This year, we wanted to celebrate how differently we all live. To do that, we created seven homes, each with its own story to tell. From a 52-square-foot apartment to a home totally dedicated to eco-friendly choices, they can inspire a better everyday life at home, no matter how you live. We hope so at least.

In addition, we also give you lots of new products and fresh ideas. The best part? It's all affordable and easy to apply to that place you love calling home.

Home #1

Haven in the city

Ever felt the urge to leave the busy world behind – to switch off and breathe – even if just for a bit? You're not alone. To make it happen can seem tricky, but it doesn't have to be.

Step into a home where a peek down the hallway and into the living room is enough to feel your shoulders drop. Closed storage, an oh-so-soft sofa and a calm backdrop of light woods, soft hues and an abundance of textiles, make this the perfect place for recharging.

Change your home, change your life

What can happen when we pursue our dreams for our homes without worry, rather than stopping ourselves before we start? We examined that question in our recent Life at Home research and found an answer: we begin to change our lives. Really. And, even small dreams, like a new wall color or recovering a chair, count.

Many of us avoid making updates at home because we fear that it will be too expensive, time consuming, or that we simply won't finish. But living spaces need to evolve; when we don't make changes to suit new circumstances, life can feel harder. Allowing your home to be "deliberately unfinished" is a step toward a happier, better life at home. It allows you to design for how you really live right now – as well as for the life you can imagine. For example, if a goal is to do more yoga, creating a space for daily practice will have you feeling far more flexible (in more ways than one!) Confidence is contagious, so you just may find that as you embrace change at home it'll get easier to manage other challenges in your life, too.

TILLTALANDE - Designed to create jobs

One of the most powerful forces for positive change starts with an opportunity: the offer of a job. The Syrian refugee crisis has more than 5 million people fleeing their home, many to neighboring Jordan. As a quick response, we partnered with the non-profit Jordan River Foundation to collaborate with women artisans, locals alongside the refugees, to create the handcrafted TILLTALANDE collection.

It is based on traditional arts which have been passed down through generations, now made into beautiful products that enhance modern homes. We're as proud to share these women's work with the world as they are to support their families, as they become empowered through employment.

It's just one of many Social Entrepreneurship programs we are working on at IKEA; to find out more visit IKEA-USA.com/peopleandplanet.

From Gillis' napkin to your home

In 1979, IKEA launched the first ever BILLY bookcase, designed by Gillis Lundgren (1929-2016). More than employee number four, Gillis was the man behind lots of great IKEA products and innovations (not least the idea of the flat pack).

He drew the original BILLY sketch on a napkin, on the spur of the moment. Since then the bookcase system has been subject to almost 40 years of product development. New versions continuously add to the series, but at the end of the day BILLY is still the same as when Gillis once put the pen to that napkin of his: functional, flexible, affordable and timeless.

Boost your mood

There's more to a home than furniture (even if it's a good place to start). Less tangible components, like light and sound, are first-rate mood boosters that can make the difference between a gray Monday and a great one.

To help you personalize your lighting, we've created an expandable range made up of smart LED bulbs and panels. At the heart of the system is the TRÅDFRI gateway that allows you to control your light using a free app. The latest function, coming true thanks to third-party integration, enables controlling the lights via external voice steering devices. So, just speak up and change the mood of the room.

And this is just the beginning. We plan to add even more new functions and features to our smart home solutions, which means that the gateway you already own has the potential to get even smarter.

The myth of minimalism

Are you stressed out by your stuff? You're not alone. Our Life at Home Report shows that having "too much stuff" is the single biggest cause of stress at home. But paring down too much actually might cause more anxiety than relief. We're supposed to want to live with fewer things, but our belongings represent our memories, hopes and dreams. (Does selling that guitar mean you're admitting that you'll really never be a musician?)

The items that are emotionally meaningful to us, even if they aren't practical, do bring us happiness. So, it's helpful to think about prioritizing and using storage solutions rather than just minimizing and tossing things out. Professor Russell Belk, a leading expert in the meaning of possessions, tells us that this is about a healthier behavior than immediately letting things go. We can temporarily try out living without them, which helps us reconsider and only move on when we feel ready – in a year or two, or, in the case of that guitar, never!

Where more is more

Welcome to a home jam-packed with carefully selected finds. Treasures like the stack of top hats (from the favorite flea-market) and the lucky badminton shuttle in a bell jar, all tell their unique story of the couple living here.

To say that there's plenty to discover is an understatement, still every inch of this vibrant apartment is well thought-out. The recipe for success? Clever ways of storing, organizing and – above all – displaying.

Knut Hagberg & Marianne Hagberg, Designers

"The idea behind LISABO was to create a table with the distinct feeling of wood, a floating expression and durable, easy to assemble construction. The matte lacquer and slanted edges give it a natural, handcrafted look."

Now you can make an earth-friendly choice sitting down. The ODGER chair is 30 percent wood, a renewable source, and at least 55 percent of its remaining materials are recycled plastic.

Pacing toward forest positive

We love wood. It's beautiful, durable, renewable, recyclable and we use lots of it, so our forestry practices simply must be extra good. Due to our volume of production, we're in a position to make a real difference.

