Change your home, change your life

What happens when we actually pursue our dreams for our home? If rather than thinking we can't, we believe that we can? It's a question we considered in our recent Life at Home research. And here's what we found.

When we change the way our home works, we can change other things in our life. And that even small changes, like a new wall colour or a different cover for a chair, can make all the difference.

Many of us avoid making updates at home because we fear it will be too expensive, time consuming, or that we simply won't finish. But living spaces need to evolve. When we don't make changes to suit new circumstances, life can feel harder. Allowing your home to be "deliberately unfinished" is a step toward a happier, better life at home. It allows you to design for how you really live right now, as well as for the life you imagine for the future. For example, if a goal is to do more yoga, creating a space for daily practice will have you feeling far more flexible (in more ways than one). Confidence is contagious, so you may just find that as you embrace change at home, it'll get easier to manage other challenges in your life, too.

TILLTALANDE

It means a lot to us

One of many words in Swedish for 'nice', we chose the name TILLTALANDE for a very special collection which we really care about at IKEA. Here's why.

The Syrian refugee crisis has more than 5 million people fleeing their homes, many to neighbouring Jordan. As a quick response, we partnered with the not-for-profit Jordan River Foundation, to collaborate with women artisans, locals working alongside refugees, to produce TILLTALANDE.

Based on traditional arts which have been passed down through generations, these are beautiful products, designed to enhance modern homes.

We're as proud to share these women's work with the world as they are to support their families, empowered by the opportunity of employment. And that's more than nice, in any language.

It's just one of many Social Entrepreneurship programmes we are working on at IKEA. To find out more, visit us at IKEA.co.uk

Home 2

Limited space, unlimited you

Like our fingerprints, our homes are unique to us. And big or small, every home has room to be a clear reflection of personality, of likes, loves and individual lifestyle.

This small flat is alive with colour, pattern and distinctive DIY creations. Centre stage goes to inviting seating, that can double as an incredibly comfy bed. The perfect set-up for shared space, shared time, and perhaps most importantly, shared family fun.

All human life is here, with a sofa by day and a bed by night. Handy bedlinen storage in the footstool makes the switch seamless.

A legend in his own lunchtime

In 1979, IKEA launched the first ever BILLY bookcase, designed by Gillis Lundgren (1929-2016). Just the fourth original IKEA employee, Gillis was the man behind so many great IKEA products and truly innovative ideas. Including the flat-pack. With nothing but a napkin to draw on, he drew his initial sketch of BILLY. Since then, the legendary bookcase system has been subject to almost 40 years of product development. New versions continuously add to the series, but at its heart, BILLY is still the same as when Gillis put pen to paper napkin: functional, flexible, affordable. And timeless.

Boost your mood

There's more to a home than furniture, even though it's a good place to start. Less tangible components, like light and sound, are first-rate mood enhancers that can make the difference between a grey day and a great one.

To help you personalise your lighting, we've created an expandable range, made up of smart LED bulbs and panels. At the heart of the system is the TRÅDFRI gateway that allows you to control your light using a free app. The latest function, developed thanks to third-party integration, enables managing the lights via external voice steering devices. So just speak up and you can change the mood of the room.

And this is just the beginning. We plan to add even more new functions and features to our smart home solutions, which means that the gateway you already own has the potential to get even smarter.

