitnesses; 19 alibis; 20 theses ('θi:si:z).

337 1 is making good progress; 2 a risky situation (there had been a narrow margin between safety and disaster); 3 likely to take place; 4 in private, in secret; 5 has been received with great enthusiasm; 6 is severely critical; 7 a subject of dispute or disagreement; 8 a position of the greatest prominence; 9 in better condition/free from troubles or difficulties/troubles associated with early development of a new product; 10 remain neutral, not make up their minds; 11 settled or decided in advance; 12 experiencing financial or trading difficulties; 13 done the right or clever thing; 14 It is very likely.

338 1 living precariously, with never any money to spare; 2 weakened, made less drastic or less far-reaching; 3 a small innovation likely to lead to much larger (and undesirable) ones; 4 a share or financial interest; 5 suffered financial loss; 6 at once, without giving due consideration; 7 criticized or reproved/acting according to his own ideas or opinion; 8 persons doing the same work, in the same position; 9 given only curt and brief attention or consideration; 10 looking beyond what appears on the surface/fully realizing what he was doing; 11 he has done enough fighting, he will retire; 12 compromise; 13 generally known/accept and follow decisions taken collectively; 14 be put into operation.

320 Key to exercises

339 1 This plan fails through indecisiveness to meet the needs of either of two alternative situations. 2 He's pretending to act out of a sense of what is morally right, whereas in fact he is acting under compulsion. 3 Everything was in a muddle. 4 She can't live within her income. 5 I don't believe everything he says—he often exaggerates. 6 He's in a position (socially or at work) for which he is unsuited. 7 They are close partners (generally in some dubious or illegal enterprise). 8 He has nothing to support his opinion or claim. 9 They managed to do it (get there, find it, etc.) before we did. 10 You've drawn the right conclusion, or said exactly the right thing. 11 You should meet the difficulty decisively and with courage. 12 We're all in the same difficult situation. 13 He has already planned several other possibilities for employment. 14 I challenged him to do what he threatened to do (to test whether he really meant it). 15 Let's be quite open about our plans or intentions.

340 For comment or composition. Consult OALDCE for explanations.

341–342 Composition exercises.

343–344 Comprehension and composition exercises.

345–353 Consult OALDCE and Britain—An Official Handbook (HMSO).

354 OHMS, On Her (His) Majesty's Service; YMCA, Young Men's Christian Association; RSPCA, Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; GMT, Greenwich Mean Time; EEC European Economic Community (the Common Market); p.e.f. with effect from; c/o, (used in addressing letters to somebody in the) care of; L., Liberal (in politics); e.g., (Latin exempli gratia) for example; PS., postscript; IOU, I owe you; IBA Independent Broadcasting Authority; BBC, British Broadcasting Corporation; TUC, Trades Union Congress; PTO, please turn over; CID, Criminal Investigation Department; MA, Master of Arts; f.o.b., (commercial use) free on board.

355 VHF very high frequency; RSVP, (French Répondez s'il vous plaît) please reply; No., number (plural Nos.); NHS National Health Service; FRS, Fellow of the Royal Society; AA, Automobile Association; Lab., Labour (in politics); c.i.f., (commercial use) cost, insurance, freight; fig., figure, diagram; s.a.e. stamped addressed envelope; GP, General Practitioner; VIP, very important person; c.v. curriculum vitae (= short written statement of one's education and past employment); Cantab., of Cambridge University; GCE, General Certificate of Education; B.Sc., Bachelor of Science; C., Conservative (in politics); i.e., (Latin id est) that is.

356 VAT; plc; DIY; p.a.; ext.; etc.; GB; approx.; Dr; sec.

357–363 Composition exercises.

Construction of verb forms in English

V = teach, taught V-ing = teaching V-en = taught

	Active	Passive	Present Tenses	Past Tenses	Infinitive After Modal Auxiliary Verbs
Simple	V I teach	be + V-en I am taught	Active I teach he is we are	Active I taught we were	Active [I/M] teach [I/M] be
Progressive	be + V-ing I am teaching	be + being + V-en I am being taught	Active I am teaching he is we are	Active I was teaching we were	Active [I/M] be teaching [I/M] be being taught
Perfect	have + V-en I have taught	have + been + V-en I have been taught	Active I have taught he has we are	Active I had taught we were	Active [I/M] have taught [I/M] be being taught
Perfect Progressive	have + been + V-ing I have been teaching	have + been + being + V-en I have been being taught	Active I have been teaching he has we are	Active I had been teaching we were	Active [I/M] have been teaching [I/M] be being taught

Note: The verb forms given in parenthesis are relatively uncommon in use