Here's how we're making it happen: We have a bold goal of being "forest positive" by 2020 – meaning we're committed to the growth of more wood than we use for our own products. This allows us to help make more sustainably sourced wood available to others and create sustainability in the industry beyond just our own needs. Working long-term with partners, we have helped increase FSC®-certified forests by around 35 million hectares (about the size of Germany). And, we're more than three quarters of the way to the use of only FSC®-certified or recycled wood, pacing quickly toward our goal of 100%.

06 Veggie balls with tomato, spinach ragout
and ancient grains
$3.99

In our restaurants, we aim to offer wallet friendly, affordable meals that are good for both you and the planet. That's why we create sustainable and nutritious options for you to choose from. Take this veggie ball dish, for example. Our veggie balls are made with nutrient-dense ingredients like chickpeas, green peas, carrots, kale, and more. Not to mention that their carbon footprint is about 15 times less than that of meatballs. The end result? A softer impact on the environment and a better dish for you, bursting with fresh and comforting flavors.

Made from tempered heat-resistant glass, they work just as well for hot tea as they do for iced.

A greener lunch is in the bag

Can you help save the world while packing your lunch? We're excited to offer a new alternative to the same old plastic zipper bag. ISTAD is our version, based on renewable materials from the sugar cane industry. The shift to renewables for this item alone is expected to save about 75,000 barrels of oil and supports our sustainability efforts while significantly reducing CO<sub>2</sub> levels. And although plastic from renewable materials costs more to produce than conventional plastic, it won't show on the price tag. That's because we believe that everyone, not just a few, should be able to afford to make more sustainable choices.

Full house

The baby needs to be fed, the kids want to paint, the teen craves privacy and the parents want to read (but really should be catching up on work). When you're a big family, it's all about creating space. Space for yourself and space to be together, often at the same time (and in the same room).

In this activity-packed home, you'll find lots of smart solutions for inclusive living, sharing and caring. For a family that's always close, even when they're doing their own thing.

Play it safe

When kids are getting creative anything can happen, from a self-portrait scribbled on a bedroom wall to a little nibble on a particularly delicious-looking blue crayon. But never fear, because our MÅLA series of art supplies are designed to be super safe and easy-to-use so nothing stands in the way of play. They are washable with soap and warm water and, of course, non-toxic. We recheck them at least once every year in accredited lab facilities to ensure that we are meeting safety requirements. So, no matter how wild the miniature artists-in-residence at your home get while creating their next masterpiece, you'll know the colors they're using are as safe as they are bright and beautiful.

Open up to change

Life has at least one constant – change. Big choices, new interests, the latest apps. In this home, change is comfort and choice.

Lots of flexible, multifunctional furniture and solutions let everyone do what they want. The idea is to make it as easy as possible to spend time together and connect (yep, even on a screen sometimes). Because moments with loved ones matter. That never changes.

Is sleep the new status symbol?

Sleep shouldn't be a luxury, but the go-go-go nature of life today can make it feel like a rare commodity. And it is valuable; sleep quality makes a big difference in how we roll with whatever the day throws at us.

Senior professor and sleep scientist, Torbjörn Åkerstedt, shares three simple things to help make the dream of good sleep a reality.

Countdown to a slowdown. Sixteen hours after your usual wake-up time is an optimum bedtime guideline. Start slowing down about two hours ahead; avoiding work and screens.

Chill out. 59-63 degrees is just right for sleeping.

Set it and forget it. Use an alarm clock instead of your phone. Set it, turn it around and don't check it if you wake in the night – it'll just stress you out, making it harder to get back to sleep.

Sweet dreams!

10 minutes to a safer home

We all want to live in an environment that is safe, yet we don't often think about the potential risks we may have in our homes. Taking steps to improve home safety can be as simple as installing smoke detectors and keeping an eye out for the potential risk of furniture tipping over. This is especially true if you are living with small children, who by nature are curious and creative in how they explore the world. Did you know that furniture taller than 29½ inches must be attached to the wall to prevent tip-over risk? Take a few minutes to walk through your home today and ensure your furniture is secured properly. If you are missing an anchoring kit, stop by any IKEA store or order one online for free.

Roomy drawers make space for everything from gaming accessories to remotes.

This bed makes the most of your space by providing storage in its headboard.

A combination of open and closed shelving gives you the option to show things off—or not.

IKEA® Foundation

All children deserve a safe and secure future

Families living in poverty are especially vulnerable to climate change and other devastating events. That is why the IKEA Foundation* supports programs that help families lift themselves out of poverty and fight the impacts of a changing climate.

By helping women and young people build their knowledge, skills and confidence, the IKEA Foundation's partners give them the tools they need to earn a sustainable income and provide for their families.

And, because it is hard for people to lift themselves out of poverty unless they have reliable energy sources, the IKEA Foundation funds projects that provide communities with clean, renewable energy.

This way, the IKEA Foundation not only gives families the means to change their lives for the better but also helps them survive and recover more quickly when disasters strike.