Debunking the myth of minimalism

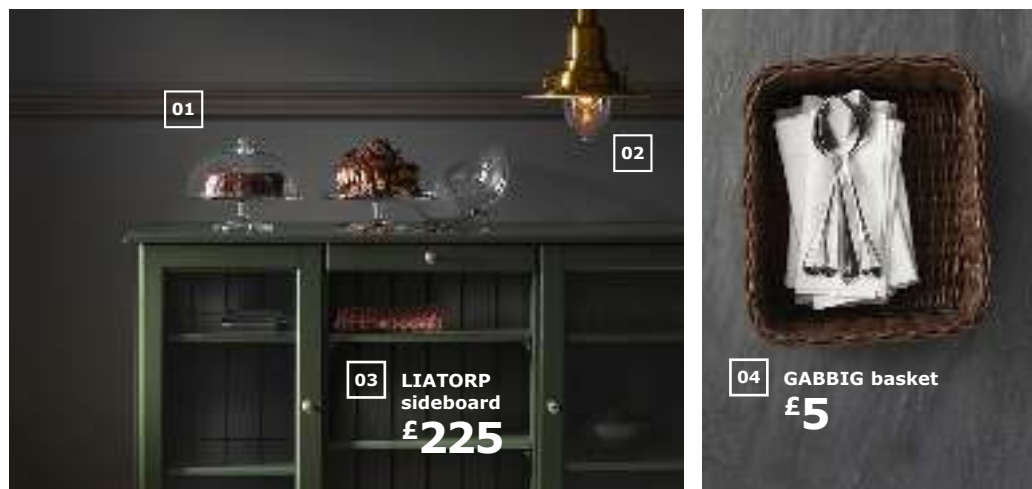

Is having too much stuff stressing you out? You're not alone. Our Life at Home Report shows that it's the single biggest cause of stress at home.

But paring down possessions too radically might actually cause people more anxiety than relief. Belongings represent memories and dreams. Hang on to that guitar, and you hold on to the hope of making it to rock-star status. (Some day.)

Things that are emotionally meaningful to us, even if they're not entirely useful or practical, bring us happiness. So rather than just going minimal and throwing things out, first it's helpful to try prioritising, along with storage solutions.

Professor Russell Belk, a leading expert in the meaning of possessions, tells us that this is a healthier behaviour than letting things go too hastily. First, we can try temporarily living without them. It helps us reconsider, and only move on when we feel ready. Maybe in a year or two. (Or in the case of that guitar, maybe never.)

Blow your own trumpet

Welcome to a home that's just jam-packed with personality. One that showcases many a carefully chosen treasure, which combine to say, "We're proud of who we are." A tall stack of shiny top hats, or the slightly faded glory of an old jazz trumpet. A vintage metal typewriter that still works, box cameras that sadly don't, but they're lovely, all the same.

To say that there's plenty to discover here is an understatement. But every inch of this vibrant flat is well thought-out, filled with meaning and memories. All it takes is clever organising and displaying. It's your story. Tell it like it is.

"The idea behind LISABO was to create a table with the distinct feeling of wood, a floating expression and durable, easy to assemble construction. The matte lacquer and slanted edges give it a natural, handcrafted look."

Positive thinking

We love wood. It's beautiful, durable, tactile, renewable and recyclable. We use lots of it, so our forestry practices simply have to be spot on. And due to our volume of production, we're in a position to make a real difference. Here's how we're making it happen. We have a key objective of being "forest positive" by 2020, meaning that we're committed to the growth of more wood than we use to make our products. This allows us to help make more sustainably sourced wood available to others, and create sustainability in the industry beyond just our own production needs. Working with WWF since 2002, we have helped increase FSC-certified forests by around 35 million hectares. That's an area about the size of Germany. And we're more than three quarters of the way to the use of only FSC-certified or recycled wood, working quickly towards our goal of 100%. You can read more about it at IKEA.co.uk

An extendable table suits a growing family (plus guests). EKEDALEN also has a durable, scratch-resistant surface, ready for everything family life throws at it.

In our restaurants, we aim to offer tasty, wallet friendly meals that are good for both you and the planet. That's why we create sustainable, organic, and nutritious options for you to choose from. Take this salmon dish, for example. It's sourced from ASC-certified farms that follow strict and responsible farming standards. The end result? Less impact on the environment and a better dish for you, bursting with flavours of the sea and mild fennel.

If you love the meal you had in the restaurant, pop into the IKEA Swedish Food Market on your way out of the store. You'll find lots of tasty Swedish-inspired food products, including that tasty salmon. That way you can enjoy it all over again another day. Remember to visit to the IKEA Bistro first, for a quick bite before heading home.

Sustainability? It's in the bag

Can the common sarnie help save the world? We're excited to offer a new alternative to the same old plastic zipper bag. ISTAD is our version, based on renewable materials from the sugar cane industry. The shift to renewables for this item alone is expected to save about 75,000 barrels of oil, and supports our sustainability efforts, while also significantly reducing CO2 levels. And although plastic from renewable materials costs more to produce than conventional plastic, it won't show on our price tag. That's because we believe that everyone, not just a few, should be able to afford to make more sustainable choices.

Home 5

Full house

The kids have nabbed the table for a spot of model-making. Someone else wants a game of hopscotch, or to just have a rest while mum enjoys a quiet read. With a busy family, it's all about creating space. Space for yourself, and space to be together, often at the same time (and in the same room).

In this activity-packed home, you'll find lots of solutions for inclusive living, because family life is often up close, always personal.

Play it safe

When kids are getting creative anything can happen, from a self-portrait scribbled on a bedroom wall, to a little nibble on a particularly delicious-looking blue crayon. But have no fear, because our MÅLA series of art supplies are designed to be super safe and easy to use, so nothing stands in the way of play. They are washable with soap and warm water, and of course, non-toxic. We recheck them at least once every year in accredited lab facilities to ensure that we are meeting safety requirements. So no matter how wild the miniature artists-in-residence at your home get while creating their next masterpiece, you'll know the colours they're using are as safe as they are bright and beautiful.

Keeping an open mind

Shared space means shared interests. Well, perhaps not all of the time. Put simply, living happily together requires a flexible attitude. And that applies to your furnishings, too.

Cosy seating that you can arrange just the way you want to, depending on the mood and the moment. Someone can watch their movie while you check out your likes. Do something together, or maybe just do your own thing for a while? With sofas that also become comfy beds, you'll be able to keep your options open, 24/7.

Sleep is not a luxury

In fact, it's a biological imperative. But the non-stop nature of modern life today can make it feel like a bit of an indulgence. So much to do, so many emails to check before bed? Power down, and prioritise the quantity and quality of sleep you are getting each night. There's no better way to energise your days and enjoy life to the full.

Senior professor and sleep scientist Torbjörn Åkerstedt shares two simple tips to help make the dream of good sleep come true.

Count down to a slow-down. Sixteen hours after your usual wake-up time is an optimum bedtime guideline. Start slowing down about two hours ahead, avoiding work and screens.

Set it and forget it. Use an alarm clock instead of your phone. Set it, turn it to face away from you, and don't check it if you wake in the night. That will just stress you out, making it harder to get back to sleep. Just ignore it till it rings.

Sweet dreams!

Simple steps to a safer home

We all want to live in a safe environment, yet we don't always think about potential risks we may run in our own homes. Taking steps to improve home safety can be as easy as installing smoke detectors and keeping an eye out for the possibility of furniture tipping over. This is especially true if you are living with small children, who by nature are inquisitive and creative in how they explore the world. Did you know that furniture taller than 75cm should be attached to the wall to avoid the risk of it toppling? Take a few minutes to walk through your home today and ensure your furniture is secured properly. And if you need an anchoring kit, stop by any IKEA store or order one online, for free.

Spacious storage for everything from gaming accessories to remotes.

This bed makes the most of your space by providing storage in its headboard.

A combination of open and closed shelving gives you the option to show things off, or not.

What's the big idea?

Small space living has its challenges. Like what to do with a bulky winter coat, seven pairs of (favourite) trainers, and any other must-haves that make it a functional but cosy space you can call home? In this case, one measuring just 16 square metres.

Floor-to-ceiling storage and versatile design mean everything fits in nicely. So however small your space, we've got bright ideas to make it seem a whole lot bigger for you.

Maximise space by optimising storage. With a whole wall dedicated to your things, you're sorted. (Just add a stepladder.)

Taming of the screw

We've developed PLATSA. It's a neat storage system that snaps together with our tool-free wedge dowel construction, making it easy to assemble, and just as simple to take apart when you want to make a change.

It's a modular design that you can fit in just about anywhere, solving the problems of small space living by making use of every inch of space.

Make it low in the hallway, and high in the living room for now. Or with doors in the bedroom, and reuse for the hallway in your next place. Fit it into the space you have available, awkward areas included, such as under sloping ceilings or below stairs.

PLATSA can be added to and easily reconfigured over time, as needs change or you move home.

And thanks to a clever production process, as well as being one of our most flexible systems, it's also one of the most affordable.

The age of enlightenment

A monochrome white background, pale wood, open shelving and some transparent storage. It's not rocket science, it's a simple formula for a calming, uncluttered, easier home. Discover the new tidy you, at IKEA.

IKEA® Foundation

All children deserve a safe and secure future

Families living in poverty are especially vulnerable to climate change and other devastating events. That is why the IKEA Foundation* supports programmes that help families lift themselves out of poverty and fight the impacts of a changing climate.

By helping women and young people build their knowledge, skills and confidence, the IKEA Foundation's partners give them the tools they need to earn a sustainable income and provide for their families.

And, since it is hard for people to lift themselves out of poverty unless they have reliable energy sources, the IKEA Foundation funds projects that provide communities with clean, renewable energy.

This way, the IKEA Foundation not only gives families the means to change their lives for the better, but also helps them survive and recover more quickly when disasters strike.
